Three-Minute Journey to:

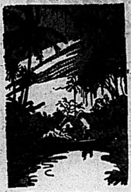
ECUADOR:

A New Lure for Traveler

By TEMPLE MANNING

WE HOPE that your travels will some day take you to Ecuador—the Land of the Equator. The smallest of the West Coast republics of South America, it is perhaps the biggest in scenic marvels. For centuries Ecuador has lured the adventurer and the explorer; now it is beginning to lure the traveller who seeks adventure in the way of new surroundings. From the Pacific coastal plain, the land rises abruptly to form the western slope of the Andes, making the terrain a land of scenic contrasts. Giant peaks, including the famous Chimbarazo and Cotopaxi, reach heights of 20,000 feet. On the other side of the Andes, at the headwaters of the mighty Amazon, stretches a well-watered plain, practically undeveloped—a vast wilderness in which dwell Indians who have never seen a white man. It is a land of mystery, believed to be a treasure house of both natural resources and archeological treasures. Leading museums have expeditions already there, and other expeditions are under way.

Resembles Congo Country



River Scene, Ecuador

Guayaquil, the chief port of Ecuador, is situated about thirty miles from the Gulf of Guayaquil on the Guayas River. The voyage up the river to the city can be likened to travel through the Congo in jungle growth, dotted with the stilted thatched huts of the natives.

The river itself is interesting. The channel is animated with every type of watercraft—balsa rafts roofed over with leaves, and steam launches of incredibly ancient vintage. There are primitive barges heaped with produce; other barges filled with household goods. There are rickety rowboats and in contrast, magnificent steamers. About half way along the course there is Puna Island, one of the last strongholds of the Indians against the Conquistadores.

Everyone at Waterfront

On reaching the Guayaquil waterfront, it seems as though the entire population of the city is on hand, working or just loitering. There are modern warehouses and a really imposing Customs House, modern and beautiful. The Malecon the thoroughfare that lines the riverfront, is all that a waterfront drive should be. Clustered near the Customs House are the State Buildings and the City Hall, pretentious buildings all set in a pretty park. Leading from the park is the main boulevard, a street lined with friendly sidewalk cafes and stores nestling in the cool shadow of old porticos. Back from the business section of Guayaquil, set in tree-shaded gardens, are beautiful residences. And in the old section there are fantastic two-story houses fashioned of bamboo with wide second-floor balconies overhanging the narrow, cobbled lanes.

Huffs Island

Huff's Island—The Vestry meeting of the church of the Good Shepherd was held Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. T. Nightingale with a fair attendance. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. E. N. Grant after which the financial report was read and approved.

It showed that all obligations had been met and a surplus on hand to start the New Year. The officers of the church remained the same as last year—Mr. T. Nightingale, people's warden, Mr. J. Hatfield, rector's warden, Miss F. Wallbridge, vestry clerk and Miss M. Wallbridge, organist. Mr. R. Andeson was chosen to be the delegate to the Synod. Plans were discussed for future activities after which the meeting was closed with prayer. Refreshments were served by the ladies and a social half hour enjoyed. Mr. J. Hatfield moved a vote of thanks to the host and hostess for opening their home for the meeting.

Mrs. J. Barber, Belleville and Mrs. S. Barber Mountain View were callers on Mrs. W. Black on Thursday.

Miss E. Young spent Sunday with Miss F. Wallbridge.

Miss Betra Fairman is attending Winter School in Belleville—a delegate from the Mountain View-Huff's Island Y.P.U.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Green, Belleville, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Wallbridge.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Asked Directions to Her House, But Did Not Come

Dear Miss Fairfax,

I'm 19 years old and don't have many dates, because the ones who ask me I don't want and the ones I'd like, don't ask me. I'm very much interested in a young man who is a senior in college, lives in a small town near me. We live on a large farm. He seems to like me and goes out of his way to say "hello" when we happen to be at the same place. In fact, he spotted me in a crowd one day at the Christmas Bazaar and came over to ask directions to my house, saying he was coming over. But he never came.

I don't dance, but I can play cards. I like to read a great deal. Do you think, if I'd write him for a special time to play cards, that he would think me forward? Or should I forget him?

Lonely

It would be a very good idea to invite him over for cards or Sunday night supper, or some little entertainment that would include other young people. As he asked the way to your home, he couldn't possibly think you were forward in inviting him. Doubtless, the Bazaar and all the goings-on gave him a sort of courage, which he lacks when he returns to everyday life. Invite him, by all means.

She Yearns For the Love of a Younger Man

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married for nine years to a man twenty years older than I. After going with him off and on for two years, he persuaded me to marry him. We haven't accomplished much, and now he has aged so much that he gets on my nerves. I find myself yearning for a younger companion.

I would have left him long ago, but I know he loves me devotedly, and while he is good to me most of the time, he has been very disrespectful in many ways. He isn't very healthy right now, as his work is hard, and I don't want to cause him to become mentally ill. He is the type who takes things to heart.

Perhaps I shouldn't feel this way, but I'm only 29, and as I've never really loved this man, but married him more for respect, I do want to be happy. Do you think I ought to make the best of it?

Mrs. C. H. H.

Don't we all want to be happy, my dear? That cry is not at all unusual. Sometimes it's a job, sometimes security for old age, sometimes recognition of a talent we are convinced we have, and sometimes, like you, it's love. And again the longing is for friendship with someone of our own age. But everyone wants to be happy.

You see this situation so clearly yourself—your husband is older by twenty years than you are, he isn't well—that I don't believe you'd be happy if you left him in the expectation of finding your problem solved.

The prime remedy for unhappiness is to fill one's life so full of interests that one hasn't time for discontent.

He's Afraid Her Conversation Might Be Dull, if She Quits Her Job After Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax,

The girl I'm very much in love with has an interesting job, which she holds because she's clever and not because she has to work. She has the old-fashioned idea that when a girl marries she ought to give up outside work and confine herself to the home and social activities.

I'm coming to you for the benefit of your wisdom and advice. I think that if she gives up this job, she will be less interesting to me, and less attractive. Although I'm well able to take care of her and all financial matters that may arise, I feel that she should continue her work after we are married, and think it will be better for both of us. What do you think?

Anxious

Other men have held the same ideas that you do about employed wives. Unconsciously, perhaps, the interesting qualities of their helpmates centre around the weekly pay envelope. Very often these times it's necessary for a wife to go out and hustle to bring home the family bacon. But if it's not necessary, why take the job from some other woman who really needs it?

The perfect home is blessed with children, and as you tell me you are "well able to take care of all financial matters that may arise," I sincerely hope your wife may have domestic, rather than professional, interests to engage her attention for the next few years, at least.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Co-operate With Your Hostess

It is a definite rule of etiquette that the hostess does not finish eating a course before the last guest has finished eating that course. She must at least appear to be eating so long as any one at table is eating—even, as very often happens, she lingers and lingers over one last piece of food on her plate.

Knowing this rule, we must, as polite guests, co-operate with our hostess. That is, we must not hurry through the course so that we sit awkwardly while the other guests are eating, for this may give the impression that we consider the service too slow. On the other hand, we must not be oblivious to the general tempo of the course, dawdle with our food, or get so engrossed in talking that everyone else at table is finished before we are. It is easy to keep a weather eye out to see what we should be doing about our "timing".

Condolence Call

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My husband and I called at a home where the husband has just passed away. Since my husband and I were unable to go to the funeral, we went the day before the funeral, to offer our sympathy.

As we were leaving I explained that we could not come to the funeral and had, therefore, called that day to offer our sympathy. My husband thinks that I should not have said that. What is your opinion, Mrs. Beeckman?

Also, I did not ask if there were anything that I could do to help. Later I thought that I should have made this offer.

We have known this family for several years, but they are not close friends of ours .They are very particular about good manners, and I too am very anxious to know if I did the right thing.

I think, dear lady, that you are being unnecessarily worried about the thing you did say and the offer you didn't make.

Now I don't believe that your husband was very serious when he suggested that you shouldn't have said that it wouldn't be possible for you and him to go to the funeral. What he probably meant to say was that you needn't have said this, but I can see no reason why you should not have said it. The important point was that you and your husband were doing just what you should have done. . . .gone to offer your sympathy to these friends.

Also, although it would have indeed been a thoughtful thing for you to have asked if you could be of any help, this offer was not absolutely necessary since these friends are not close friends.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

BURNS

I have already discussed dangers that attend burns and the three periods that follow them—shock, toxemia, and infection. But I feel impelled to come back to the subject because I have seen so many small burns in children which were treated by parents as trifling and which had serious consequences.

I always advise calling a doctor as soon as the burn occurs' If you do that the physician will see in the youngster the stage of pain and shock that immediately follows the accident. In this period, the child is pale and drowsy with a weak, thready pulse and a low blood pressure. In this period, it is quite possible for the child to sink into a coma and die. However, if your doctor is there, he will know what to do to save the child's life.

In case of bad burns, I always try and get the patient to the nearest hospital with as little delay as possible. The reason for this will become evident later on in this discussion. In the meantime, while getting the child to the hospital, I always give a strong sedative so he will sleep, and I surround the body with hot water bottles or heat of some sort to temper the shock. That may sound odd: Applying heat to burns, but its correct.

When the child arrives at the hospital, he will be given an anaesthetic, of if he is too weakened for that, a strong sedative is administered. When this has begun to work, and the child is sleeping, or quiet, then comes the delicate and difficult job of cleansing the burn. For this, the child will be placed on an operating table, and the burned area exposed.

The surgeon in charge will then break any blobs or blisters which have formed on the burn and then he will clease the whole area with gasoline soaked on a sterile bit of gauze. This cleansing must be thorough, and so the physician will scrub and scrub at the burn to be sure that all the burned tissues are removed. When it is certain that the wound is cleansed of all dead skin and flesh, the child is placed in what we call a burn-bed.

This burn-bed is only a large cot with a frame-work over it so that blankets can be draped over it to keep the child covered without touching him. He lies on a sterile sheet.

With the sides and top covered in as I have described, the patient is lying in an enclosed space about five feet long and three or four feet in width and height. Inside this space near the top, is a frame to hold a series of electric light bulbs. These are lit and a sufficient number kept burning to maintain the temperature inside the frame at between 85 and 95 degrees.

Of course, in practise out in a country district such as mine, hospitals often are inaccessible or weather conditions prevent removals of patients. It is in such district that a great many serious burn cases occur, due to the prevalence of oil lamps, open fires, clothes boiling, etc. The doctor has to do a lot of improvising. I wish you cold have seen some of the makeshift burn-beds I have had to construct or supervise the construction of in my time. I've made them out of hay wire, out of fence wire, and out of barrel hoops. I remember once taking the hoops off a large wine cask to build one. There was no electicity to heat them with, of course, and we had to use hot water bottles, if there were any, or sealers full of hot water, or hot bricks and stones.

It has very often happened that I wasn't called in to attend a burned child until the injury was already in its second stage—toxemia. Settlers up in this country, many of whom live in lonely cabins miles from town, are used to roughing it. When a child is burned, they apply home remedies, and may not call a doctor until the child is very sick, for calling the doctor means a long trip, often over bad roads in severe cold, to a telephone. Consequently when the doctor arrives the child is already in the stage that often calls for blood transfusions and performing these under conditions prevailing in these frontier homes isn't easy.

Madoc

Madoc—The monthly meeting of the Madoc Women's Institute was held in the auditorium of the High School on Friday evening. The president Mrs. B. B. Tanner presided, and the meeting was opened with the singing of the Institute Ode. Community singing was then enjoyed for a period. After reading and disposing of minutes the roll call "Current Events by each member" was answered showing 26 members and 24 visitors present.

The February meeting is entirely of a social nature. Members are asked to invite their husbands and one other friend and a real good time is expected.

A committee namely Mesdames, McCoy, Bonney, McCarey and Hart was named to look after tables, prizes, etc.

The program for the meeting was prepared by teachers of the High School and under the direction of Miss West, Gym dances were beautifully demonstrated by junior and senior girls. The new gym uniform added greatly to the dances and the whole effect was very pleasing and entertaining. A vocal solo in French was sung by Miss Sadie Tumelty and following this Audrey Smith and Betty Phillips played a piano and guitar duet.

The program in full was much enjoyed by those present and a motion of appreciation was extended the teachers and acknowledged by Miss West. The meeting closed with the National Anthem and lunch was served upstairs to the guests.

George Carr, 81, Knits Socks for Red Cross Society

West Huntingdon—Nearly all the citizens here are anxious to do their bit in helping to win the war. Some might say: "I am too young" while others could very well use the excuse or reason, I am too old." But residents are proud to say that one "young" gentleman, Mr. Geo. Carr,is always willing to do his share.

So he has given his services to the local Red Cross Society by knitting socks for the soldiers.

Mr. Carr recently celebrated his 81st birthday and is hale and hearty. He enjoys the pleasant pastime of knitting. He has already knitted gloves, socks and etc. this winter.

The oft repeated saying "give us the old fashioned days again", has been granted as far as Old Man Winter is concerned, for during the past ten days citizens here have witnessed some real winter days both in the intensity of cold and the force of the blizzards. Fortunately there has been no serious illness and there is no food shortage. The attendance at both churches on Sunday was good.

St. Andrew's W. M. S.

Mrs. Harry Thompson entertained the members of the St. Andrew's W. M. S. on Thursday for their regular monthy meeting. Interesting and inspiring readings were given by Mrs. Don Haggerty. Mrs. Gardener Welsh "Every Day Religion" and Mrs. William Shaw "Sincerity." Mrs. Milton Shaw and Mrs. Morley Haggerty gave a duet.

In the business period much discussion on the work of the organization took place. It was decided to hold a pot luck dinner at each meeting. The Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting. Proceeds of dinner 5.00.

What You Can Do for Hair

By HELEN FOLLETT

THIN SOFT, silky hair is a trial to many a woman. When she says she can't do anything with, she is speaking the gospel truth. Each shaft clings to its neighbor. At the temples the scalp shows through. If she can sport half a dozen skinny little rolls along the nape line, she is doing well.

We have a few suggestions that will be of help. Let her abandon the finger wave that slaps her tresses tight to her head. When the hair is shampooed, it should be dried before the setting lotion is applied; her brain mop will appear thicker, more luxuriant, and will not be so likely to be stringy in a few days.

The lotion can be applied to the ends, the ends rolled on metal curlers, to be combed out into ringlets. When the hair is thin at the sides, it is advisable to have pin curls; small metal curlers will produce only a fuzz, no pattern.

If the hair is short, it can be combed out to fly free after the fashion of the cherub arrangement or the pineapple bob. Shoulder-length bob doesn't look very well when the mop is sparse. However, there can be no set rules. Putting the coiffure to bed in a wave cap is a help when locks are inclined to lose their curls in a few days.

A hot oil treatment and a brisk friction of the scalp the night before the shampoo encourages new fuzzers to appear.

At night after the coloring is removed, apply white vaseline, which doesn't taste as horrid as does cold cream, which is scented. Smooth in the oil with the finger-tips, keeping the lips stretched so it can be worked into the tiny creases. Or, if you like, you can use a white lipstick which is sold for this purpose.

It is better to remove lip rouge with cream than to use soap and water which may make the sensitive flesh rough of surface.

No Child Prodigies Wanted In Quest for Musical Talent

Director of Artists Foundation Says Precocious Children Lack Emotional Experience

INSULT TO AUDIENCES

Chicago, Jan. 25 (AP)—Describing concert performances by child prodigies as 'uncivilized and insulting to intelligent audiences", Normal Alexandroff, director of the recently organized artists foundation, said today that children would not be considered in the foundation's quest for exceptional musical talent.

Launched by a group of educationists to give young musicians a chance to make the grade on the concert stage without the cost of a debut, the foundation, in less than two months has widened its scope to include the representation of 28 United States colleges and universities on the advisory board.

"At least 20 per cent of the many applications received daily from all parts of the country have been from parents of prodigies," Alexandroff said. "Our search, however, is for genuine artists who are ready for the public but are unable to finance their careers. We draw an emphatic line against child prodigies .

"If the world's civilized progress may be rightly calculated by the advancement of the arts and sciences, then public performances by child prodigies are certainly uncivilized.

"A child may be capable of playing one note after the other with amazing precision, but that has nothing to do with musical expression. How can a child discuss human emotions and profound world problems in the language of music any more intelligently than in any other language? You can no more expect a child of twelve really to play Beethoven than you can expect him to write a Tolstoy novel. It just doesn't make sense. And for an adience to be asked to listen to such musical prattle is insulting."

COBBLERS BEATEN BY NORWOOD 6-1

Foxboro, Jan. 25 (Special)—Banging home five goals in the last two stanzas, the fast-stepping Norwood sextette scored a rather easy victory over a patched-up squad of Bata pucksters, when they trounced the "Shoemakers" 6-1 in a regular scheduled Trent Valley fixture played in the Frankford arena last night.

With three of their regular defencemen, Stojan, Guay and Coach Brydon on the sidelines due to injuries or sickness, and also playing without the services of Harold Foster, out with an injured knee, the Bata lads proved no match for their northern rivals and after holding practically even for the first twenty minutes faded rather towards the end, although the score is by no means a fair indication of the play. Glaringly minus any serious attempt at combination, the homesters saw their attacks end rather suddenly at the blue, when they met the opposing defence, while on the other hand the Norwood lads waltzed right through the weakened defence and Rogers was called upon to stop the proverbial million as rubber rained at him from every direction. During the closing minutes Bata sent in five man attacks and rather dominated the play but McMasters, in the nets for the northern lads, had rabbits' feet or something and they did everything but put it in the net.

Bata Carries Play

Bata opened with a rush and had the Norwood lads all bottled up in their end of the rink as the game got under way, while Rogers had rather an easy time of it in the "Cobblers" nets as the "Norwooders" seemed content to have the play carried to them. When the opportunity presented itself, however, they launched out on concerted four man sorties and were rewarded, when one of their power plays clicked as O'Leary took Brady's pass to beat Rogers for the only score of the period.

Norwood began to take the offensive in the second period and as the play warmed up a lot of woodchopping tactics crept in. Hill and Puffer combined to make the score 2-0 at about the half way mark and as Frankford pressed, Richardson was chased for tripping. Foster followed him almost immediately for the same offense and they had just returned to the ice when Lawrence got a rest in the cooler. While Bata was short-handed Norwood took advantage to add to their total with Brady scoring on a solo effort to make it 3-0.

Bata pressed hard in the final stanza to avert a shutout but their efforts backfired when Aboud broke away to score with Puffer duplicating his feat just a moment later. Bata broke the ice at the eighteen minute mark as Dore finally shoved the puck past McMasters on a passout from Mayette, but while they were gunning for another, Rogers finished off the scoring as he turned the tables and beat his namesake at the other end of the rink.

The teams:

Frankford: goal, Rogers; defence, Dore and Lawrence; centre, Reid; wings, Mayette and Foster; alternates, Pollard, Spencer, McDonald, Rose and Radcliffe.

Referees: Innis and Finnegan.

Interlude

ROBERT McLAUGHLIN

Eddie saw them when he turned the corner and quick anger bubbled inside of him.

Betty was leaning back against a lamp post, her slim hands behind her. Leaning over her, braced with one hand against the post was Sid Wise, his street-gamin face white and pasty in the light.

Betty was the first to notice Eddie's angry approach. She ducked beneath Sid's braced arm. "Hello, Eddie," she said doubtfully.

Sid Wise came around more slowly.

"Lo, Ed," he offered.

Eddie went up to him. His finger jabbed Sid beneath the collar bone. "Scram!"

The word came out harshly and Sid went back on his heels a trifle from the prodding. "What's a matter?" he asked.

"Now Eddie . . ." said Betty.

Sid Wise shrugged as a man does when faced with complete unreason. He flashed a smile at Betty and turned abruptly away.

"Gee, Eddie," said Betty. "We were only talkin'. What's wrong with that? I was waitin' for you, Eddie, and Sid just happened to come along."

"Come on," said Eddie roughly.

"I don't know what's the matter with you," she said. "I'm old enough to take care of myself. What harm can Sid Wise do talking to me on a public street?"

"I don't want that weasel near you," snapped Eddie. "I've said it before and I'll say it now."

"I get kind of sick of this, Eddie" she said slowly. "It's no fun for me to work all day and then wait till ten o'clock before you're through school. I don't mind waiting—" she went on hurriedly—"but you ought to let me talk to somebody."

"You can talk to people," he said in exasperation. "But why does it have to be Sid Wise?"

He stopped, took her arm. "Listen, Betty. You know what I want. I want to get us both out of this neighborhood. I'm graduating this year and can get a decent job. We'll get married and move up north. Until then you can at least stay clear of Sid and Buck and the rest of those hoods. That's all I ask."

She flared back at him: "What do you want me to do? Talk to a bunch of grannies? The girls all go with those fellows. They're none the worse for it. They're—"

Eddie released her arm as though burned. "If that's what you think, you'd better stick down here. It's where you belong. I'm going to make something of myself, not be a cheap hood all my life. You can do what you d—n please."

She sighed and continued on her way. She and Eddie had been fighting a lot lately. Of course it wasn't easy for Eddie, handling freight all day and going to school at night. But it wasn't any fun for her either. She'd give anything for one night of music and laughter!

"Hello, beautiful," said Sid Wise. She stopped and he stepped from the car at the curb. Buck Civak was at the wheel.

"Where's Eddie?" asked Sid.

"He's gone home."

"Well, well. These students! Buck and me are going to the Dreamland; want to come along?"

"No. I'm tired," said Betty.

"Come on, if you're goin'," called Buck.

Sid was lighting another cigarette. "Well?" he said.

Betty shrugged. "All right. I'm leaving early though."

She sat between Buck and Sid in the front seat and Sid's arm was carelessly crooked over her should- carelessly crooked over her should- he said.

Betty didn't answer. She was thinking of Eddie hunched at his desk; she could almost picture his bent, earnest face. He had told her that he slept fitfully while his head whirled formulas and a scarlet light shone behind his closed lids. Betty suddenly felt very small and a little mean.

"Good idea. That'll wake Betty up."

"No, wait a minute," said Betty. "I've got a better idea. There's a new girl working at the store. She's cute. Let's get her for Buck."

"Sounds good to me," said Buck. "I can always use a new filly."

"Where's she live?" asked Sid.

Betty gave the address. Sid is right, she told herself, I should wake up.

When the car pulled to the curb, Betty got out. "Be with you in a second," she told them. "We won't be long."

Sid was on his third cigarette when he said: "Cripes! what's keeping those dolls. Honk the horn, Buck."

Buck's hand hesitated over the knob. He peered with sudden intensity at the house. "Say . . ." he said slowly. "Ain't this the place where Eddie lives?"

Sid stared in turn. He flung away his cigarette. "Start the motor," he barked. "And if there's one crack outa you I'll burst your head."

B.Y.P.U. Group Hears Address On Juvenile Religious Fiction

Mr. Alan E. Haw Explains Main Principles Underlying Short Story—Bible Story is Cited as Perfect Example

"Slants on Religious Juvenile Fiction" was the subject of an address by Mr. Alan E. Haw before the intermediate B.Y.P.U. at the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Tuesday evening.

He spoke highly of the wholesome, well-written, character-building quality of juvenile fiction in the illustrated Sunday school papers of the various denominations. "They are not wishy-washy preachy or sectarian but strong virile stories full of action and good characterization —with a moral to be sure but not with the moral in a thinly-disguised and sugar-coated form. The characters, through their actions, show such traits as unselfishness, fair play, honesty, service, loyalty and truthfulness."

Today the trend is definitely away from the fanciful type of tale, said Mr. Haw. It is toward stories which mirror life as it is today—well plotted stories which deal with the problems young people have to face. He indicated that the age groups have their own individual problems.

Stories For Age Groups.

For the tiny tot group, stories are simply written without strong plot complication and are more incident-stories than plotted stories. But the writing which insults the intelligence of the readers by its syrupy sweetness rarely meets editorial approval. "Youngsters are very wise and they don't fall for sugar-coated pills." For the junior age stories are well-plotted, longer and with more action. The intermediate group of publications are edited for the younger high school students. Of these Mr. Haw says "these are real stories, with action growing out of character conflict and the moral lessons are not quite so obvious. Here there must be real characterization. Our characters are real flesh-and-blood people, natural and genuine." Conversation helps to evoke out of the airy nothing seeming flesh-and-blood characters. Stories of futility and despair have no place in juvenile fiction because futility and despair are the diseases of age, not youth. Sport stories, sportsmanship, finding work, beginnings in business are popular themes in the intermediate group."

The youth group is close to the adult and adult standards of writing are looked for. Such stories are well-written, plausible stories with drama, characterization and good dialogue.

Crime, gambling, profanity, wisecracking, slang, death, lying, ridiculing institutions, violent accidents have no place in juvenile fiction.

Mr. Haw referring to the intermediate group which is publishing an amateur paper said it was good practice, but he advised that writing is not a game, it is hard, painstaking, discouraging work, requiring years of intensive study, trial and error.

The Bible was cited as containing examples of the finest of short stories and Mr. Haw took as illustration the story of Elijah the Tishbite. Elijah blames the drought on the unbelief of King Ahab and the people. Ahab pooh-poohs the assertion and challenges him to a duel of gods. Each will build an altar, provide it with wood and a sacrifice but no fire. The one who first calls down heavenly flame shall be winner and his shall be called the One God. Here are the ingredients of a splendid story: conflict, obstacle, and an object to be achieved, and the element of human interest — commoner against king, weakness against might, David against the giant. To make odds heavy enough against Elijah, the author gives Baal 450 priests chanting and moaning, and exhorting Baal to send down fire; 450 prophets, the king, and his people and Baal, the sun-god, all against Elijah and his practically unknown God, Jehovah. Ahab has his first chance; it was technique then as today to have the loser try first. Anything else would utterly destroy the climax and ruin the story.

The priests call on Baal from morning even until noon. The prophet quietly waits, during the prayers of the priests. At noon he speaks and tells the enemy that perhaps Baal is away on a journey or sleeping and must be awakened. The din of the 450 prophets is terrific, they cut themselves with sharp instruments until their blood flows to the ground. They shout and dance the soles off their sandals. Evening approaches and there is no fire.

Mr. Haw said that the author did not simply have Elijah raise his hands and call down fire, thereby putting Ahab and his false gods to everlasting shame. The writer is writing a story that will endure for over two thousand years. So he adds something more that makes the good story better.

The dampness of evening is all about him. He surveys the wood upon his altar and finds it cold and clammy. The crowd is silent, waiting to see what will happen. If he brings down fire, they will cheer and applaud. If he misses they'll tear him limb from limb. There may be a few skeptics in the crowd who believe Elijah may light his pile by some sort of trickery. There must be a convincing demonstration. So he orders four barrels of water poured over the wood and then four more after that. When the fire comes, Elijah is justified, it consumes the very stones of the altar and licks up the water in the ditch. Even Ahab was convinced. "It was that something more that 'did the trick', that piling of one seemingly impossible thing upon another."

Other stories, Ruth, the Prodigal Son, David and Goliath, and scores of others furnish basic plots on which thousands of modern tales have been built. "And greatest of all is the story of Christ. It was not enough that He taught, healed, comforted, but there was that something more, the giving of His own life as a sacrifice for all mankind that makes God real and convincing to us."

Miss M. Fayers' group was in charge of the intermediate B.Y.P.U. meeting. Miss Margaret Moore presided. A vocal duet was rendered by the Misses Barbara Girling and Alice Moore, and musical selections by Mr. Walter Wessels and Mr. Oscar Post, Others taking part included the Misses Jean Fox, Muriel and Phyllis Peters and Kathryn Bateman.

MINOR CASES HEARD AT COUNTY COURT

Minor cases only constituted today's County Police Court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. in the Court House buildings. Several petty charges were dismissed when the complainants were not present to press their charges. Two cases of failure to procure Thurlow township dog licences were heard, but in both cases subsequent evidence was necessary before the matters could be disposed of. A charge of receiving stolen goods was dismissed against Jerry Murray, after Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. assured the court there was not sufficient evidence at hand to proceed against the accused, who was not present in court.

Scores Technical Knockout in 47 Seconds of the Ninth Round

MONTANEZ GAME

Armstrong Cut Opponent's Eye in Third and Pounded Away at Optic All Through Bout

New York, Jan. 25—(AP)— Little Henry Armstrong brought his perpetual-motion fighting machine and a fierce two-fisted attack into high gear last night to stop Pedro Montanez in nine rounds and successfully defend his world welterweight championship before a howling near sell-out crowd in Madison Square Garden. Armstrong weighed 139¾, Montanez 144½.

Floored three times and saved by the bell twice, Montanez put up a gallant showing against the vicious pace and punching of the great little negro. But Referee Billy Cavanaugh finally was forced to call a halt at 47 seconds of the ninth heat, with the Puerto Rican, game to the finish, helpless and absorbing terrific punishment.

Wins 7 of 8 Rounds.

Except for the sixth, when Montanez flashed to the front momentarily with a series of rights and uppercuts that found their target on Henry's chin, it was all Armstrong in this mauling, infighting slugfest. The Associated Press score card gave Armstrong seven of the eight completed rounds.

The crowd, preponderantly for Montanez to score an upset over the 1-to-3 favorite, booed several times when the champion appeared to be using his elbows in his peculiar buzz-saw style of battling. But aside from this, Armstrong was much the better battler, although Pedro gave the lie last night to all those who have said he wasn't game.

LOCAL 'Y' CAGERS STAGE RALLY; WIN OVER FLYERS

Paced by their veteran forward Herb Burley, the Belleville "Y" hoopsters moved into second position in the standing of the E.O.B.A. as the Campbell Street Association rallied strongly to beat the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" 22 to 18 on the Belleville Collegiate gymnasium courts. The game developed into a sturdily defensive piece, with the "Y" quintette breaking out in a scoring splurge in the last three minutes of play to snatch a belated victory.

Belleville ran up the score at the opening, but the Air Force rallied to have the count stand at 12-12 when the halfway mark was reached. The Air Force assumed the lead early in the second stanza and the Flyers were enjoying a two point lead with but three minutes left to play. Suddenly Herb Burley raced in to tie the score and Ab Faulkner batted in a rebound shot to put Belleville two up. Burley then cinched the piece with his second basket inside of a minute's play. Irvine stood out for the Air Force as he scored six points and kept his check well in tow all evening.

Herb Burley with nine, Eddie Schrieder with six and Faulkner with three carried the scoring punch for the "Y" squad.

The line-ups:

GOLDUP SCORES WINNING GOAL

Goalie Moe Roberts may not be the best goal-tender in the International-American hockey league but he is doing a passing fair job with Cleveland Barons. In a league where high scores come more often than low ones, Roberts has scored five shutouts.

He gained his fifth last night when the Barons beat Providence Reds 2-0. By their victory the Barons remained in second place in the western division, a point ahead of Pittsburgh Hornets who gave Springfield Indians a 2-1 licking.

For two periods Phil Stein, Toronto Maple Leafs spare goaler who took Mike Karakas' place in the Providence nets, matched Roberts' play but Emery Hansen and Bob Blake broke through him in the last frame for Cleveland's counters.

Cleveland Fireballer Only Interested In Winning Games

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 25—(AP)—It will be all right with Bob Feller if 1940 brings him the no-hit game he's narrowly missed three times, but the Cleveland fireballer is more interested in winning games.

"That's the easiest way to get 'em out, though, by not letting 'em hit the ball," said Feller, here on vacation. "But I don't start a game with any striking record in mind. All I want is to win the game."

The 21-year-old star hurled two one-hit games last year, and one before that in four years of major league competition. He struck out 246 batters last summer and 240 the season before.

Feller said New York Yankees were the hardest club to pitch to "because they're all dangerous hitters."

MARMORA LADS DEFEAT STIRLING

High School Team Given Real Beating by the Northern Students

Stirling, January 25 (Special) — Stirling High School hockey team took a real lacing at the hands of the powerful fast skating Marmora lads on Wednesday night at the Stirling Arena. Although played on Stirling ice the fixture was Marmora's home game in the regular league schedule. Gus Leonard was the shining star of the evening scoring five of the goals scored and getting a couple of assists. Reynolds scored the first counter taking a pass from Leonard who tallied twice in quick succession unassisted, and the first period ended 3-0 for Marmora. Play speeded up in the second period as Stirling tried hard but Gus Leonard and his brother each tallied to put the northerners five up. In the final period Stirling missed several good chances after sifting through the defence and with all Stirling playing up Leonard and Reynolds each broke away for a counter to bring the total to 7-0. Stirling was entirely outclassed whenever Leonard brothers and Reynolds appeared on the ice and the score is a good indication of the play. Stirling tried hard with Walker brothers, Pyear, Francis and Vandervoort turning in fine efforts. The locals changed goal tenders in the last period but this failed to stem the onslaught of their superior opponents.

Teams

Des Smith

One of the commonest names in the National League, as elsewhere is Smith, and one of the three representatives of the clan now doing business is Des of the Black Hawks. He teams with Joe Cooper to form the defence pair that alternates with Earl Seibert and Art Wiebe. This is his third N.H.L. season, but his first full one. His first was two years ago with Maroons, the second last season with Canadiens, who incidentally, would welcome him back. The only reason he got away from them was an oversight on the part of club officials which allowed Chicago to "steal" him from the minor league New Haven team. Born in Ottawa was Des, 26 years ago come Feb. 22. Christened Desmond Patrick. Played amateur in the capital, later shifting to the Maritimes and finally to England, where he sported the colors of Wembley Lions. Chosen on the all-star British team, came back home with the squad for an abortive international tournament held at Toronto, and became one of the most sought-after players in the land. Took the pro plunge with the Maroons. Statistical totals for his short career are six goals, four assists and 55 minutes in penalties until the beginning of the present season. Weighs around 180 pounds, shoots left.

MONTREAL SQUAD EASILY DEFEATS CONCORDIAS 9-3

HOLD SAFE LEAD

Cornwall Flyers Outlucked in Losing to Verdun Maple Leafs

Montreal, Jan. 25 (CP)—The hex that Montreal Concordias have held on Montreal Royals this Quebec Senior Hockey League season appears to have worn itself out at last.

Through four games Royals were unable to beat the City Hall team, losing to them once and drawing in three other contests. In their fifth meeting, however, which came last night, Royals left no doubt of their superiority as they raced to a convincing 9-3 victory.

The triumph the second overwhelming one in a row for last season's Dominion amateur finalists, gave Royals a clear first place margin of two points over Concordia. On Sunday Royals had beaten Verdun Maple Leafs 11-1 and this, coupled with their victory last night, convinced supporters that they finally have hit their stride.

Possibly roused by their stunning defeat Sunday, the Maple Leafs came back last night to nose out Cornwall Flyers 6-5 and step over the Flyers into fourth place in the standings. Three goals in the third period after they had trailed from the start brought the Leafs the victory.

In a Provincial Senior League game, Shawinigan Falls Cataracts outsped Lachine Rapides for a 5-1 victory that had no bearing on the standing. Rapides are in third place and Cataracts next to last.

Russ McConnell, Johnny Acheson and Paul Marcel Raymond sparked Royals attack, scoring five goals and as many assists among them. McConnell had a goal and four assists, Raymond two goals and an assist and Acheson two goals.

Tracey and White Lead Attack

Hugh Tracey and Moe White led the Verdun comeback, Tracey scoring two goals and assisting in three others and White scoring two and drawing two assists. Cliff Maundrell and Fred Gardner scored two goals apiece for the Flyers while Stan Robertson, the league's leading marksman, got a goal and two assists.

Shawinigan built up a 5-0 lead against Lachine who had three regulars on the shelf because of injuries and illness. Most of the excitement came in the third period when tempers flared and fighting broke out on the ice and in the penalty box.

Shawinigan police and officials quelled the disturbance without any serious damage being caused.

TRICOLOR WINS VAN HORNE CUP

R.C.A.F. of Trenton Defeated in Third and Deciding Game by 2-1

Kingston, Jan. 25.—Queen's broke the Trenton Flier three-year grip on the George Van Horne Memorial Trophy here last night with a 2-1 win in the third and deciding game of the Kingston Hockey League senior finals. The magic playmaking of the Tricolor's starting front line trio of Mel Williamson, Norv Williamson and Bobby Neilson provided the students' scoring punch, getting two second-period goals.

The trio netted the first tally midway through the game when Trenton was playing with a man serving time. The Williamsons combined for the second on a picture play.

Trenton put on a rousing rally in the last period and got a goal on a rebound play by McNab, but could not tie the count.

MAPLE LEAFS LEADING LOOP

Juvenile Entry in City Loop Score 6-3 Win Over the Canadiens

Rapping home three goals in the middle frame, Frank Cunningham's Maple Leafs downed Frank Collins' Canadiens 6-3 in a scheduled City Juvenile League game played at the Hume Arena last evening as a curtain raiser previous to the scheduled junior O.H.A. game. In winning, the Maple Leafs advanced to the leadership of the local juvenile puck loop.

Showing too strong a defence, the Maple Leafs garnered in an early lead and then settled back to protect their advantage with some good defensive play around their nets. Goyer scored two for the winners as Bill McBride notched a brace for the Canadiens. Besides carrying slightly too much speed, the Leafs' defence proved too strong and difficult to penetrate.

A doubleheader of juvenile league hockey will be played at the Hume Arena tonight when all four teams in the City Juvenile League will appear in league competition.

Dimaggio Doesn't Expect Trouble Over Contract

San Francisco, Jan. 25—(AP) — Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankee centrefielder who was the major leagues must unsuccessful holdout two seasons ago, looked over his 1940 contract today and said:—

He refused to divulge what the Yankee management offered him this year, but said the figure was "not far away" from what he had expected.

In 1938 DiMaggio held out for $40,000 until the playing season was nearly a month old. Then he settled for $25,000. Last season he topped American League batters with a .381 average, was voted the "most valuable player" award and drew down $27,500.

QUINTES SCORE FIFTH STRAIGHT WIN IN LEAGUE

SMART CONTEST

Leo Goyer Leads Scorers With Three Goals and Two Assists

Flashing too much speed all along the lines, the Belleville Quintes chalked up their fifth consecutive win in Group No. 2 of the junior "B" ranks in the O.H.A. when they downed Coach Larry Goyer's Picton "Stars" 8-1 at the Hume Arena last night. The homesters scored three in the initial frame, two in the middle session and three in the final stanza, while Picton's lone tally came early in the second canto.

Leo Goyer, sturdy Belleville defenceman, led the scorers of the night with three goals and two assists, "Stub" Ethier getting two counters. Bundy and Kiniski counted a goal and an assist each, while Storms counted the other Quinte counter. Van Dusen scored Picton's lone counter.

Cork, the Picton goalie, stood out for the visitors with his repeated sensational saves, as Hicks carried the bulk of the defence work. Mason, VanDusen and Platford looked the best of the forwards. Ted Clarke, making his debut in the Belleville nets, played all shots steady and was given fine protection by Goyer, Everett and Hook. The Belleville forwards throughout skated much too fast for the Picton kids, but their combination plays failed to prove productive for the opportunities presented. Two of Belleville's goals were of the gift nature, however.

Belleville—Goal, Clarke; defence, Goyer and Hook; centre, Storms; wings, Ethier and Clare; subs, Gerow, Bundy, Kiniski, Gerow, Ginn and Everett.

PLAY RANGERS

Despite Handicap of Injuries Leafs Only Seven Points Off the Pace

By the Canadian Press

Toronto Maple Leafs are walking the last weary mile they'll have to walk before smooth Sylvanus Apps comes back to their lineup with promise of better National Hockey League fortunes.

The Leafs undergo that most dreaded of all this season's assignments tonight, a game with the Rangers at New York, and Apps will have been missing from his centre-ice beat exactly one month. Then the Toronto club returns home for a Saturday night engagement with Montreal Canadiens and that probably will be the last time Sylvanus will be missing for a while.

When the Rangers whipped the Leafs Christmas night in New York, Apps suffered a broken collarbone and his team fell to four points off the pace. Since then the forward line that Syl centres hasn't been the same, but Toronto still is only seven points from the front.

If Toronto should upset estimates and win at New York, Boston could enter a first-place tie with the Rangers by defeating the Black Hawks at Chicago. Again the Bruins will play without captain Dit Clapper and Chicago is no place to be without so powerful a key man as Clapper.

In the night's third game, New York Americans and the Canadiens will battle over last place at Montreal. The Canadiens hold the cellar now a point behind the Americans, who in turn are a point back of Detroit's fifth-place Red Wings.

ALBERT COLLEGE AND COLLEGIATE SPLIT POINTS

Albert Juniors Win 20-14 in Basketball but B. C. I. Seniors Take 22-21 Win

Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate split a dual bill of C.O.S.S.A. basketball, played in the Bay of Quinte group, on the Collegiate courts yesterday when the Albert juniors won 20 to 14 over the Albert legiate kids, while the B.C.I. seniors staged a sterling finish to rally and beat the Albert College seniors 22 to 21 in the nightcap affair.

Trailing by two points at the halfway mark of the senior game, Coach Laughlin's "Collegians" rallied in the last half to out-score Pete Beach's charges by three points as Vechter and Pigden notched field goals in the dying moments in a game which at one period saw no team enjoy any great advantage. Jack Moulden of Albert, was the big point garner of the game with 13 points, as Powell scored six, Vechter, Pigden and Argue shared the Collegiate scoring honors. In the junior game the count was 8-6 at the halfway mark, with Albert carrying the play to victory in the last half. Both games were marked with strong and sturdy defence play on the part of both schools.

Gertrude Ederle, who is now 33 years of age, but in 1926 startled the endurance world when she swam the English Channel in something like 14 hours and 31 minutes, is reported to have triumphed over "hopeless" paralysis after a courageous seige of illness. Completely cured, Gertie left her native U. S. A. recently to become swimming instructor at the University of Puerto Rico to prove just what determination can accomplish. In 1933 Miss Ederle fell down a stairway, the best specialists said the accompanying paralysis would prevent her from ever swimming again. Her family doctor alone dissented and last summer she performed daily at the New York World's Fair to prove the specialists were wrong and with her strength and endurance back again Miss Ederle now enters a new phase of life in Puerto Rico.

The management of the Belleville Quintes is seeking additional playing strength for the local junior club, as Coach Holway is in the field for a hard-hitting defenceman and leftwinger with some drive. Recently while watching the Albert College work out, the junior heads saw the two players they feel will fill the vacancies on their roster. The two lads in reference are Partridge and Lougheed, both students at Albert College. Partridge is a leftwinger and Lougheed a sturdy defenceman. However, there seems to be a slight fly in the ointment, insofar as the Quintes are concerned, as there is a hard and fast regulation now in vogue at Albert College which holds that no student attending that school may play for outside sports enterprises. Efforts to have exceptions made in the cases of Partridge and Lougheed are being made by the Quintes' management, however. Coach Holway is far from satisfied with the showing of the local juniors thus far this season, so amalgamated the Flyers practice hour with that of the juniors this evening and from 6.30 until 8.00 p.m. the local juniors will practice in a game versus the Air Force seniors.

Dominic Dallesandre, the Pacific Coast league hitting champion, who likely will be a regular with the Cubs next season, is not a Californian. He comes from Reading, Pa., and got his first job at home. He is 25 and has six seasons of minor league play behind him.

Do you remember when Toronto Maple Leafs' "kid line" topped all National Hockey League point-getters eight years ago today? Pacing Toronto to the Canadian section lead, Charley Conacher, Harvey Jackson and Joe Primeau each had 29 points. Final statistics that year showed Jackson leading the league with 53 points, Primeau next with 50 and Conacher with 48.

While commenting upon the work of O.H.A. referees in general, the Peterboro scribe comes to bat with the following criticism: "Speaking of O.H.A. referees, we note that a lot of 'em have one of two faults — and sometimes both. We don't like to see a ref. miss too much or let too much go, nor on the other mitt can he blow the whistle continuously for minor accidental slips. But the faults we refer to are (a) the "homer" and (b) the guy who puts a man from each team off together when any mix-up occurs. The first type plays to the home crowd and the second takes the easy way out when often only one guy was guilty. At the pay O.H.A. arbiters get, they should be competent and fearless."

Frank Cunningham's Maple Leafs climbed back on the top perch of the City Juvenile League last night with a 6-3 win over the Canadiens. The Leafs defence proved too strong for the firey Canadiens, once the former had raced to an early-game lead. Tonight the hockey fans can see all four of these city juvenile teams in action when the Black Hawks meet the Leafs, and the winner here will be in undisputed possession of first place, following which the Americans and Canadiens battle it out in a dual bill.

Belleville hockey fans are apparently beginning to realize the fact there is something in minor league hockey after all. Last night at the Hume Arena the largest crowd of the season saw Belleville's Juvenile League pucksters display their wares and the patronage was increased for the junior game that followed. Actually the district junior O.H.A. set-up is not exactly the most desirable imaginable, but the fans can always be assured of a scrappy battle. Both the Trenton and Picton kids are anxious to take a fall out of the highly-touted Belleville juniors and although usually badly beaten, as was the case when Picton lost 8-1 last night, the other two clubs in the group never take things for granted, nor do they concede the locals victory at any stage. Last night Leo Goyer again paced the locals and we like the way Goyer and Everett break as a pair when teamed together on the defence. In the absence of Coach Holway, President Bill Cook started Goalie Ted Clarke in the local nets—net result, the kid came through splendidly. And that about takes care of the proceedings.

Like the pitcher, the Air Force apparently went to the Van Horne Memorial Cup finals just once too often. However, before the Flyers' string of Van Horne championships were snapped in Kingston, Coach Flat Walshe had to ice his complete Intercollegiate Queen's Seniors to halt the "Birdmen" and their monopoly of the Kingston pre-season hockey laurels. Although not present we hear last night's game was a douser with plenty of defensive hockey dished up by both teams. Queen's usually play a wide open game, but last; night Skipper Flat Walshe crossed the Flyers up slightly and did not carry the play, only when the advantage presented themselves with the result the "students" won 2-1. There shouldn't be too many kicks from this end of the Van Horne series as we can recollect the Belleville Cities Service having won the Van Horne honors twice in a row, the Flyers took it three times in succession and all within a period of seven years so it would appear as though the Belleville area can still produce winners.

Basketball opened rather auspiciously in Belleville yesterday. In the afternoon Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate hooked up in a C.O.S.S.A. doubleheader, the Alberts winning the junior game 20 to 14, while George Laughlin's Collegiate seniors won the nightcap affair 22 to 21 in true Merriwell fashion. The "Collegians" scored four points in the last few minutes to snatch a belated victory. In the evening the Belleville "Y" Intermediate quintette, in the E.O.B.A., rallied also to beat the Air Force in a league game 22 to 18. Here the "Y" squad was trailing by two points with three minutes to go. Herb Burley and Ab Faulkner, who actually paced the "Y" team, broke loose to score the winning points and give the locals a belated win over the Air Force. The game was marked with strong defensive play on the part of both teams.

WALL STREET

New York, Jan. 25—(AP)—Stimulating market news was lacking today and many rallying stocks of Wednesday backed into losing territory. However, gains were to be seen here and there near the fourth hour.

Lacking rising power were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem General Motors Chrysler, U.S. Rubber, Westinghouse, American Telephone, Kennecott and Great Northern.

International Nickel, in the Canadian group, gained a fraction while Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines and McIntyre held unchanged. Canada 4s, among bonds, dipped 1-4 of a point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Jan. 25.—(CP)—In the dullest trading of the month the Toronto market today displayed mild weakness in the early hours. Only 141,000 shares changed hands up till 1 p.m. Gold and Industrial shares improved slightly and the Base Metal and Western Oil Issues were lower.

Powell Rouyn backed down to 1.24 a new low for the current decline and Wright-Hargreaves was offered down to $7.75 for a loss of 15 cents. Other golds posted only narrow changes Base Metals also boarded only minor changes.

Steels were stronger and other Industrial groups balanced gains with losses. Fleet Aircraft weakened 3-8 to 9 1-4. John Lang and Son advanced 1 1-4 to a new high for a year at 16.

Slippery Pavement Responsible for Crash

Skidding on the icy pavement as it was meeting an oncoming motor car on Coleman St., the Belleville police cruiser collided with a motor car driver by A. DeMill, Cannifton last evening. Minor property damage only resulted.

P. C. Wm. T. Evans was driving the police car at the time, accompanied by P. C. Taylor when the officers were enroute to investigate a minor complaint on Isabel St. Constable Evans was proceeding south on Coleman St. and retarded the speed of the police car when he was meeting the north bound DeMill vehicle, as a parked car on the west side of the street was in the path of the police vehicle. Travelling at a slow rate of speed, the police car skidded on the icy pavement and skidded into collision with the front of Mr. DeMill's car. Minor fender damage and a broken radiator ornament were the only damage reported to Mr. DeMill's vehicle. The matter was quite amicably settled.

SNOW AND WET SACKS USED TO PUT OUT AUTOMOBILE FIRE

Prompt application of snow and wet sacks by employees of the Belleville Fruit Machinery Company, Front Street, that extinguished fire that had broken out in an automobile being repaired there yesterday averted what might have developed into a serious conflagration.

Gasoline had been emptied from the car's tank prior to doing welding repairs. It is believed that some of the fluid had spilled over the car, for when an acetylene torch was applied, flames spread over that part of the car.

Unable to get the car outside because of the fact it had been placed on its side, employees rushed quantities of snow and wet sacks to the scene and by the time city fire squads arrived, had the blaze well under control. The car was owned by Herbert Achers, an out-of-town resident.

SURVEY INDICATES GOOD QUANTITY SEED GRAINS AVAILABLE

Results of the recent seed survey sponsored by the Department of Agriculture through its representatives, Mr. H. L. Fair, Stirling, indicates that Hastings County will have sufficient good quality seed grains to satisfy their needs during the coming Spring. Many experimental plots were set out in various parts of the county and the results have been gratifying to the farmer and department alike.

Alfalfa and red clover seed is plentiful and present indications point to a small surplus being available for sale out of the county.

Produce Prices Remain Unchanged

Toronto, Jan. 25—Trading tapered down on the butter market, but prices maintained previous levels as current supplies were at low volume and holders were not pressing for business. Quantities available for buyers satisfied the demand that appeared. Sellers, however, found it difficult to move Ontario butter scoring below 37, and it was reported that discount prices had to be taken for these offerings.

Another day of unchanged prices marked the egg market. Fresh receipts were ample for requirements. A fairly good cleanup in supplies was effected at the steady quotations.

SNOWPLOW WINS RACE

A Prince Edward County snowplow hooked up with the stork during the blizzard of last weekend and the snowplow won, but only by the narrowest of margins.

Amos McKibbon, Point Petre resident, was rushing his wife to Prince Edward County Hospital in Picton when the storm struck with all its fury. Some miles from his destination his car plowed into a large drift and stuck there.

Calls for help were sent out and a county plow was rushed to the scene. Willing hands shovelled the car from the drift and the journey to Picton started. Halfway the plow slewed off the road into the ditch and stuck there but was extricated after thirty minutes furious digging on the part of the crew.

The journey was resumed and ended without further mishap just before the baby girl arrived.

QUESTION ANSWERED RIGHT

Guthrie, Okla., Jan. 25—(AP)—Said the sarcastic highway patrolman to speeder Frank Buck:

"Say, have you your pilot's license with you?"

"Well, that's one on me," said the patrolman—"On your way, only take it easy, please."

BRITAIN JUSTIFIED

Instead of appeasement, however, the envoy found himself the centre of a new storm of protest. Evening newspapers published his statement accompanied by headlines and comments sharply criticizing the envoy's act in making a statement before Britain's reply to Japan's protest had been received.

Statement Given

Sir Robert's statement follows:

"Judging from articles appearing in the Japanese press and statements made by many Japanese visitors to this embassy, I gained the impression that there is a great misapprehension in the Asama Maru case. I should like to assure my friends that the very last thing Great Britain would do is take action derogatory to Japanese prestige.

"It will be seen that the only question really at issue between Great Britain and Japan is whether under international law Germans of military age returning to the Reich under the orders and at the expense of the German government for service in the armed forces may be removed from a neutral ship, or whether this action must be confined to enemy nationals actually serving in Germany's armed forces.

Settle in Calm Atmosphere

"I think that the question can surely be settled between our governments in a calm atmosphere without rousing anger on either side. In this hope, I have wished to attempt this brief definition of the points at issue as they appear to me."

The Asahi quoted Yakichiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, as telling Japanese newsmen the envoy's action was "arrogant and insulting" and that he found it "truly outrageous" that the ambassador should have made a statement to the press in the midst of delicate diplomatic negotiations.

The Asahi itself found the communique to be hostile and objected especially to the fact Sir Robert had previously referred to the fact a Japanese warship stopped the British liner Rangoon in May, 1939, only four miles off Hong Kong.

The financial paper Chugai Shogyo said the "authorities are furious over the arrogance of the British action and the irregular methods of the British embassy."

Master of Ship Dismissed

Captain Yoshisada Watabe, master of the Asama Maru, was dismissed from his post and from all connection with the line, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha. The announcement said he "quit the services of the N.Y.K. Company, taking responsibility for having surrendered 21 German sailors to a British cruiser Jan. 21."

The line announced he had been replaced in command of the Asama Maru by Captain Toru Fujita, formerly of the Hakone Maru, also in the Trans-Pacific service. The Japanese Seamen's Union has denounced Captain Watabe for his action and threatened the crew would leave the vessel unless he was removed.

An admiralty spokesman declared the Japanese navy "is making preparations to prevent such incidents in the future."

The spokesman declined to divulge the nature of such preparations.

He said he was unwilling to discuss the legal aspects of the Germans' removal from the Asama Maru near Japan Sunday, but declared, "national feelings are more important than questions of law. The issue lies not in the fact that the Germans were removed but that the incident occurred at Japan's very front gate."

Await Britain's Policy

The Japanese Preventive Program was said to await Great Britain's reply to a Japanese protest.

The foreign office denied it had ordered Japanese ships to cease accepting belligerent nationals as passengers.

(In San Francisco, however, officials of Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Japan Mail Line, said no more Germans subject to military duty would be accepted as passengers and that Germans seeking passage must make affidavits that they were not eligible for army or navy service and were not returning to Germany by government order.

(Both the Asama Maru and the Tatuta Maru, which was halted by an unidentified warship between San Francisco and Honolulu, are NYK ships.)

Capt. Yoshisada Watanabe of the Asama Maru was retired from active service by the NYK Line on the grounds of misconduct in connection with the halting of his ship. No further explanation was given.

Sent Reply at Once

London, Jan. 25 (CP)—Britain's reply to Japan's protest against the seizure of 21 Germans from the Japanese liner Asama Maru near Yokohama Saturday is expected to be delivered in Tokyo within 48 hours, the Foreign Office announced today.

No indication of the tenor of the reply was given, but it was understood the main issue was whether the Germans, taken by a British cruiser, were civilians or had military status.

KING PRESENTED

The First Division was honored by His Majesty the King today who inspected the Royal Canadian Artillery, Royal Canadian Engineers and the Royal 22nd of which regiment he is Colonel-in-Chief.

His Majesty also visited all other units and lunched with divisional staff and commanding officers and expressed his great interest in the Canadian division and his satisfaction with the appearance of the men and their steadiness on parade.

He said he will again visit the division in the near future and see training in progress. I was personally well pleased with the progress made in drill and appearance of unit which was evident throughout.

King George Sends Message
By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aldershot, Jan. 25 —(CP—Cable) —The First Canadian Division, signally honored by a visit from the King yesterday, received yet another royal tribute today.

In time of war it is not customary for the King to send a message following an inspection. The Canadians, however, gave such a sterling account of themselves that His Majesty made an exception in their case.

Through his private secretary, Sir Alexander Hardinge, the King asked that a message be telephoned to Major-General A.G.L. McNaughton, general officer commanding the Canadian Active Service Force, at his divisional headquarters, saying how much the King had enjoyed the visit and expressing thanks for the hospitality.

He also authorized the following note to appear in the divisional orders: "His Majesty is pleased with what he saw He was greatly impressed by the smartness of the troops, their excellent drill and their steadiness on parade."

General McNaughton told Sir Alexander Hardinge that the entire division had been thrilled by His Majesty's visit and expressed most profound thanks on behalf of the officers and men for His Majesty's kind words of appreciation.

SOVIET

Behind the brief Finnish communiques telling of heavy fighting of the past three days in that sector, the Finns said there was this unofficial story:

Effort to Flank Finns

Large Russian forces early in the war pushed northwestward around Lake Ladoga in an effort to flank the Karelian Isthmus at Loimola and Syskjaervi, about 20 miles inside Finland.

Another heavy drive was stopped at Kitela, also a score of miles from the border and six or seven miles north of the lake. Anxious to relieve the Kitela divisions before they could be cut to pieces in the manner of the 163rd and 44th divisions at Suomossalmi, the Russian command tried vainly to send troops across the frozen lake.

Then they sought to bring up reinforcements along the railroad from Suojaervi, 55 miles northeast of Kitela, but the Finns stopped them where the line crosses the Kollaan River near Loimola.

In a more desperate effort, the Russian command launched repeated attacks overland, but in the past three days these have been thrown back with heavy Russian losses.

Advances Hurled Back.

In the meantime the Russians in the neighborhood of Kitela were said to be in an increasingly difficult situation and are eating the flesh of their horses.

That is the Finnish story.

On the darker side for Finland is the wholesale bombing of communities behind the lines.

Here, again, individuals, in pursuit ships can work wonders against the squadrons of Russian bombers, the Finns contend. One pilot is credited with destroying six bombers on a single flight—but Finland's air force is insignificant compared with the Soviet armada.

The Soviet bombers droned over Finland again yesterday, sank the 1,133-ton Finnish merchant ship Notung at Sottunja, in the eastern Aaland Islands, barely missed an unidentified German ship which had run aground nearby, and attacked with machine-guns a third ship, also unidentified.

POLICE ALLEGE

efforts to jimmy the door were heard by Cook, who looked out to find the door half sprung as a bar was being applied. Grabbing a .44 calibre rifle, he fired at the marauders and heard one scream "My God, they've got me".

Before he could fire again, Cook saw two men jump out of a standing car and pick up the wounded man and then head the car for Toronto at high speed.

WIRE-HAIRED TERRIER IN CITY DOG POUND

Found wandering at large a female wire-haired terrier pup was taken into custody by Thomas Thorne and lodged in the city dog pound yesterday. The canine is a fine type of dog and suitable for a house pet, Mr. Thorne reported. No dog tag was found attached to the animal.

SHIRT IS STOLEN FROM CLOTHESLINE

Sneak thieves stole a knitted skirt from off a family clothesline at the rear of 24 McAnnany Street yesterday. Miss Annie Sayers, who resides at 24 McAnnany Street, cleaned a knitted dress yesterday and placed the skirt upon a line to dry. During the period of the drying process some sneak thief stole the skirt from off the line, the young lady reported to police authorities last evening.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, Jan. 25 (Special).—The Crosse and Blackwell factory will be an addition to the Trenton industry when it is completed in the spring. Workmen are cleaning the site opposite the Continental Can warehouse on Dufferin avenue and the excavation work is expected to be finished for the laying of the foundations at an early date.

The contract was let to the MacFarland Construction Company of Picton who recently completed a number of houses at the Bata Shoe Village near Frankford. Trenton labor is being given the preference and it is understood that the job will run over several months and into the spring. The new industry will be put into operation during the forthcoming summer and at that time employees of this district will find work in the processing of high-class foods. Mr. A. L. Kennedy of Baltimore has represented the company in all negotiations here and an expert is on location to supervise the excavation work and subsequent building procedure.

V.O.N. Executive For 1940.

The Trenton branch of the V.O.N. has elected officers for the ensuing year and they are: President, R. F. MacInnes; vice-presidents, James Holmes, Miss L. Cumming, Miss Jean Shurie; secretary, Helen Sutcliffe; treasurer, J. C. Gillan; chairman of publicity, L. D. Foster; convener of car committee, J. A. MacKenzie; chairman of finance, George Cobley; board of governors, Mrs. K. Couch, Mrs. J. E. Holmes and Mrs. F. L. Reid.

Appointed C.A.S.F. Chaplain.

This source was advised yesterday that Rev. F. A. Smith of St. George's Anglican Church had been appointed by headquarters at Ottawa to the chaplain service of the C.A.S.F. with the rank of honorary captain. Rev. Smith's first duties are at Barriefield with the Royal Canadian Signals and he will go overseas with No. 5 Casualty Clearing Station when that unit embarks for the war zone. It was in 1933 that the Rev. Smith came to Trenton and he is leaving a community of friends that will miss him very much.

Finger-Print Expert.

William Andrews, local barber, has chosen the art of finger-printing as his hobby. Last year he graduated as an expert from an internationally known school and at present he is conducting experiments with prints on the handles of firearms. Local police are interested in Mr. Andrew's work and they have assisted him by loaning him their spare revolvers for his investigations. Actually a small town authority Mr. Andrews has collected the most up-to-date equipment to solve the most baffling of cases.

Clare "Mike" Ridley To Do Solo Number At V. O. N. Carnival

Clare "Mike" Ridley, member of the Quinte Skating Club and Belleville's ace individual fancy and figure skater, will appear in a solo number and as an added attraction at the annual V. O. N. charity ice carnival at the Hume Arena on Friday evening. "Mike" Ridley's skating ability is well known throughout Eastern Ontario, where he has appeared as guest star at numerous winter ice carnivals. He volunteered his services for charity.

Other local features to be included on the night's program, aside from several of Canada's outstanding skaters from the Toronto Skating Club and the Minto Club of Ottawa, will be dancing acts by the pupils of Miss Mary Forster of this city. In these presentations new and unique dancing skits will be introduced for the first time in Canada by Miss Forster's pupils.

Other features on the program will include a fashion parade of winter sportswear with living models wearing Deacon Sportswear, while the annual public school relay skating race will conclude a two-hour program to be featured by fancy and figure skating by the Minto Four and outstanding skaters from the Toronto Skating Club. The annual V.O.N. charity ice carnival at the Belleville Arena is one of the long-looked for charity programmes of the year.

In a Big Way

HELEN WORDEN

Flossie Dell is to provide the next star for the Broadway firmament. Jimmy Boyle's stubby fingers tapped the typewriter keys in jerky tempo. "Hey! you louse," he shouted to Bill Gates, movie editor, a couple of desks up the line. "Did you ever pick a winner?"

"Softly, Mr. Boyle, softly! Your language is hardly that of a gentleman. You were saying—?"

"I've picked a winner!"

"What!"

"A winner. Flossie Dell!"

"Who?"

"Flossie Dell. The blues singer at the Hollycrest."

"You poor sap!"

"I said the blues singer at the Hollycrest."

"Sorry. I heard you the first time. . . . She's nothing to write home about."

"Listen to me!" Jimmy Boyle's husky voice deepened. "I'm telling you, Bill. That's a girl what's a girl."

"Your crazy! She's punk on looks. She can't sing and she's a nobody. Tell me another bed-time story."

Jimmie told it next day in his column. And just in case she might miss it, he read the column to Miss Dell that night at the Hollycrest.

She yawned a little. "It's very nice of you, I'm sure, Mr. Boyle to say such swell things about me!" Jumping up—"Gee. There's my cue!"

He waited till she finished singing. "Come on, baby," he begged. "Sit down and we'll drink to big movie contracts for little girls."

"It doesn't look well, Mr. Boyle," Flossie objected. "And besides I have to think of my figure." She stared at Jimmie's two hundred pounds. "You should think of yours."

"Training for a screen test?" asked Bill.

"What's the big idea, Boyle?" the managing editor demanded, when that day's column came out. "Turning press agent for a d—d night club singer?"

"She doesn't need one, Boss. She's marvelous! Have you seen her?"

"No! And I don't want to see you around here, if you plug her any more."

"Not a bad column you had in today's paper, Boyle." Tommy Leonard, Hollycrest's master of ceremonies, said that night. He patted Jimmie on the back. "Now that you've spoken of it, I can see possibilities in the girl myself."

At the end of a week Jimmie had lost fifteen pounds. "Do you see any difference, Flossie?"

"No, I don't.' She shrugged her shoulders, then snuggling up close to Jimmie—"I might, if you wrote more about me. You're the only fellow that has the right slant."

It was three o'clock in the morning when Jimmie finished his column.

"The beautiful and talented Flossie Dell, scintillating blues singer of the Hollycrest, continues to draw record crowds," was his lead.

"Write a new lead for the next edition, Boyle!" he roared. "And stop at the cashier's desk for your pay the next time you write up Flossie Dell. I'm giving you one more chance. After that, you're fired!"

"Seen this?" He handed her a clipping of his first edition column.

"No." She held it up near a street light. The lamp that shone on Jim's column brought out the cheap prettiness of her blond hair and red dress.

"Gosh, Kid! I'm nuts about you." Jim put his arms about her. "Let's give the old marriage game a chance. How does a license for two at the municipal building tomorrow strike you?"

She slipped away from him. "When I fall," her voice was taunting. "It's going to be for a real guy!"

"Meaning anyone in particular?"

"Yes."

"Who?"

"Tommy Leonard. I'm going to marry him!"

The red that Jimmie saw wasn't Flossie's dress. "You poor simp!" he shouted. "You don't know a real guy when you see one!" He caught Flossie by the shoulders, shaking her thin obstinate little body until her breath came in gasps. "I'm a real guy! Do you hear that?" He was sobbing. "I'm a real guy!"

Jim's desk was covered with torn bits of paper the next morning. Paper that he continued tearing into shreds, sitting, slumped down in his chair. Paper that had been stories of Flossie Dell.

Sweeping the litter to the floor, Jim reached in his desk for a photograph. It was a picture of Flossie. With a swift gesture he ripped it in half.

"Say, Boyle." The managing editor called. "I was wrong about Flossie Dell. She really is a comer. Write a column on her in a big way!"

Elaborate Precautions Taken With Terrorists

London, Jan. 24—(CP)—Elaborate precautions were taken to prevent a possible attempt to rescue two Irish Republican army terrorists who, their appeal from the death sentence denied, were transferred from Pentonville prison to Birmingham today.

The van carrying the prisoners was escorted by automobiles loaded with Scotland Yard men. The route taken to Birmingham was a secret known only to the police officers.

Bandit, Arm in Sling, Robs Bank of Commerce Branch at Hamilton of $500

'Big Bills First,' He Scrawls on Blank Cheque

Covers Teller With Small-Calibre Revolver as Note is Handed in

PICKS UP MONEY

Two Men Give Chase in Cars but Fugitive Takes to Motorcar Half a Block East and Escapes

Hamilton, Jan. 25—(CP)—A lone bandit with his left arm in a sling raided the Canadian Bank of Commerce Branch at Queen and York streets today, took approximately $500 after handing in a blank cheque to John Halliday, the teller, on the back of which was scrawled in large letters: "This is a holdup. Keep your hands down and act natural. Big bills first."

The bandit walked into the office, covered the teller with a small-calibre revolver and handed in the note. After taking the money, he turned and, on the way out, passed Fred Oatena who was standing at the counter near the door.

Robber is Pursued

"I could have tripped him had I realized what was happening, Oatena said. "I just heard the word 'holdup' as he passed me on his way out. I ran after him, jumped into the car and chased him but he got into a car half a block east on York street and outspeeded me.

Provincial Traffic Officer Earl Bond, of Waterdown, was on his way to traffic court when Fred Pittaway shouted "There's been a holdup," and pointed to a man running towards a car. Officer Bond gave chase on his motorcycle but could not catch up with the fugitive auto.

The coast guard at Boston said the 6,566-ton vessel was in heavy weather about 60 miles northwest of Bermuda.

Hertzog Called By Cape Times 'New Apostle Of Hitler'

Cape Town, Jan. 25 (CP Cable)—The Cape Times, commenting today on the speech in parliament of General J. B. M. Hertzog, described the former Prime Minister as "Hitler's new apostle."

General Hertzog, urging that South Africa withdraw from the war against Germany, defended Hitler's efforts to "restore the German unity of territory and authority so scandalously destroyed by the treaty of Versailles."

The Cape Times said General Hertzog "is so lost to any understanding of what freedom means in the world as to be not merely unable to distinguish between the nobility of the cause for which the Allies are fighting and the infamy of the cause against which they are fighting, but actually to give his verbal support to the cause of infamy."

Debate on the war was to be continued in the House of Assembly today, with political observers predicting a vote of confidence in the war policy of Prime Minister Jan Smuts.

10-YEAR-OLD BOY HAS LONG MEMORY

Recalls Serial Number on 50 Cards He Has Not Seen in a Year

Montreal, Jan. 25—(CP)—William Donald MacNeil does second-year High School work with perfect ranking, reads all the current literature and has his own ideas on marriage, which isn't unusual until you consider his age—10 years old. Billy, as he is known to his friends, displayed his talents to a newspaper reporter last night holding his own in a debate on the place of women in commerce and industry and recalling from memory the serial number on 50 cards which he had not seen in a year. And he was right every time.

The youngster, son of a railway company employee, taught himself to read and write at the age of three. Until recently his parents lived in a remote northern Quebec district so, all in all, he has had only two and one half years of formal schooling.

Although studious, he plays hockey and football and is interested in other sports.

On the subject of marriage, Billy said: "I wouldn't mind going out with girls but am never going to get married—it is too expensive."

THREE FIREMEN SLIGHTLY BURNED

Firemen Injured Fighting $9,000 Restaurant Blaze in Toronto

Toronto, Jan. 25 (CP)— Three firemen were slightly burned today and an elderly woman rescued down fire ladders in two early morning fires.

Miss Rebecca McNiven, trapped in her second floor midtown flat, was found huddled unconscious in the corner of a bedroom when firemen entered with gas masks. She was taken to hospital in an ambulance.

"If it wasn't for Fanny, we would have all suffocated," said Norman Levick, tenant of the house where Miss McNiven was rescued. He stroked the long ears of Fanny, a black and white spaniel.

Flames had eaten their way from the kitchen and were spreading along the hall when Fanny, who has a room of her own on the second floor, apparently sensed the danger. The door of the downstairs bedroom where Mr. Levick and his son, Edward, 13, were sleeping, was closed, but Fanny scratched until she awakened the boy.

Fire swept through the New London Cafe, Queen and John Streets. Lieutenant John Timney and firemen Robert Gaston and W. Bryce had their faces and hands seared.

Premier Hepburn told the legislature that the boys, sons of H. C. Hindmarsh Vice-President of the Star, had been summoned on charges arising from splashing red paint over an Oakville schoolhouse. The Premier said that under the arrangements made to have the case heard by a different Magistrate, the charges were closed by having the father pay the $90 damage and having the boys apologize to the school principal and the schoolboard chairman.

STEEL, TEXTILES SHOW GREATEST IMPROVEMENT

LUMBERING STARTS

Toronto, Jan. 25 (CP)—Improvement in Ontario industrial conditions is most pronounced in steel and textiles, according to the weekly labor report issued today by Labor Minister Norman Hipel. War orders are also stepping up activities in other manufacturing lines.

Brantford reported improvement that has developed in recent months is being maintained. Primary departments of iron and steel establishments are showing increased activity and registration of unemployed is steadily decreasing.

Two tobacco firms in the Chatham area are working at full capacity and a textile company is working full time, while at Fort William aircraft mechanics are being sought.

Turning Out 160 a Day.

An electrical firm at Guelph is turning out 160 motors a day while textile firms are busy. A bridge company at Hamilton is opening one of their plants which has been closed for a year. Industries manufacturing automobile tires and accessories, railroad stock and practically all lines of textiles are running full strength. Firms have received war orders for barracks supplies, uniforms, food supplies and shoe polish. Unemployed are warned there are sufficient men in the city to supply demands.

A cereal firm at London has taken back many old employees and report their outlook is good. The factories are very busy as are box and printing plants.

A large soup company at New Toronto is much busier than a year ago, while a can company has called back some old employees.

A large motor firm at Oshawa has started on a five-day per week schedule. Demand for domestics is steady.

Movement of freight continues heavy at Sarnia, while storage grain cargoes are being unloaded from boats in the harbor. Furniture manufacturers in the Stratford area give encouraging reports as a result of their furniture show.

Lumbering Commences.

Fairly heavy snowfall in the Sudbury area has enabled lumbermen to commence the sleigh haul and orders increased slightly. Log-cutting for the season has finished.

Toronto reported woodworking, radio tubes, paper cup and canvas goods firms are fairly busy. A Steel Car Corporation has increased its staff.

Staff and production levels are being maintained in moulding and steel plants in the Woodstock district. Textile and hosiery firms are reported very busy.

U.S.-JAPANESE TREATY EXPIRES TODAY

Tokyo, Jan. 25—(AP)—A Foreign Office statement today said that expiration Friday of the United States - Japanese trade treaty would put the general relations between the two nations, as well as trade relations, "under strain."

It said Japan hoped negotiations between the two countries would result in a new treaty.

Snowmobiles Used by O.P.P. for Patrol in Lake Areas

North Bay, Ont., Jan. 25.— (CP)—Provincial Police today reported that tests have proven snowmobiles ideal for patrol work in lake districts.

Yesterday, clipping along in a snowmobile powered with a Moth airplane engine, Constable Harry Morel, crossed Lake Nipissing, toured the summer homes in the Lake Islands and arrived back here by evening. He was accompanied by Frank Miller, of the Department of Lands and Forests, owner of the machine and overseer William St. Pierre.

The officer said the snowmobile touched as high as 60 miles an hour on good going and coasted comfortably at 50 m.p.h.

At several spots where there were ice cracks, the machine was run along parallel to the crack until a safe place was found to cross.

The constable, incidentally, reported he had found several homes ransacked on the islands.

BACON PURCHASE NOT MERE COLD BUSINESS DEAL

L. W. Pearsall Official of Bacon Board Explains Situation to Legislature Committee

REPLY TO CRITICISM

Toronto, Jan. 25 (CP)—If Great Britain had decided to handle its bacon buying as a cold, business proposition, it could have gone to the United States and purchased bacon hogs at two to three cents less per pound.

This was the reminder given the Ontario Legislature Committee today by L. W. Pearsall, Secretary-Manager of the Canadian Bacon Board, in discussing criticism of the new bacon agreement between Canada and Great Britain.

There have been some say that the Canadian farmer could have got more money for his hogs if this agreement had not been entered into," said Mr. Pearsall. "But Great Britain had to have the bacon and it was prepared to pay all the extraordinary costs in connection with the shipment. Under this contract we are being paid in Canadian funds at Canadian seaboard.

"Looking at it from a cold, business proposition, Great Britain could have gone to the United States and bought its bacon for from two to three cents less."

"They couldn't have done that," interjected Col. T. L. Kennedy (Con. Peel). "Not with 2,000 Canadian boys over there."

Agreement

An agreement between the British Ministry of Food and the Canadian Bacon Board, whereby 5,600,000 pounds of bacon and hams are to be shipped weekly from this country to Great Britain, was outlined to the legislature's Agriculture Committee by L. W. Pearsall, Secretary-Manager of the Bacon Board here today.

He told of negotiations concerning the huge war-time shipment of hogs and pointed out that from the outset, it was realized a boost in price was needed to cover the increased cost of marine insurance and exchange. He explained that before acting on price, the Bacon Board had conferred with packers' and production committees and consolidated the information in the offer presented to the British Ministry of Food.

Hog Production Increasing

"We knew that hog production was increasing rapidly," Mr. Pearsall told the committee. "Our view was that what the industry needed was an outlet for the surplus of the product." The Board official revealed that the Canadian group had been against a flat rate agreement but the British authorities had insisted. The Food Ministry had agreed, however, to assist in retention of grade quality of this country's bacon.

The agreement, confirmed on Dec. 14, provided that not only will the British Ministry accept 5,600,000 pounds per week but will also accept any marketable surplus from Canada. Of the shipments 60 per cent must be Wiltshire sides and the remainder cuts. The Ministry is to provide ships for the transportation. The agreement is to be renewed and revised not later than next August.

Mr. Pearsall said that the Canadian Board had received its first payment under the agreement yesterday. Out of this payment will be taken a small margin per hundredweight which will be setup by the Board as a protection against the increased cost of production in the summer.

"The idea is that this margin will be held by the Board and allowed to accumulate so that in the summer, when the cost of production is greater, we will be able to pay the producer a correspondingly higher price," Mr. Pearsall said. "It is an attempt to level out the price throughout the year."

While the British Ministry had asked for a flat rate price, the Canadian Board had pegged its prices according to quality, the committee was told. The schedule of prices paid the farmer in Canada includes 18 grades, with a top price of $17.70 a cwt for "A" grade, No. 1 selected sizeable.

SKATING RINKS AT FOUR SCHOOLS

Employees of the City Public Works Department commenced operations in the construction of ice skating rink on four local school grounds yesterday. Skating rinks will be flooded on King George, Queen Mary and Queen Victoria School grounds as well as on the grounds of St. Michael's Academy, City Engineer Chas. Mott stated today. Students and teachers at Queen Alexandra School built and flooded their own school rink some weeks ago and have been enjoying skating and school hockey games. Girls, as well as boys, are playing inter-grade hockey games at Queen Alexandra School this year.

Witnesses Called to Corroborate Testimony of David Armaly

Discharged Customs Officer Said He Passed and Arranged to Have Passed Cars Loaded With Alcohol

PERRI ON TRIAL

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 25.— (CP)—The Crown continued its efforts today to building up its case against Rocco Perri of Hamilton, Ont., Mrs. Anne Newman and four suspended Customs officers charged with conspiracy under the Customs Act.

Evidence and witnesses were called by Crown Prosecutor Thomas Phelan to substantiate the testimony of David Armaly, 32-year-old discharged Customs officer and chief Crown witness, who said that he passed and arranged to have the four charged Customs officer pass alcohol through the Customs without the payment of duties.

Expansion of the business began where Perri and Mrs. Newman approached him about four years ago and his suspension forced him to turn to fellow Customs officers for assistance and Armaly said he paid Ed. Mansell, Carl Gough, Norman Lepain and Wilfred Fletcher $25 for each car they passed without inspection.

Incident Recalled

Provincial Traffic Officer Alister Lawrence was called as a witness and described an incident five miles east of Chatham July 2, 1937, when he stopped a car driven by Milton Goldhardt, with Vincent Sola, Chicago, as a passenger.

Goldhardt, described by Armaly as a driver who later went into the alcohol-smuggling game on his own, was named in the indictments and disappeared following his appearance before the Grand Jury last year. Police have been unable to locate him since.

Denied Knowledge

Goldhardt and Sola denied any knowledge of 19 five-gallon cans of alcohol in the back of the car, saying they had borrowed the machine in Hamilton, Ont. The Provincial Officer declared that they offered him $800 if he would let them go and drop the matter—but he took them to Chatham and they pleaded guilty there to charges brought against them.

Other witnesses called by the Crown gave evidence by which the Crown sought to establish that Armaly had carried on telephone conversations by long-distance with Perri and Mrs. Newman and that the two defendants were connected with cars involved in transporting alcohol both in Ontario and in the United States.

Quiet Reigns On Western Front

Paris, Jan. 25 (CP-Havas)— Almost complete inactivity on the Western Front was reported by military authorities today.

French patrols and so-called "security units," despite the bitter cold, went out on their usual missions yesterday but there were no clashes. Only a few artillery shots were fired in the region west of the Vosges.

In the air there was the same inactivity. Even the German planes which appear almost daily on long-distance reconnaissance flights failed to show up.

"Nothing to report," said this morning's official communique.

DISCORD BREAKS OUT AMONG WAGNERIANS

New York, Jan. 25.—(AP)—There was discord today in the Wagnerian wing of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and the controversy split performers into opposing camps.

It centred in the distrust of some of the older Wagnerian singers in the ability of 27-year-old Erich Leinsdorf to take over the baton of the late Arthur Bodanzky, foremost Wagernian conductor in America, who died recently at 61.

To Edward Johnson, Guelph-born general manager, it was another clash between youth and age.

"There are some old boats in the company," he said. "There are those who, because they have exalted egos since they have no competition for their roles, would like to be dictators of the Metropolitan".

TOOK TOO MUCH POISON

Woodstock, Ont., Jan. 25—(CP)—George Rowe, 23, is alive today because he swallowed too much poison. He took so much it made him violently ill and what he retained did him little harm.

Police said Rowe, a farm laborer who was recently discharged from the Canadian Active Service Corps, took the poison in an attempt at suicide. No charges has been laid yet.

LEG AMPUTATIONS MAY BE AVOIDED

Clifton Pofhl Found in Lonely Cave With Both Legs Frozen

Hamilton, Ont., Jan. 25 (CP) — Doctors today held hopes they may be able to avoid leg amputations on Clinton Pofhl, 37, who was found in a lonely cave in King's Forest last night by Provincial Police. Both his legs were frozen and he was suffering from exposure.

"His condition is slightly improved today but time alone will tell whether amputation may be avoided," Dr. J. B. Neilson, Assistant Medical Superintendent of the General Hospital, said.

Chance visit of a boy to the lonely area discovered Pofhl's plight. He informed police who climbed over slippery rocks to rescue the man, who told them he had been unable to walk for several days.

Police said the man told them he had been off the ledge only a few times in the past month, and then only to get food supplies. He said he had retired to the ledge to get away from the noise of traffic.

A Canadian by birth, Pofhl worked in Buffalo for several years as a tire builder. He had $66 in his pockets.

30-DAY SENTENCE IMPOSED AT HAMILTON

Hamilton, Jan. 25—(CP)—Thirty days in jail was the sentence imposed on Lance Corporal Peter Blackwood when he appeared before Magistrate James McKay in court today and pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while intoxicated. A charge of reckless driving was withdrawn.

"After the accident, Blackwood was placed in the rear of the truck and driven to the Armouries. I went there and found him lying on his cot, helplessly drunk," said the constable.

Smythe Admits Making Offer for 'Toe' Blake

New York, Jan. 25.—(CP)—Manager Conny Smythe, of Toronto Maple Leafs, said today "it's all off now" in connection with negotiations with Montreal Canadiens for the purchase of Toe Blake, the Frenchmen's star winger and the National Hockey League's most valuable player last season.

Smythe said he had made an offer for Blake last week but had been turned down. He would not say what he had offered for the Canadiens' leading scorer.

Smythe added he had no other deals in mind.

TAKE THE "LEAD" FEELING OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery—you tire quickly—feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. 1938, G. T. Fulford Co., Ltd.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was walking around pushing crooked things straight and straight things crooked, saying to pop, Willyum, dont you hate to have somebody's face on the tip of your tongue and not be able to place it by name?

You bet, and I dont even get much sattisfaction out of being haunted by somebody's faceless name, pop said, and ma said, Somebody nodded to me downtown this afternoon and before I could collect myself sufficiently to nod back it was too late in the crowd, and I know very well who it was in a generel way but I haven't the slightest definite idea.

Was she very beautiful? pop said, and ma said, It wasn't a she in the first place, it was a man and as far as that goes he did happen to be rather strikingly handsome in a rough diamond sort of way if you know what I mean.

Sure, he needed a shave, pop said, and ma said, No, I mean he had a big square dominating jaw and rather flashing eyes.

Mussolini perhaps, pop said, and ma said, Didn't we once meet a tall man somewhere with a short reddish mustash named Andrews or something like that?

I believe you're thinking of a short stocky man with two bushy eyebrows named Duckworth and Smaltz, pop said, and ma said, Now really, Willyum, I mean really, I'm sure we both know this man quite well and it's gassly to think he may be telling his wife at this very moment that I cut him dead in his tracks without a nod, his front teeth seemed quite prominent when he smiled.

G wizzickers, ma, I bet it was our letter carrier, I said, and ma said, Why of course, that's precisely who, if he'd had his uniform on I'd of known him immeeditly, and pop said, But if you'd been in a uniform he proberly wouldn't of reckonized you and we'd of had the same situation only in reverse.

ELECTION DATE LIKELY MARCH 26, SAYS KING

National Gov't Manion's Pledge If Victorious

Conservative Leader Promises Cabinet of Best Brains in Canada if National Conservatives Win Coming Election

ASSAILS KING GOV'T

Calls Step 'Unnecessary and Uncalled for Manoeuvre' and Expresses Confidence People Will Elect Government of Action, Decision

Ottawa, Jan. 26 (AP).—A "truly national government" with a cabinet composed of the best brains available in the country was promised by Conservative leader Manion today if the National Conservative party is successful at the coming election.

In a statement issued after a party caucus, which endorsed his leadership, Dr. Manion berated the present government for calling an election without giving parliament an opportunity to review the war administration.

"I am convinced," Dr. Manion said "that fair-minded citizens everywhere will place their stamp of disapproval upon this unnecessary and uncalled for political manoeuvre and will put into power a government of action, decision, courage and vision, to handle not only our war effort but to assure the necessary attention to after-war problems.

Draft Best Brains Into Cabinet.

'Such a government, to be really effective and to achieve the results desired by all Canadians, must be a truly national government in the sense that the very best brains obtainable among our people are drafted to serve in the cabinet. Therefore, if the National Conservative party is successful at the coming election I shall form such a government."

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

The earth's surface! We generally speak of the earth's surface as meaning the outward limits of the crust and water, which has a diameter of about 8000 miles. If the atmosphere were considered, which is really a part of the earth, the calculated diameter would be about 50,000 miles. But it is difficult to conceive or define the top of the atmosphere or the surface of a gas. However, notwithstanding the tremendous extent of the atmosphere, 21,000 miles high, the weather phenomena as they affect the earth; that is, the soil, crops, and the people, take place for the most part in a thin layer of air next to the surface, about one mile high.

FIRST NAME SAVES DECORUM OF COURT

Rochester, Ind., Jan. 26 (AP) — First names usually are tabu in court but Judge Robert Miller made an exception in a divorce case. Calling the plaintiff by her first name was the only way he could keep spectators from tittering. The plaintiff was Mrs. Leonorabelle Sippy. Mrs. Sippy won the divorce.

Nazis Boast Sub Production Has Reached One-a-Day Level

Spokesmen Also Say Crews Can be Trained in About a Month

MANY RUMORS

London, Jan. 26—(CP)— German claims that submarine production had reached a one-a-day level and reports that the Reich had launched several new plane carriers have stirred speculation on the chance of a new Nazi campaign against merchant shipping.

In Berlin, authorities would not comment on the plane carrier reports which were widely circulated in London, but a well-informed source there was responsible for the claim about submarine production. British naval authorities have contended that German submarines were being destroyed faster than they could be turned out.

The first group of undersea craft supposedly built under the Nazi program was said in Berlin to be slated for service as fast as officers and crews can be trained. Nazi spokesmen suggested these men could be trained for their exacting duties in about a month.

Parliament Stenographers' Work Begins and Ends on the Same Day

By MURIEL ADAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa Jan. 26 (CP)—More than 100 bewildered stenographers slept in today, their one-day job at the parliament buildings over.

They hung up their hats in the sessional stenographers' pool yesterday morning. They sat down at their typewriters and prepared to answer summons from members to take care of parliamentary correspondence for at least three months.

But their jobs began and ended the same day.

Rather than lose their standing on the sessional list many of the girls resigned their jobs to come from all parts of Canada to Ottawa. The salary is from $4 to $5 a day depending on the number of sessions the girl has worked. Normally it is worthwhile for a girl to give up a small-salaried position for the several months' work at the House of Commons.

There were varied discussions among those "out-of-work" as they chatted among themselves over future plans after the sudden "hello-and-goodbye" day on Parliament Hill.

When the House of Commons met in an emergency six-day session last Fall, stenographers were called in only from Ottawa and towns nearby. But this being a regular session, stenographers, many of them for the first time, were signed from the Pacific and Atlantic coasts and the Prairie provinces.

Girls were effected in the Senate stenographers' pool too. Since the Senate adjourned immediately following the Speech from the Throne most girls finished their jobs without starting.

Seventeen unemployed girls are left in the Hansard reporters' rooms. Several of these girls are from Toronto and one of the sessional workers cut a holiday short in California to return for the session.

Officials say in former years when adjournment of the House has cut sessions unnaturally short, recognition has been made for the "out-of-pocket" expenses. No decision of this sort has yet been made for this occasion.

FURIOUS ATTACKS AGAINST FINNS ARE BEATEN OFF

400 HORSES DESTROYED

Unofficial Accounts State 6,000 Russians in Salla District in Peril of Starvation

Helsingfors, Jan. 26 (AP)—Furious attacks against Finnish positions northeast of Lake Ladoga were continuing, the army communique said today, but Red Army troops everywhere had been thrown back.

A desperate Russian offensive in that region has been under way for almost a week with the Finns reporting no Soviet gains and the ice and snow of the battlefield covered with Russian dead.

An attempt to storm Fort Mantsi on the east coast of Lake Ladoga also failed, the army said, although the Russians made repeated attacks with artillery support.

Attacks All Beaten off

The communique, reviewing yesterday's activities, said the Finnish lines northeast of Lake Ladoga were under "almost unremitting pressure" but attacks "all were beaten off and our troops retained their positions everywhere."

"These attacks have proved very costly for the enemy," it continued. "Several companies were cut up and the number of fallen can be counted in the hundreds. In addition, certain columns of altogether over 400 horses were destroyed."

ARTILLERY DUEL ON VOSGES FRONT

French Open Fire When German Labor Squad Seen Reinforcing Positions

Paris, Jan. 26 (AP).—An artillery duel of several hours between French and German batteries in the Vosges Mountains on the western front was reported today by military sources.

These sources said the French opened fire when they received reports from outposts that German labor squads were working on reinforcements for advance positions. German batteries at once returned the fire.

Aerial forces on both sides, reports said, took advantage of the first clear weather in several days to send out reconnaissance flights.

One French plane flew deep over the German lines and met twelve enemy ships, reports said, but the lone ship outdistanced them and returned to its base.

Bombers, With Foreign Crews, Being Flown Across American Soil Then Over the Atlantic, Says N. Y. Paper

New York, Jan. 26 (CP) — The New York Herald Tribune says in a dispatch from Washington today that Lockheed bombing planes purchased in the United States by Great Britain "have been flying over American soil with foreign crews en route to Botwood, Nfld., whence they are flown across the Atlantic Ocean to be used on the Western front."

The trans-Atlantic flights, which the Herald Tribune says "involve violations of the American neutrality law which are being winked at," have been "going on for some time, as weather permits." The dispatch says the flights "will continue until the entire British order of 250 has been delivered."

The dispatch continues:

"The procedure now being employed to deliver Lockheed bombers to the British involves, oddly enough, the use of French crews rather than British crews. That is explicable on the ground that the British are much more hard-pressed in the air than the French at present and the French are relieving British aviation personnel by undertaking to make trans-Atlantic deliveries for their Allies.

"The American government has no adequate air patrol to keep these things from happening, even if it did not wink at the procedure."

Capital Closeups

(By Ross Munro, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Jan. 26—(CP)—A peek at Canada's four-hour parliamentary session that fooled everyone but the 16 cabinet ministers:

The betting was odds on that even private secretaries of the Minister's didn't have an inkling.... the dissolution and election were secrets known only to the cabinet.. if any Minister told his wife, she is one woman who can keep a secret....

A close advisor of the Prime Minister worked day and night until yesterday afternoon preparing material for his chief's scheduled speech in the Commons Monday.. He had enough copy for a week's address and slaved to cut it for four hours....The cabinet slashed it to nil by dissolution....

Developments snowballed in frantic sequence....From the Senate to the Commons to the Privy Council room to Rideau Hall.... Private members and opposition leaders still hold their heads after the most amazing four hours in the life of any Canadian parliament.

Newshawks in Dark

Newshawks in the Press gallery.. supposed to be in the know..they knew nothing of the Government's plan..The Press room was a madhouse..They ran out of messenger boys..More writers than any time in a decade exhausted desk space... They came from all over Canada.. A Washington correspondent landed in Ottawa at 8 p.m., to cover the session and found it was over.

Supreme confusion in the apartment and hotel situation..Many members contracted for living quarters until spring..There'll be a lot of lease-breaking and sub-letting... Telephone. and. telegraph wires buzzed across the continent as members tried to stall off their families' trek to the capital.

Some Senators Uninformed

Some members walked out of the Senate without knowing an election was called..They couldn't hear Lord Tweedsmuir's throne speech..The printing bureau was rushing publication of a book for the members' information..It gave details of war contracts expected to be tabled Monday..Now it waits until the next session likely.

The C.C.F.-ers were indignant at dissolution..Some of the Conservatives were optimistic about the situation, that is after they recovered from the first shock..Conservative leader Manion's secretary wisecracked: "Come up and see me in the east block sometime next spring."..That's where the Prime Minister's offices are....

Those are capital closeups of a session that nearly wasn't.

LONGER RECESS NOW PLANNED FOR ONTARIO HOUSE

Premier Hepburn and Provincial Secretary Nixon Refuse to Comment on Election

BUDGET DELAYED

Toronto, Jan. 29 (CP).—Premier Hepburn was still suffering today from an attack of bronchitis but it was expected at Queen's Park that he would address the Ontario Legislature this afternoon in reply to Prime Minister King's declaration that the Ontario censure vote made the federal election imperative.

John Freeborn (Lib. Middlesex North) who supported Premier Mitchell Hepburn's motion of censure last week on the federal government said he didn't think he'd be taking part in the federal campaign.

Dr. A. S. Duncan (Lib. London) who was not in the House when the censure vote was taken said "after all I am a Liberal".

Angus Dickson (Lib. Perth) who voted against the premier's motion, said Liberal organization in his riding was 100 per cent behind Prime Minister King.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn, absent from the House Thursday, said last night he had "no comment" on the announcement of the federal election. Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, leading the House, also said "no comment"..

Mr. Nixon said he did not think the plans for a recess of the legislature session to start next week would be affected, but political circles speculated that the recess would be lengthened.

When announcing the recess, Premier Hepburn said that the anticipated revision of federal taxation and other things rising from the war would affect seriously Ontario's finances. If provincial revenues are further impaired by federal action, Ontario's budget will be thrown even more seriously off gear.

Budget Delayed.

It was predicted that presentation of the Ontario budget will not be delayed until after the parliament soon to be elected has met at Ottawa and decided on federal taxation. If federal income taxes are increased, then Ontario is likely to follow suit.

'INSOLENT SNUB TO PARLIAMENT' MEIGHEN STATES

'Act of High-Handed Arrogance' Says Conservative Leader in Senate

SURPRISE EXPRESSED

Toronto, Jan. 26 (CP). — Commenting on Prime Minister King's sudden dissolution of parliament yesterday, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen declared today that "a more insolent snub to parliament could not be conceived".

"Certainly it was a surprise," the Conservative leader in the senate said. "No one would believe any prime minister capable of such an affront. It is an act of high-handed arrogance and committed appropriately enough by a man who has spent a great deal of his life faking charges of autocracy against others."

Mr. Meighen would not comment on his party's campaign plans.

CONSUMPTION HARD LIQUORS SHOWS DECREASE

Sales of Native Wines Up With Imported Wines Down Considerably

Toronto, Jan. 26 (CP).—An increasing taste for domestic wines and a slight falling off in consumption of hard liquors and beer was revealed in the report of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, covering operations for the year ending Mar. 31, 1939, which was tabled in the legislature yesterday.

Total sales, total profit, sales from liquor stores, breweries, brewers' warehouses and beer export sales all decreased when compared with the previous twelve months, but sales of native wines were up. There was a small increase in gallonage consumption of imported spirits but this was overcome by a greater percentage of decrease in consumption of domestic spirits. Sales of imported wines were down.

APRIL SESSION OF PARLIAMENT IF LIBERALS WIN

Prime Minister States Cabinet Will be Fully Organized Before Election

NO DISCORD IN CAUCUS

Liberal Caucus Gives King Enthusiastic Reception and Vote of Confidence

Ottawa. Jan. 26—(CP)—At the close of a Liberal caucus today Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the general election would probably be held March 26 but he would not know definitely until he had a final report from the chief electoral officer.

The Prime Minister also said that he would go to the country with his cabinet fully organized so that the people would know exactly who would be in the government if they returned the Liberal party. He said he would call another session of parliament early in April if his party wins at the polls.

Caucus gave the Prime Minister an enthusiastic reception and a vote of confidence in his leadership. "There was not one discordant note" the Prime Minister said, "but there was the utmost enthusiasm and the greatest demonstration of loyalty any leader ever received."

Mr. Mackenzie King was told of Conservative leader Manion's statement that, if victorious, he would form a national government calling in the best brains in the country to assist him in the administration.

"Ask him who the best minds in the country are," the Prime Minister said. "Let him state during the campaign who will be in his government and not wait until after the election.

"I expect to bring back the same administration. There may be some changes in the next few weeks but the people will know who they are being asked to vote for."

Loud Cheers Heard

Loud cheers frequently were heard through the guarded doors of the Caucus Chamber where the Prime Minister and his supporters in the House of Commons and the Senate sat for two and one-half hours.

The vote of confidence was moved by Malcolm McLean (Lib. Melfort) and seconded by Ernest Bertrand (Lib. Montreal-Laurier).

Speeches were made by every Minister and every one of them endorsed dissolution as the proper thing to do at this stage, the Prime Minister said.

"The party is quite evidently of one mind and there was not one discordant note.

"I don't know what others may do but if our government comes back we will seek to bring Parliament together in April. That means Ottawa will not lose its annual session but it will be starting, where usually it finishes.

Parliament With Mandate

"And it will be a parliament with a direct mandate from the people".

Normally general elections are always held on Monday but the earliest Monday which it now seems possible to hold the election is Easter, March 25, which means the voting will be on Tuesday, March 26, unless it is found possible to bring it on earlier.

It was the Prime Minister's hope, he said, that it might be possible to get the election over before the Easter holiday and the chief electoal officer was still studying the situation to see if that might be done.

New Device Increases the Lift of Plane Wings by 300 Per Cent.

By DEVON FRANCIS
(Associated Press Aviation Editor)

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Successful conclusion of a 10-year search for a means of trebling the lift of airplane wings—and thereby open a new avenue to increased speed — was announced today by Professor E. A. Stalker, head of the Department of Aeronautical Engineering at the University of Michigan.

In a paper prepared for the annual meeting of the institute of the aeronautical sciences Professor Stalker described a system which permits a reduction in an airplane's wing area by two-thirds.

As a result, he said, the speed of a plane having a top rating of 400 miles an hour could be boosted to approximately 500 miles an hour.

Used without a reduction in wing area, the Stalker invention would reduce the landing speeds of airplanes almost by half.

His device, he told the institute, permits high rates of climb and low speeds of descent without the usual danger of losing lateral control, loss of which, with resulting stalls and spins, has accounted for as much as 80 per cent of airplane accidents.

Professor Stalker achieved a 300 per cent increase in the lifting capacity of wings by sucking the "dead" air off the top surface and permitting "live" air to flood the space it occupied. "Dead" air clings to the upper surface of a wing, covering about one half the wing area.

He sucked off the dead air with a centrifugal blower communicating with a narrow split in the wing surface about 70 per cent back from the leading edge.

Mackenzie King Seeks Mandate From the People

FOUR-HOUR SESSION

Sixth Session of 18th Parliament Shortest in History of Dominion — Hon. Dr. Manion, Leader of Opposition, Denounces Move as "Unscrupulous Politics"

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Jan. 26 (CP) — Canada will have a wartime election at the earliest possible moment, perhaps the last week in March.

Taking up the challenge thrown to him and his ministers by Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Lieut.-Col. George Drew, leaders respectively of the Liberal and Conservative parties in Ontario, Prime Minister Mackenzie King seeks a new mandate from the people.

The sixth and final session of the 18th. Parliament of Canada began and ended yesterday, an unprecedented day in Canadian parliamentary history.

Never before has a session lasted only four hours. Never before have members left the House at six o'clock for dinner, expecting to resume at eight o'clock and learned at seven o'clock after a cabinet meeting that they were mere private citizens again.

Whatever the result of the election the first session of the new parliament will likely assemble in April or May. It must vote the funds for all government activities, including the war, in the fiscal year starting April 1.

The government's lightning move did not go without protest. Conservative leader Manion denounced it as "unscrupulous politics," "disgraceful", "sneering at parliament", "a political trick."

Acting Like Dictator Claim

J. S. Woodsworth, veteran parliamentary leader of the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation, said the Prime Minister was acting like a dictator.

Miss Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Labor, Grey-Bruce) was on her feet when the House rose for dinner. Her speech went unsaid.

200,000,000 Parasites Released to Combat Dread Spruce Sawfly

Montreal, Jan. 26 (CP) — More than 200,000,000 parasites were released in the forests of five Canadian provinces last year to combat the dread spruce sawfly, A. B. Baird of the Dominion Parasite Laboratory at Belleville, Ont., reported in an address prepared for delivery today at the annual meeting of the Woodlands Section of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association.

More than half the number were spread through Quebec where in 1932 ravages of the sawfly in the Gaspe Peninsula brought attention to the insect's menare to spruce forests, and almost as many were released in New Brunswick. The comparatively small remaining number of parasites went to Ontario, Nova Scotia and Manitoba.

"For the first time since the campaign against the European spruce sawfly was started," said Mr. Baird, "we can discuss the parasite situation in a somewhat more optimistic vein."

He said two species of parasites imported to Canada and now naturalized have greatly increased the population and one species particularly has "in some areas destroyed millions of the sawfly pest, giving us reason to hope that our great spruce forests may yet be spared the disaster that appeared imminent in 1932."

CANADIAN TROOPS TO CAST VOTES

Soldier Vote in Election Will be Taken Under Authority of War Measures Act

Ottawa, Jan. 26 (CP)—Canada's soldiers at home and on overseas duty will cast their votes in the Dominion elections, though the procedure to be adopted has not been finally approved.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King indicated in the House of Commons yesterday that the soldier vote might be made under authority of the War Measures Act.

During the first Great War, Canadian soldiers voted from the trenches in the general elections of 1917. Polling was held December 17, but it took three months to count the soldier vote, and the result was not known until March 15, 1918.

Improved election machinery is expected to tabulate the soldier vote more rapidly in the coming election.

Voters lists for the soldiers will be carefully compiled, and those with a franchise will exercise it in much the same way as commercial travellers, seafarers, and railroad workers now cast their vote in an advance poll when their duties take them far from home and their assigned polling station.

DOG GETS ARTIFICIAL FOOT

Delmar, N.Y., Jan. 26 (AP) — George W. Taylor's foxhound soon will be running foxes again—with a shoe substituting for the paw lost in a trap a year ago. The paw was amputated. An orthopedic doctor designed the foot covering, similar to a child's high shoe without a heel. The toe has a spring to cushion the dog's step.

PLENTY OF SUGAR

Montreal, Jan. 26 (CP)—S. R. Noble, Federal Sugar Controller under the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, in a statement here today said "sugar is the one commodity in connection with which no shortage may be anticipated.

"On the contrary," he added, "there is a large surplus in the world and the most important producing countries, such as Cuba and Java, are artificially restricting output greatly below the figures of previous production and their actual factory capacity."

PLAN TO ASSIST TROOPS OUTLINED BY REV. J. ALLEN

Canadian Legion War Services Inc., Will Provide Education, Entertainment, Recreation, Sports, for Troops Overseas

TO RAISE $500,000

Army and Navy Veterans of Canada Belleville Unit No. 201 Will Undertake to Raise $2,000 of This Amount

The "Boys of the Old Brigade" will go in harness again. Not the harness of web equipment of twenty years ago, although a great many of them have gone over, but that of service and equipment necessary to the things to come after the war is over, to the lads of the "New Army" that were denied the "Old Sweats" after the last war had ended.

Physical incapacities make it impossible for many of the old C.E.F. to join for active service again, but they feel it is their duty, as well as their indisputable right, to provide for the needs of the young men who have answered the call and who are now serving in the naval, land and air services of the Dominion.

The Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League has received a Dominion Charter to constitute an organization known as the Canadian Legion War Services, Inc. which will provide education, personal services, entertainment, recreation and sports to the troops overseas.

Representative Group

The plan as outlined to a group of representative Belleville citizens by the Rev. J. Maxwell Allen, chief of personal services, Canadian Legion War Services, in Ottawa, at an impromptu banquet held in the Hotel Quinte last night, calls for one half-million dollars from those of us who live in Canada. Allotments have been made the Rev. Maxwell said, and Belleville's contribution is $2,000.00

Representatives of Belleville at the meeting included Colonel P. H. Wills, Lieut. Col. A. B. Gribble, Argyll Light Infantry (Tank); Messrs. Jewell, Dredge, Sisler, bank managers; Erie Denyes, the County of Hastings; Alderman Harry Rollins, the City of Belleville; President Fred Wiggins and Secretary A. Lazenby; the Army and Navy Veterans; N. Edwards, Y.M.C.A.; Rev. G. G. Wright, Belleville Ministerial Association and Geo. Ellarly, local legionnaire.

After serious discussion, it was decided that, owing to the absence of a functioning branch of the Canadian Legion in this city, the Army and Navy Veterans of Canada, Belleville Branch No. 201, would consider undertaking the raising of the Belleville allotment, providing credit was given the organization by the executives of the Canadian Legion.

Objective Supported

Colonel P. A. Wills and Lieut. Col. A. B. Gribble spoke in support of the project, the main points of their argument being that while all veterans of this district would be in accord with the drive, due to fact that only active veterans' organization in Belleville was the A. and N., that that organization should be given credit. Secretary Lazenby of the A. and N. Veterans stated that he felt his organization would be 100 per cent behind the project, providing that the necessary credit be given them. President Fred Wiggins supported the statement.

Following is an address given by the Rev. Maxwell Allen in which he pointed out the aims and objectives of the newly-formed Canadian Legion War Services. Incidentally the drive for the two thousand dollar fund starts on Feb. 12.

Education

The Canadian Legion War Services, in collaboration with the Canadian Association for Adult Education, is making it possible for members the forces to continue, in a large measure, their educational studies even though on active service. Committees, comprised of outstanding educationists, are being formed in each military district and facilities are being made available for the continuation of public school education and for such general studies as current events and economics, as well as for work in agriculture, technical subjects, skilled trades, book-keeping, stenography and secretarial work. In some instances conversational and military French and German will be taught, and advanced students may even obtain their matriculation or B.A. degree by correspondence through arrangements made with certain universities. Overseas similar facilities will be provided and the close co-operation of British and French educationists is assured.

The method of instruction followed is principally that of modern education, such as talks, discussions and allotted reading rather than mere lectures. The importance of visual education has not been overlooked and moving pictures will be utilized extensively for this purpose. In this work the Legion has the full support of the departments of education in all nine provinces, as well as the universities and municipal authorities in all parts of Canada.

Personal Services

The years of experience behind its parent body in dealing with personal problems of veterans of the First Great War, enables the Canadian Legion War Services to be of tremendous help to the new enlistments. Long-established facilities, including war padres, are at the disposal of our present fighting forces, whose personnel may receive advice and guidance from their older comrades on the intricate problems arising from war service, including rehabilitation afterwards and personal and home problems of all kinds while on service.

Entertainment

An important part of the Canadian Legion's entertainment programme is the development of concert parties within the Active Service Forces. Experienced legion personnel will mould the men selected into self-contained companies which, properly costumed and equipped, will entertain the units, both in Canada and overseas.

From time to time, and dependent upon future needs, there will be amplification of certain other entertainment features such as lectures by outstanding speakers, musical programmes and dramatic presentations. Various types of moving pictures are presently being shown and it is contemplated that when finances permit, mobile moving picture units will be utilized to permit the greater expansion in this important field.

Recreation and Sports

The Canadian Legion War Services has undertaken, when requested to do so by the officers commanding, the establishment of recreation huts in military centres where the organization will operate. It is uppermost in the minds of the legion leaders that a wholesale and home-like atmosphere be maintained throughout, and with this in view, plenty of books, magazines, games and facilities for letter-writing, including free note-paper and envelopes, are being made available to the men. In addition, sports of all kinds will be organized and dry canteens operated for the convenience of the men.

Overseas

The Canadian Legion War Services is also establishing leave centre hostels in England and France. Here the men will be provided with beds and meals at nominal cost, and such home-like facilities as recreation and reading-rooms will be at their disposal free of charge. Travel bureaux will also be opened where men on leave will be assisted in planning tours of historic spots in the British Isles and France.

Another important undertaking of the Canadian Legion War Services overseas will be that of procuring invitations from warm-hearted British families who will offer Canadian soldiers on leave the hospitality of their homes.

Profits

The Canadian Legion War Services and the Dominion Executive Council of the Legion, at the formation of the wartime undertaking, laid down a mandate that the new organization is to be non-profit making and that any funds remaining at the close of the war are to be used exclusively for the benefit of ex-service men and their families.

Collegiate News

Did you know that the 1940 "Elevator" will not be printed? Unless, you—an I do mean you, contribute in some way to the publication of this magazine.

The "Elevator" requires a great number of snapshots and pen and ink sketches in order to produce a colourful and artistic magazine. We are also in drastic need of a good cover design. Short stories, essays, poems, form news and jokes are desired. Are you going to contribute something to your School Year Book? If you are not, you show that you have no school spirit. So, come on, you high spirited students of B.C.I.V.S., show your spirit and co-operation through the medium of the "Elevator", and contribute something. Don't leave it to "JOE".

Red Cross

On Wednesday afternoon, January 24, at 4.15 oclock, the Collegiate Red Cross Club held a tea meeting in the school apartment. The tea, which was Miss Dwyer's treat, was served first, and then the real work began. Miss Sweeney poured tea and Miss Billings and Miss McPherson were also present. Most of the girls had their sewing or knitting on hand, but those who were unfortunate enough to come without theirs, soon fund themselves winding wool.

Our work is getting well under way now and your reporter noticed many pairs of socks which will soon be keeping soldiers warm in Aldershot or perhaps even in France. —P. E. B.

The first scheduled games in the year's basket ball series were played to sharp decisions in the Collegiate gym on Wednesday. In the Senior series with Albert College, the B.C.I.V.S. team scored a victory with a close decision of 22-21. The game had plenty of pace throughout and certainly brought out the best in both teams. In the Junior game however, the Albert players took over to a 20-14 victory. A good season is expected in the year's basketball series; so let's have your complete co-operation, gang!

Leaders of Agricultural Boards Must be Community Leaders During Duration of Conflict

J. A. Carroll of the Dept. of Agriculture Addresses Delegates to Central Fairs Association

FAIR DATES CHOSEN

W. J. Duncan, Campbellford, Chosen as President With Mrs. C. Whytock, Madoc, Lady Director of Association

"Not only is it the duty of officials of agricultural societies to give leadership in the communities they represent, but the chief work of every individual whether official or otherwise to make his or her contribution to the nation and the empire in the hour of stress," J. A. Carroll, secretary of the Ontario Fairs Association declared here yesterday afternoon.

Speaking before seventy-five delegates to the Central Ontario Fairs Association annual convention held in the City Hall Council Chambers, he told his audience that "it behooves you to be on the alert and ready for any emergency on the "home front" as it is for the boys on the "battle front". You must have the machinery set up within your societies and be ready to go out and give leadership."

"I am confident," he declared, "that no matter what sacrifice may be required, the loyal men and women of agricultural Canada, as in former years, will give their contributions to bring about what we hope will be, an early and everlasting peace."

Picture Not Very Clear.

Rural Canada must hold itself in readiness, the speaker declared. The agricultural picture as yet is not very clear, for with the exception of a few commodities, the government has not stated definitely what is required of the dominion or of each province. We therefore must govern ourselves accordingly.

"We have a bacon contract," he said, "therefore it is not necessary to urge bacon production. Already there is a 35 per cent increase in farrowing sows this year. But the responsibility we do have in connection with bacon is the production of high quality. It is the duty of everyone to see to this for the market we have gained in wartime will hold good when peace comes if Canada sends the best quality she can produce.

"Cheese is needed," he said. "The prices are going up and factories which in other years were dormant are now manufacturing in winter months. But to produce both bacon and cheese, we must have crops and that is where the farmer in general can make his contribution."

He urged his listeners to take interest in and develop the sowing and raising of certified seed, boys' clubs, calf clubs, swine clubs and other farming sponsorships."Tons of weeds were sown in Ontario last year," he declared.

Advocated Good Pasture.

"The most important crop in Ontario last year in respect to acreage was pasture," Mr. Carroll told the delegates. "Second comes hay." He advocated good pastures for these, he said, were much higher in protein value than good grain crops or hay. Thousands of dollars were lost last year because hay was cut too late. "Before the year is out," he said, "with hogs to fatten, grain may be scarce. If your pasture is good, you won't need so much grain and you are getting feed much cheaper. It is good farm practice in wartime, also in peace."

Referring to what he called agricultural equipment, Mr. Carroll said that prices in 1939 were lower than those of 1913 with some exceptions. Yet the farmer of today has all modern accessories—radio, electricity, tractors, implements, automobiles.

"How does he pay for them? By burning up his farm, letting his buildings depreciate, no money in the bank. But for all that, the farmer of today is more efficient than his predecessor of 1913. That is proved in the fact that 66 per cent more was produced last year than in the first war year." He warned the farmer to use all the information available to make wartime adjustments in the management of their farms.

Acreage Highest In World.

Canadian acreage to her agricultural workers was the highest in the world, with an average of eighty, he said. The U.S.A. average was 50, Britain 30, Denmark 15, and Germany 7. The Germans are good farmers, farm efficiently, have large herds and modern equipment.

"Hitler and his colleagues have done their utmost to put Germany on a self-sustaining basis as far as agriculture is concerned" he said. "Hence the poor farmer is not allowed to stay on his farm if production is not forthcoming. He is hauled before a board and his land taken away from him and given to another who has shown the ability to produce. The Germans are efficient, but not sufficiently so to overcome the great difference in agricultural acreage per man.

Referring to the fall fairs, Mr. Carroll pointed out that last year was not such a good one for the societies. The weather was not favorable. War has been declared and people were in a state of uncertainty, which led to a decrease in box office receipts.

"But" he said, "exhibits were increased. Broader projects were carried out and there was an increase in field crop competitions as evidenced in the fifteen held in this district."

Urged Beautification of Properties

He deplored the fact that no beautification projects were carried out in the district, "I must admit that you live in one of the most beautiful sections of Ontario, one that does not need the beautification that other areas do, but there are still a few homes, barns, churches, halls, etc., that should be painted to complete the picture against the background of such beautiful surroundings."

He urged each one to go out and plant a tree or conduct reforestation in realization of the fact that they cannot be uprooted by enemy bombs or trampled by the feet of alien armies." It is a grand thought, so let us go out and do more of this work in thankfulness, that we live on a continent where such conditions are possible."

Explaining the aims of the Ontario Chamber of Agriculture to federate agricultural organizations so that the industry will have one voice in the county, province and Dominion, the speaker declared that the Ontario Board had joined the Chamber, and that county federations were now in the process of being formed. Industry and manufacture, the professions and other bodies are fully organized, he said, prophesying thorough organization for agriculture in the near future.

Grants About the Same

He could not tell the convention anything definite about various grants until the estimates had been handed down, he said. However, he hoped there would be no appreciable reduction.

Brief addresses were given by Ian McLeod, agricultural representative of Northumberland, A. Buchanan, of Napanee, Fred Mallory representing H. L. Fair, Hastings County, who was unable to be present. District Director Harry Redner, newly elected President W. J. Duncan and Vice-President Robt. Wood.

Six societies were represented at the ladies' meeting held in the morning under the chairmanship of Miss Mabel Van Kougnet of Napanee. Mrs. Whytock, Madoc, was reappointed lady district director. She spoke briefly at the afternoon session.

Election of officers resulted in the following: President, W. J. Duncan, Campbellford; 1st. Vice-President, Robt. Woods, Madoc; 2nd. Vice-President, Herbert Nelson, Warkworth; Secretary-Treasurer, Louis Hay, Campbellford; Auditors, Fred Mallory, Stirling, and Clarence Varcoe, Roseneath; District Director, W. J. Ross, Campbellford. Delegate to the Ontario Fairs convention, E. M. Wessels, Wooler, Ont.

THE KING HONORS FIRST DIVISION

His Majesty King George Sixth honored the Canadians of the First Division of the C.A.S.F. at Aldershot this week when he spent five hours with them, inspected three units of which he is colonel-in-chief and visited every one of the units in the camp. As a memento of the occasion he received from Major - General McNaughton, O.C., of the First Division, a small piece of bunting symbolic of the flag of the division. It will be treasured. The King afterwards had a message sent to General McNaughton which appeared in orders today. It related the Sovereign's pleasure at meeting the troops.

His Majesty has happy recollections of the weeks he spent in the New World last spring when he visited Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific and then from the Pacific to the Atlantic and paid a visit to the United States and Newfoundland. At Aldershot he was among Canadians, whose fine discipline and appearance he praised. Many of the men and youths in the various units of the division had seen him in Canada when he established a precedent to be the first British sovereign to land in the New World and to officiate on occasions in the Dominion as the King of Canada. Now in a far different setting, one of war and war preparation, as contrasted with the peace of last May and June in the western world, His Majesty associated with Canadian defenders who had come to the defence of the Empire.

Such an occasion will never be forgotten.

Canadians in the C.A.S.F. at Aldershot, Canadians in Britain and Canadians at home as well as the people of the Motherland must have felt the thrill of that scene when the Sovereign was among the stalwart men of his oldest Dominion.

EMPIRE SPIRIT AND EMPIRE AIR TRAINING

The Empire spirit which has been the very breath of the Motherland and the Dominions and Colonies continues to grow in its power and influence. In the United Kingdom there have been all the realities and evidences of the spirit of the British Empire's unity as troops from the Dominions have arrived to play their part in the defence of liberty. This week there has begun for Canada an intensification of this spirit with the arrival of 270 R.A.F. men to aid in training in the great Empire Air Training Plan.

The E.A.T.P. now becomes one of the greatest realities of this war and one of the major factors in the drive on to victory and the crushing of Hitler.

Canada now realizes something of the fulness of the thought behind this scheme and the honor which has been done her in being chosen as the training ground for the Empire forces of the air.

Vast as the scheme is no time has been lost in putting it into action. Canada is chosen because she is the nearest Dominion, because she has an ideal atmoshere and because there are large spaces in which the air recruits can learn their business without possibility of interruption.

EXPERIENCES OF NONAGENARIANS

In these days the octogenarian and the nonagenarian occupy deserved notice. Newspapers give space to the life stories of these people who have triumphed over time and sickness, have passed long since the three-score-and-ten year age and from the heights of their august years can look back with a great deal of interest on the years which lie behind them. They have seen a moving panorama of individual, family, social, national and international life pass before their gaze. There was a time when scenes may not have been so striking as they often are today, because modern devices have intensified interest in current affairs.

Those who came up from the years when there was more isolation and perhaps more solid individual thinking and when there were fewer thrills, can look on the present as well as the past with their interest undiminished. Their latter years have seen an amazing development in the world. But time has not dulled their perceptions for they somehow are as keen in the doings of today as they were in the events of their bygone years.

Today a man of eighty-five or ninety does not grow weary of the endless procession of events, for each event, brief as it may be and sometimes soon forgotten, is a momentary halt or stop in the endless chain of circumstances, events and of cause and effect which make up life and time.

It is a pleasure in these days to see the hale folks in the late eighties and nineties preserving interest in the day's happenings.

Such men and women have been favored beyond most. They have seen life sanely and they have seen it whole. It is undoubtedly more difficult for one who passes away early in years to have grasped the full meaning of life, understanding of which comes not altogether with attempts to solve life's mystery and problems but which owes something to the passing of the years. Those who are on the heights have learned something of the patience and serenity which is wisdom. They have a kindliness which is proverbial. Crotchety old folk exist chiefly in the imagination of the younger, not in fact. Newspapers carry the words of wisdom of the life-experience of the august citizens, these senators of life and the world reads because their life stories and views on life contain sane philosophy which can do much to help those who have not arrived at their eighties and nineties.

It is a good sign these days to see this interest in the older folk. A people that does not respect its elders would not endure. The Chinese are a great race and perhaps some of the serenity and calm they possess and shed around them are owing to the honor and respect they show their parents and grandparents, and to their aged people.

ENTERTAINERS' SALARIES

While the world may have lost some of the intimacy of the home of the old days, it has gained in other intimacies. One of these new intimacies is the great educator, the sound moving picture. Today people know their screen actors as they never could have known their stage actors. They take an interest in the stars of the movies and they flock to see their favorites.

There was a time when the people at large knew little of what big-salaries men were paid Today they know a great deal about this and they are interested and satisfied that they know how the stars are valued by the film corporations. Up to the time of the coming of the films with the large salaries paid the leading actors, and the coming of the income tax laws, indeed people knew little of the personalities of those drawing large salaries. Today while some of the chief executives of industrial corporations may be paid above a good many of the screen actors, there are not nearly so many who reach such salaries, whereas there are a great many actors who are paid in six figures for their work with the film corporations. The actors of course are the best known and have their following and hence their value to the corporations is so much greater.

There was a day when the actor was not well paid. In the late Middle Ages and in the days of the Renaissance and even later actors in England had to form a company under the protection of some noble. It is a great change to the present age with the highly-paid screen stars. But on the stage even today actors do not earn anything like the salaries paid the motion picture folk. Yet many stage stars appear in films and add to their earnings in that way. Many stalwarts of the films have given noble service to the films with their fine acting.

Below are some of the actors and others of the screen world and the salaries, bonuses, commissions and other sums paid by the film corporations for personal services in the calendar year 1938 or the fiscal year ending in 1939. These sums have been given out by the Treasury at Washington:—

By The Canadian Press

After a brief respite following the first Russian thrusts Finland's gallant defenders are again fighting off powerful attacks while the civilian population is harassed by air raids whenever good flying conditions prevail.

In the present fighting the Russians suffer heavy casualties but reports from the front suggest the Soviet commanders have troops of better calibre than in the first stages of the war and are using them more intelligently.

Should the Russians fail to smash the Finns now they will probably not get another chance to attack in force under winter conditions. It is nearly two months since the Russians marched across the Finnish border and if the Finns succeed defeating them a second time now they may be safe from further land attacks for an indefinite period.

Operations in the period of the spring breakup when the heavy winter snow is melting and the ice on rivers and lakes is softening would be hazardous if not impossible and in late spring and summer different methods would be in order. The Russians would be unable to move their tanks and heavy vehicles as they can when the ground, the marshes and the lakes are frozen. Under summer conditions the Finns might be able to employ their guerilla methods with even greater effect than in the past.

Finland's danger lies in the weariness of troops on constant duty at the front and the effectiveness of Russian air attacks on the civilian population. If the Russians continue to bomb towns and cities with hundreds of aircraft the morale of the people is bound to suffer and the distribution of food and other supplies to the people as well as to the troops may be so disrupted as to cause serious difficulty.

If It's Colder Where You Are Check Your Thermometer

"Good heavens! Can't you tell it's cold?"

This was one man's grumbling response to his companion who had asked him to wait while he had a look at a thermometer, which was down nearly to zero.

These two represent the schools of thought on thermometer readings. Some don't care, but many like to know exactly where the mercury stands.

For the benefit of the latter, Prof. Albert J. Kelly, of the McGill University observatory, today gave The Montreal Star a few hints as to how a thermometer should be properly placed for accurate readings, for Montreal outdoor thermometers are notoriously variable as is amply demonstrated on any particularly cold day in winter or hot day in summer.

The variability can be laid to one of two reasons, either the thermometers themselves are inaccurate, or they are improperly placed.

If the fault lies in the thermometer not much can be done about it, except perhaps to check it with the official recordings and thus get some idea of the variation. But if the thermometer is merely being affected by too close proximity to the building, it is another matter.

First of all, Professor Kelly said, there should be free circulation of air on all sides. The instrument should not be placed against the wall or too close to the window pane. Normally, a bracket extending the thermometer three or four inches out should be enough.

Wind ordinarily does not affect a thermometer. It may do so, however, when moisture on the glass tube is dried by the wind, which has the effect of reducing the temperature recording to an extent depending on the heat radiation.

The proper way to obviate this—although most householders will not want to go to the trouble—is to use a thermometer screen. This is a box with downward vents at a 45 degree angle on all four sides, both inside and out, which not only break the wind and keep out snow, sleet or the direct rays of the sun, but at the same time allow free circulation of the air.

A thermometer should face north, and if it is in a screen box, the door should be on the north side so that the sun does not get at the instrument when the door is opened.

For the benefit of those who have their thermometers on a long arm or bracket that jiggles up and down in the wind, Professor Kelly stated that this has no effect upon the reading.

The best thermometers are the maximum and minimum thermometers similar to those used in weather bureau stations. These are certified and have the graduations etched right on to the glass tube itself rather than on the base or frame. These run from about $10 up in price.

The greatest range in temperature differences that may be expected in the city at any given time is three or four degrees, Professor Kelly pointed out. So if your thermometer is out more than this when checked with the official readings, you can take it for granted there is something wrong either with the thermometer or the way in which it is placed.

Allies Gaining Air Supremacy Says N. Y. Times Military Writer

If Germany is going to make use of any air force superiority she might have, she would have to use it this year, Hanson Baldwin, naval and military writer for the New York Times, told the Canadian Club of Montreal on Monday, says the Montreal Star.

He explained that at the present moment figures seemed to indicate that German output of aircraft was some 500 machines a month greater than that of Great Britain, because Germany had been on a war production basis for a long time before war was declared, but Britain and France were rapidly lessening the difference in output, and with the machines they were able to purchase from the United States, the Allied capacity would soon be superior.

In regard to land forces, Mr. Baldwin said, Germany was now almost at the peak of her capacity, and if she was to make a supreme war effort on land it would have to be this year, for after that her forces would begin to be depleted.

As to warfare at sea Mr. Baldwin pointed out that here Germany had had the most success, and her submarine and mine warfare must not be under-rated, but the fact that an average of 6,200 tows of shipping of the allied and neutral nations had been sunk per day out of 64,000,000 tons that constituted the world's shipping, as against 22,000 tons a day in the last war, indicated that the Allied convoy and mine field systems were working effectively.

Discussing the future, he said he did not think Germany was in any immediate danger of a food shortage despite the fact her people could not get butter and eggs— she probably had enough food for a year or two, but if her supplies of oil, rubber, copper and other raw materials were curtailed Germany could not long continue to wage war unless she could get supplies from Russia.

As to the possibility of Germany extending her invasion into the Balkan States, Mr. Baldwin did not think this likely unless she was sure she could get supplies from them, and if she did do so it would help the Allies because it would give them another front. As to the position of Belgium, the latter's defences were much strengthened to prevent a wide sweeping movement into France.

Mr. Baldwin discussed the possibilities of Britain attempting a landing on the North coast of Germany or establishing a base in a Baltic port, but thought both attempts would entail heavy losses. On the other hand if Germany sought to help Russia in Finland or attacked any of the Scandinavian countries, the fighting on the northern front would undoubtedly have an important bearing on the conduct of the war.

Mr. Baldwin said the Allied pursuit planes had shown better manoeuvrability than the new German Messerschmidts. Summing up the whole situation, he said he believed that this year would see big air and sea attacks rather than land battles.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Peptic Ulcer is Due to the Patient's Personality

One of the jokes about the medical profession is that when the physician doesn't know what is the matter with a patient, he sends him on a trip or vacation. Particularly is this the case in those who have a poor appetite and do not sleep well.

As a matter of fact, the physician after examination found what is "not" the matter with the patient—it is not cancer, but there is a real chance of a peptic ulcer— in stomach or small intestine, developing if the patient does not get a change of surroundings.

Dr. T. G. Miller, Philadelphia, in Virginia Medical Monthly states that peptic ulcer is more than just an ulcer of the stomach or small intestine. "The physician must concern himself with the person's heredity, with his physical, mental, and emotional make-up, with the nature of his gland and nervous system, his surroundings, social standing, and personal habits of life."

"The patient is usually of a nervous temperament, worries unduly, and is usually looking inward. He is nervous in the sense of being fearful, highly sensitive, intense and strenuous. Peptic ulcer often develops in predisposed people — slender, nervous—when they are under unusual emotional strain, continued worry and anxiety."

Personal habits which involve overwork, loss of sleep and nervous exhaustion deserve special attention in prevention and treatment. There is an excess of hydrochloric acid present in all those with peptic ulcer, although all with excess hydrochloric acid do not have peptic ulcer. By the use of alkalies, this acid is neutralized, which is a part of the treatment and cure.

When we study the above facts as outlined by Dr. Miller and look about among our friends and acquaintances whom we know have peptic ulcer, it can readily be seen how a trip, a vacation, that takes the individual away from his surroundings with their fears, worries and anxieties, and places him amid new surroundings, different food, and a change in the cooking, beginning or early peptic ulcer is prevented or is soon treated. A change of scenery often helps.

"IS THE WAR STILL ON?"

The other day, a young man marched into the Calgary recruiting office, intent on joining the army. Already, in his mind's eye, he was wearing battle dress. But he could not join the army. They had no place for him; they had no place for thousands more like him in Alberta. "Oh!" he said in a burst of disappointment, "is the war still on?"

There are a lot of disappointed young men in Alberta. There are between 4,000 and 5,000 young men in this province who are desperately anxious to join up. And there are as many more who are willing to join, and are only waiting for the call.

Every day, they walk into the recruiting office, only to get turned back. Some day: "That's a funny thing!" And others, stung to bitterness: "Maybe when they want me, they won't get me!" — Calgary Herald.

MACKENZIE KING

In the Senate, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, said it was an insult to parliament to call members together without having any legislation to lay before them.

Although he denounced the governments methods Dr. Manion welcomed the election. For him it means the chance of becoming Prime Minister of Canada at the age of 48. The prospect of leading Canada through the difficult years of the war and its aftermath looms before him.

He complained of being taken by surprise by the government's action but made a fighting speech winding up with the declaration:

Manion Confident of Winning

"I am confident the Prime Minister and the government will be swept out of power and some other group will be put in power to carry on the affairs of the country and its war effort."

The government's decision, announced in the Speech from the Throne turned an opening day which looked rather tame in advance into one of intense excitement. Liberals and Conservatives alike were taken by surprise.

Few members of the House caught the announcement as Lord Tweedsmuir read it in the Speech from the Throne. They stood at the bar of the Senate Chamber and it was hard for them to hear every word.

Receive Pay for One Day

To members who came from a distance and engaged houses or apartments in Ottawa for the session, dissolution came as a shock. Instead of receiving $4,000, the full sessional indemnity, they will receive $25, the pay for one day.

Six new members, elected since the special war session in September were introduced formally to enjoy parliamentary privileges for only a few hours.

Here again history was made. For the first time a woman member introduced a new member. Miss Macphail, accompanied by Joseph Needham (S. C. The Battlefords) sponsored Rev. Walter Brown, new United Reform member for Saskatoon, who lacks party affiliations.

Orders-in-Council Tabled

The Prime Minister tabled copies of all orders-in-council passed in connection with the war but a vast amount of additional information which would ordinarily come out during the session will remain in obscurity.

Special precautions were taken to keep the decision secret until the appropriate moment. Newspaper correspondents, who usually received a copy of the throne speech a little in advance of delivery were denied this accommodation.

Dr. Manion complained of discourtesy to himself and other party leaders in that they were not permitted to see a copy of the speech.

Significant Paragraph

"My ministers," read the significant paragraph, "are of the opinion that the effective prosecution of the war makes it imperative that those who are charged with the grave responsibility of carrying on the government of Canada should, in this critical period be fortified by a direct and unquestioned mandate from the people. My advisers, accordingly, having regard to existing conditions and the stage of the life of the present parliament, have decided upon an immediate appeal to the country."

There have been five Winter elections since Confederation and party campaign leaders expressed worry over the possibilities snow-covered roads might have an effect on polling.

May Depend on Radio

Prospects were, however, for a whirlwind campaign with the leaders perhaps foregoing their customary coast-to-coast trips and depending more on the radio.

In any event, it appeared a parliamentary session opening in April would extend well into the summer.

Mr. King said he would not have attached importance to criticism of the government's conduct of the war by Premier Hepburn and Col. Drew but for the fact it was endorsed by the Legislature of the largest province in the form of a resolution which appeared to be the basis of a political campaign.

King Strikes Back

"That resolution was passed to start a political campaign while this parliament was sitting," he said, "to take advantage of the fact that my colleagues and myself would be obliged to give our attention to the work of parliament as well as the carrying on of the war but other gentlemen were to be free to criticize our efforts, to misrepresent everything that was done and everything that was left undone."

Already, Col. Drew had urged an election and proposed a slogan "King Must Go." The Prime Minister said he was prepared to accept that slogan if the words "to the country" were added. The highest authority in Canada was the people and to them he proposed to appeal. As he has trusted parliament, even on the momentous question of war or peace, so he proposed to trust the people.

Reasons for Action

There were other reasons why an early election was desirable. Parliament had been elected in 1935 and its term was nearly up. A great offensive might take place on the Western Front in the Spring and it would give rise to grave decisions.

The government making those decisions, should have a clear mandate from the people and it would be better to have the election over before they arose.

Arrangements should be made for the soldiers to vote. An early election would permit members of the First Division to cast their ballots before leaving England, and members of the Second Division before leaving Canada.

Soldiers Given Chance To Vote.

Incidentally Mr. King made the first announcement of the government's intentions regarding the second division. He said it would be sent overseas as soon as possible.

Arrangements would be made for the soldiers to vote by an order-in-council under the War Measures Act.

"To put over a political trick of this kind is disgraceful and is sneering at the parliamentary tradition of Canada and the British Empire," said Dr. Manion.

Referring to Mr. King's assurance at the special war session that no election would be called before another session of parliament, he asked if Mr. Mackenzie King intended to "hoodwink" the House and bring members from all across the country at great expense for nothing.

Manion Asks Question.

Dr. Manion was unable to see why the legislature of Ontario should dictate the date of a federal election and referred to the proposed arrangement for soldiers' votes as a frameup. While parliament was in session the government proposed to legislate by order-in-council, thus showing Mr. King's sincerity when he spoke of the supremacy of parliament.

Defence Minister Rogers said "Oh, oh" when Dr. Manion charged ineptitude in the government's handling of the war and the opposition leader turned his fire on the minister.

Rewarded For Failure Is Claim.

Mr. Rogers had made a greater failure of administering the Department of Labor than any other minister and was rewarded by being given the Department of National Defence. The former minister, Hon. Ian MacKenzie had acted at least unadvisedly but had been defended by Mr. Mackenzie King and other ministers.

Dr. Manion wanted to know why Mr. MacKenzie was demoted if he was right and why he was kept in the government if wrong.

"With all his faults, I think the former minister was a more capable administrator of the Defence Department than the present," he declared.

Whatever action was taken by the government was only taken because of kicks. Allowances for mothers were being adjusted after repeated complaints. The government only acted to stop wheat sales to Russia after a storm of protest across the country.

Manion Makes Charge.

The government boasted of the air training plan but long before the war the British government wanted to train pilots in Canada and place orders for aircraft here but was discouraged by the prime minister.

Mr. Mackenzie King denied this but Dr. Manion said he could prove it from the prime minister's own statements.

Nothing had happened since the special session to necessitate an election. Premier Hepburn had attacked the prime minister but there was nothing new in that.

"I think Mitch was right," he said. "I think he was right all along and never was I so sure he is right as I am after this piece of political trickery."

Dr. Manion Critical.

The prime minister should at least make a statement on the government's war activity and give an account of his stewardship. He should also permit parliament to pass the legislation for the taking of soldiers' votes.

"The government has handled the war effort in a most disgraceful manner," Dr. Manion charged, "it should have been prepared years ago for a war which has appeared inevitable.

It had called up one division, without clothes, boots and equipment. What little had been obtained had to be collected from across Canada.

One British Columbia unit had crossed the country in winter wearing cotton uniforms and cotton underwear. As a result large numbers of men had gone to hospital due to the lack of vision of the government."

No Refusal King Claims.

When the prime minister refused to let the British government establish training schools for airmen in Canada "he did something that rendered him unfit to be prime minister of this country," Dr. Manion declared.

The prime minister interjected to say he had agreed at once but on the basis that the training schools would be Canadian.

"I repeat there was no refusal to train pilots," said Mr. King. "My friend cannot give any veracity to that statement by endless repetition."

"I will give veracity to it from the prime minister's own words if I am given a chance to get my papers," retorted Dr. Manion.

"I will quote his words over and over before the election is over."

Willing To Let People Decide.

Dr. Manion said he was perfectly willing to let the people decide but believed the prime minister should carry on the session and pass legislation for soldiers' votes.

"Where do we profit if we fight for democracy overseas and lose it at home?" he asked. "That is what we are doing by these acts of the government."

Mr. Woodsworth said he found himself in complete agreement with Dr. Manion for the first time because the Conservative leader was standing out for democracy and the traditions of British parliaments.

Mr. Mackenzie King should give parliament an account of his stewardship, provide the members with information, permit discussion and state the government's proposals, rather than ask for a blank cheque.

Every day orders-in-council were being passed curtailing the rights of free speech and free assembly and the right of labor to trade unions.

Election Suddenly Sprung.

The government would boast that there was no conscription but men were being conscripted in the most objectionable way by being threatened with loss of relief if they did not enlist.

Mr. Woodsworth said the prime minister "suddenly springs the idea of an election in a few weeks", and declared the prime minister had come to the House "with a first class political speech ready."

Mr. Woodsworth said he was not certain the administration would be defeated but he knew there had been a great deal of unrest and dissatisfaction before the war started.

During the past six months the government had been legislating by order-in-council and had taken away many of the fundamental liberties of the people.

"Now we are going to be denied the right of parliament," Mr. Woodsworth declared.

LONGER RECESS

A measure to amend the Succession Duty Act, particularly in its investigatory clauses, will be introduced in the legislature. Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, leading the House yesterday in the absence of Premier Mitchell Hepburn, said the bill would be ready today.

Members will have the week-end to study it and second reading debate is scheduled for Monday.

The bill to provide a two-year term for members of municipally-elected bodies will be debated today again in committee stage. It didn't get out of it yesterday, when there was determined Conservative opposition and pleas to the government to withdraw the measure.

The measure will provide a one-year term extension for those on municipal bodies February 1, 1941, unless at the next annual elections the electors in any particular municipality vote themselves out of the bill's provisions.

The measure, as it reached committee, provided for the term extension for members of subsidiary municipal bodies, such as library boards, advisory educational committees and other boards appointed by a council or school board. This provision was dropped by the government in committee-stage.

Henry Leads Opposition

Former Premier George S. Henry (Cons. York East), led the opposition to the municipal term extension measure. He urged that the bill make mandatory the taking of a vote in all municipalities on the proposal at the next municipal elections. As it stands the bill provides that the two-year term is to be effective unless a municipal electorate decides otherwise.

On a standing vote, two Conservatives, George Dunbar (Ottawa South) and W. B. Reynolds (Leeds) voted with the government against making a vote on the proposal mandatory. Farquhar Oliver (U. F.O., Grey South) and Mr. Roebuck voted against the government.

Arthur Roebuck (Lib. Toronto-Bellwoods), former Attorney-General who yesterday engaged in a searing oral duel with Premier Mitchell Hepburn, rose to a question of privilege and denied that he and his brother-in-law, Walter Walkinshaw, went to England for a "pay-off" after Lloyds, famous British insurance firm, was granted a licence to do business in Ontario. The licence was granted on Mr. Roebuck's responsibility as attorney-general.

Mr. Roebuck charged the premier's assault on him was "part of a plan to terrorize the members of this House." He withdrew the remark when it was protested by Mr. Nixon who said he would not hear such motives imputed to Mr. Hepburn.

Statement Issued.

Walkinshaw issued a statement last night in reply to Premier Hepburn's references.

Among Mr. Hepburn's statements, Mr. Walkinshaw said, "was the assertion that I went to England with Mr. Roebuck while employed as his private secretary, and that I there received a contract as sole representative of Lloyds in Canada as the 'pay-off' to Mr. Roebuck for the order-in-council permitting Lloyds to do business in Ontario.

"This is false. The facts are that I did not approach Lloyds until I had left the public service. I did not go to England with Mr. Roebuck. I arrived in London, England, on a Friday night and Mr. Roebuck left for home on Monday morning.

"I secured an agency for the writing of insurance from a firm of brokers who were members at Lloyds but not from Lloyds themselves. This was not a sole agency, as the premier said, and there were at this time a considerable number of such agencies in Canada. Mr. Roebuck did not know, nor has he ever met, the people I was doing business with."

CONTROVERSY ON ASAMA MARU CASE GROWING BITTER

Japanese Foreign Office Spokesman Says "National Feelings Rising Very High"

COASTAL SHIP STOPPED

British Steamship Had Two Blank Shots Thrown Across Bow on Thursday

Tokyo, Jan. 26 (AP).—Controversy over the removal of German seamen from the Japanese liner Asama Mau by a British naval patrol reached new bitterness today and officials described the incident as "very serious."

Yakichiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, said he was of the impression that "national feelings are rising very high" over the Sunday incident and that they would "not be cooled by the lapse of time".

Dispatches from Hong Kong meanwhile said that British shipping circles complained today that the Japanese navy had begun retaliatory activities in China waters as a result of the British seizure of the 21 Germans.

The Wing Sang, coastal steamship of Jardine, Matheson and Company, was stopped by two blank shots on Wednesday from a Japanese warship off Foochow, the captain reported at Hong Kong.

Decisions Undisclosed.

Suma said the foreign, navy, war and communications ministries were conferring regularly but declined to disclose any decisions of the Asama case.

The foreign office was flooded with telegrams and letters urging strong action, and Rightist parties were believed to be attempting to utilize public feeling to discredit any cabinet policy which might favor western democracies.

Observers expressed belief that strong anti-British sentiment was being aroused deliberately in order to switch attention fro mthe lapse of the Japanese-United States trade treaty, which expired today.

The end of the treaty leaves the United States technically free to exert economic pressure on Japan in behalf of American interests in China, and the Japanese foreign office said last night that relations would be "under strain".

British Ship Searched By Japanese.

Shanghai, Jan. 26 (AP)—The captain of the British coastal steamer Wing Sang reported today that a Japanese naval boarding party searched and detained his ship for more than 15 hours in apparent retaliation for the British seizure of 21 Germans from the Japanese liner Asama Maru.

It was reported that British authorities intended to protest.

The captain said a Japanese destroyer halted the Wing Sang Tuesday night by firing two blank shots.

Japanese officers, an interpreter and 21 armed men boarded the ship, inspected the register and searched the vessel without examining cargo, the captain said.

The boarding officer, in questioning the captain, asked, "have you heard of the Asama Maru incident?"

The captain said he had not, so the Japanese told him of the incident which occurred Sunday.

He said he refused the Japanese request that he sign a statement saying he had agreed to the search of the Wing Sang.

The 3,560-ton British ship en route from Hong Kong to Shanghai, then was required to anchor all night.

MAY 'UN-MUDDLE' PICTURE

Promoter Mike Jacobs left last night for an unannounced destination—believed to be Chicago — where he is to confer with Nate Druxman, Seattle promoter, in an attempt to arrange a bout between Al Hostak, the recognized National Boxing Association middleweight king and Ceferina Garcia, whose title is recognized only in California and New York.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, I've got the most exciting news for you, Willyum, it's the most thrilling thing you could imagine by any stretch of the imagination.

How much did you find? pop said, and ma said, You're nowhere near it, you're not even on the beaten track, it's much more exciting than mere money. Mrs. Thurston Willows has excepted a dinner

From whom? pop said, and ma said, From us, of course, no wonder your ears almost deceive you, Mrs. Thurston Willows the famous fashion plate and sisiety leader whose name always leads all the rest.

Where are you going to take her? pop said, and ma said, I'm not going to take her anywhere, you silly thing, she's coming here.

But why, for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, That's the very question a lot of jelliss people will proberly be wondering in their ulterior minds. Just imagine, the great Mrs. Thurston Willows who has an almost unbroken reputation for not going anywhere outside of her chosen set, but we're intristed in some of the same charities and charity is a great leveler. It seems she expects to be alone at loose ends for a few evenings because her husband is going on a hunting trip, ma said.

Where is he going, maybe I can join him that particular day, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum you'll be right here on your best behavior in your dinner clothes.

My dinner clothes are a sight and I hope there wont be time to have them cleaned, pop said, and ma said, Five weeks ought to be ample time to have your dinner clothes cleaned for land sakes.

Yee gods 5 weeks, anything can happen in 5 weeks, pop said.

Meaning to make Mrs. Thurston Willows change her mind, and ma said, Such a pessimistic thing to say, nothing can possibly happen and there's no reason anything should happen and nothing is going to happen.

Meaning she hoped not.

A quiet, but pretty wedding took place in Truro, Nova Scotia, at 3.30 p.m., Saturday, December 30, 1939, at the home of Mrs. T. S. The bride was gowned in dusty rose crepe with matching hat of feathers and black accessories and wore a corsage of Johanna Hill roses and lily of the valley.

MEOW for Fuller Cheeks

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS WITH hollow cheeks should do their facial exercises; the best one is to meow like a cat. Better wait until you have the house to yourself, little Wan Face, so the family wont think you've gone nutty.

With the first letter of the word the lips pucker, the cheeks puff, the trumpeters muscle, which extends from chin to temple, gets a hard pull. With the a and i sounds, the mouth opens, forms a circle; that movement has a vitalizing effect upon the tissues, and the fibres surrounding the lips are stretched taut.

So far, so good, but that's not the half of it. The louder you yowl, the better and speedier the results. If a dimple happens to be lurking round the premises, it will show up in fine style. For strengthening facial muscles that have softened you can't beat this exercise.

To make the tandem chin go single again, pucker the lips as if about to say "ooou" and throw the head back slowly. Relax the lips, bring the chin to normal position and repeat.

Before doing facial exercises, wash the face with warm water, dry well, spread on cold cream. After the exercise, do a light tapping movement, apply ice cold water, then witch hazel.

The athletic young woman shows the rewards of activities in a lithe, supple figure, grace of movement and lightness of step. If there's no time for fun in the open, then spare five or ten minutes each day for calisthenics. Stand before on open window, breathe down into your heels. Lift the chest, keep the head balanced, swing the arms. Hands on hips, see how high you can kick. Hands on hips, away the body from side to side. Lift the hands high, see how tall you can make yourself.

THE PLANETARY configurations for this day may be interpreted as usually propitious, not only for a day of thrilling and breath-taking experiences, but also for an unexpected opportunity for great progress and prosperity. This may involve a complete about-face in objectives, associates and environs. It is a time for branching out, with audacity and initiative,— to reach for the rewards and merits of past efforts in new pastures. Pastimes are not to be neglected, since tokens of romance fill the air.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of sudden, surprising and possibly dramatic adventures in which romance has no little part. A complete and unforeseen change of plans and aims may be required, with new fields of operation and friends combining to bring about promotion and progress as a climax to long-concentrated effort and steadfastness.

A child born on this day may be original, adventurous and audacious. Creative art in music or letters may distinguish it.

THE MAPLE LEAF FOREVER

'Twas Alexander Muir who wrote
"The Maple Leaf Forever"
Now so well known boys and girls,
Our wide Dominion over;
But how he came to write the song,
Whence came the inspiration
Are matters should be known to all
This present generation.

The Author was a teacher wise,
Of credit and renown,
He taught some time in Leslieville,
In the eastern port of Town;
While teaching there, from time to time
He frequently was seen
At rest beneath a maple tree
A little south of Queen,
And there in shady restfulness
He very soon got used
To pass the fleeting hours away,
Communing with the Muse.

The Maple's leaf attracted him,
He studied its formation,
And then to his mind came the thought
With note of exclamation!
What better than the Maple leaf
As emblem for the Nation?

So Muse and Poet strove and strove
To put their thoughts together,
And soon their lines made up the verse—
"The Maple Leaf Forever".

The B.N. Act had just been passed
Which formed Confederation;
A call was sent out for a Song
In honour of the Nation;
The call was broadcast far and wide
To all Canadian scholars,
"The Maple Leaf" won second place
And prize of fifty dollars.

The song was quickly hailed by all
With patriotic fervour,
And far and wide its peal was heard
To our remotest border;

Long may it ring, the Nation's pride,
Tho' war-clouds round us gather;
In every heart enshrined may be
"The Maple Leaf forever".

The Tree still stands in Leslieville
At Laing Street—62,
A little south of Queen Street—
A hundred feet or two,
And children come from far and near
To learn about the Poet, Muir,
And pause a moment there to spend
Where the song they love so well was penned.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is it All Right to Kiss Your Boy or Girl Friend Good Night?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 16 years of age, and my friend is 17. We've been going "steady" for about two months. He thinks I ought to kiss him goodnight. My girl friends say it's all right, but mother says it cheapens a girl to kiss a boy good night. My boy friend says he is going to quit going with me if I don't kiss him goodnight. What do you think about this?

When I'm out with him, he's always talking about another girl, says she's sweet on him. Why does he always talk about other girls to me? Is he trying to make me jealous?

Doubtful.

If you've known this young man only a couple of months and he's begun to threaten you with loss of his society, if you don't kiss him goodnight, why not be spunky and decline? When he begins to brag about the charm of other girls, just set up a straw man in your imagination and brag about him too.

Defining the Word "Love"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 22 years old and have been going "steady" with Bill for some time now. He has asked me to marry him, and I'm not sure whether I'm in love or not. Can you define the word 'love' for me? Please tell me something about it.

When he's with me, I feel perfectly happy. But when I'm in a crowd of other people, I forget about him entirely. When I'm home alone, I miss him dreadfully. And also, I don't seem to be able to picture myself as his wife. Everything seems so muddled up. He is two years older than I am.

Maria

When you ask me to "define the word 'love'," in the space of these few lines, you pay me a great compliment. Philosophers, poets and average citizens have been nibbling at that riddle since the beginning of time.

It's safe to say you're not very deeply in love with Bill, since you forget about him entirely when you're in a crowd, and you cannot visualize yourself as his wife. Better not marry until you do think of him in a crowd and feel that you would be absolutely happy as his wife. You needn't rush into it, and I'm sure he will wait until you can be more certain.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Soup Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Will you please tell me who was right, and so settle an argument?

Not so long ago I attended a large banquet. Two of my friends were there, both of whom should know their "table manners". When the soup was served, it was brought in in a small cup with a handle. The soup was a clear soup. As there were no soup spoons, Mrs. A. drank the soup from the cup. Mrs. B. was very much shocked at this, and sipped her soup from the cup with her teaspoon. In other words, some of us drank the soup, and some of us sipped the soup with the teaspoon. Who was right?

Althea

A combination of Mrs. A's method and Mrs. B's method is the usual way of "dealing with' a clear soup served in a cup, whether the cup has one handle or two handles. That is, when a clear soup is served in a cup, the customary and proper thing to do is to take a few sips of it with a spoon (to test the heat) and then drink the rest, as we would drink tea.

Mrs. B. needn't have been "shocked" at Mrs. A's drinking the soup from the cup, since Mrs. A didn't think the soup was too hot to be drunk "as was". However it would in most cases be better if Mrs. A. would use the teaspoon to take those first few heat-testing sips.

Mrs. B. was thoroughly correct in taking the teaspoon for the soup-spoon and sipping all her soup, instead of drinking it. This is the leisurely way of doing . . . but it isn't any more correct than drinking the rest of the soup after the first few sips with the spoon.

An Awkward Situation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I understand that it is always correct to stand up when a lady approaches the table. I also understand that it is not correct to sit down as long as the lady remains standing at the table. Now suppose the lady is on her way to another table and a long conversation develops between my wife and the lady, do I remain standing indefinitely?

What should I do if she suggests that I sit down?

Stumped

You are right on both counts . . first, that it is correct for a man to stand up at once when a woman stops to speak with anyone at his table in a restaurant; secondly, that he should remain standing as long as she remains standing at the table. And the well-bred man does not sit down if the woman suggests—even urges— that he sit down. For the very simple reason that a man of breeding would feel very uncomfortable sitting while a woman is standing. So much for the gentleman's side of the case.

Now for the lady's "side of the case". She just isn't a lady if she is so inconsiderate and socially awkward as to allow what may properly be a minute or two of chatting to "develop" into what is improperly and inappropriately a "long conversation". If she were a lady, she would know that the men at the table would politely have to stand while she is standing.

Too many women take the ridiculous point of view that if they say to the standing gentleman or gentlemen "Please don't stand" they are being triumphantly polite. Well, they aren't. For a gentleman would disregard their discourateous suggestion. The woman who makes this suggestion should be taught manners.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

More About Burns

Yesterday we got a burned child safely into the hospital. His wounds were cleansed, and he was placed inside the burn-bed.

This is only the beginning of the treatment. The burned area is sprayed with a ten per cent solution of tannic acid. This is done every 20 minutes until usually after a few hours, the acid causes a hard, black covering something like leather to form over the wound. This leather completely covers the raw areas of the burn and if properly treated, prevents all infection from getting at the burn and causing trouble from without.

The edges of the skin around the tan should be covered with some form of antiseptic to keep them clean.

I have several times had trouble with mothers when they saw this thick black covering forming over their child's wound. Just remember, mothers, if you see this being done to your child, it is a necessary precaution. It in time will peel off and leave a healed skin beneath it.

After the child has been placed in the burn-bed, he ought to be given plenty of water to drink because in a few hours he will begin to suffer some from toxaemia and his temperature will rise and he may not be able to take fluids. This rise in temperature usually begins about twelve hours after the burn if it is at all severe.

When he enters this stage, the child will first become flushed, and later the flush will be replaced by a pallor. He will begin to vomit and may have twitching movements in his hands and arms. When these symptoms make their appearance, then we know that the poisons produced by the burn are being absorbed into the blood stream. If his life is to be safe, we know too that we must dilute these poisons.

So to dilute the poisons we may inject fluids into the veins. Sometimes we give a transfusion of blood if the case is really serious. In either case, the poison is considerably diluted and so the child's chances for recovery are greatly enhanced.

This stage of toxaemia may last for several days and while it does the child will require constant care. He must remain in the burn-bed and he must continue to get fluids into his veins as long as he is vomiting. If the burn has been too severe, if the poisonous substances on the burn haven't been removed, or if we cannot dilute the poisons sufficiently, the child may die.

If on the other hand we are getting the better of the fight, the temperature will fall, vomiting will stop and the child will again take fluids through the mouth. Once we get the child past this the most dangerous stage in a burn, we can hold out good hope for his recovery.

I am sure that anyone reading this column will at once see the real need of having the patient in a hospital in order to give the proper treatment for a bad burn. There they have the burn-bed already with the proper means of heating it, they have the necessary tannic acid solutions, they have the nursing care that is so urgently needed. As for the intravenous solutions that are administered and the blood transfusions that are often necessary, the only proper place to perform them is in the hospital. Mind you, I've done them in the home and in some pretty desolate homes at that. It is these experiences that make me now hold out for a hospital.

KING CAROL FACES CRITICAL CHOICE IN RUMANIA

Can Accede to German Pressure or Risk Nazi Wrath by Holding Out Oil for Own Use

WARNED TO RESIST

Nervousness Caused by Presence of German Troops in Russian-Poland Eased Slightly During Past Week

(By Charles Nichols)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

King Carol faced a critical choice today of acceding to German pressure for an increased portion of Rumania's oil output or risking Nazi wrath by holding out a generous share of that war essential for her own protection.

The Allied-German battle for Rumanian oil appeared to be approaching a crisis as reports reached Bucharest that the Reich had warned "other methods" would be employed if she failed to obtain all the petroleum needed from King Carol's nation.

Rumanian nerves were not eased by reports, meanwhile, that approximately one division of German troops was deployed along the railway linking Germany with Rumania through Russian-occupied Poland.

Allied warning that the Nazi demands were to be resisted were implied meanwhile in an editorial in the influential Turkish newspaper Republic saying that Great Britain and France would stand behind the Balkan nations if they went to war against the Reich or Soviet Russia.

As Turkey is working with the Allies in this sector and as the editorial coincided with the arrival of the French middle-eastern commander in Istanbul, considerable weight was attached to it.

Can't Use English Oil

It followed by only two days reported Allied warnings that British and French oil producers in Rumania, constituting about 40 per cent of the industry, must not be compelled by Carol's government to hand over their output to supply the Nazi war machine.

Rumania was expected to stick to the middle road between the conflicting pressures, keeping her exports to Germany to about 1,500,000 tons annually, a figure she considered normal.

However, fears were expressed in Bucharest that Nazi demands might exceed the limit Rumania has set and that Germany's resort to other measures might touch off the spark which would set southeastern Europe ablaze with war.

Nervousness Eases Slightly

As the week drew to a close, the nervousness caused by the presence of German troops in Russian-Poland eased slightly. Informed French military sources were of the opinion that the troops were not in sufficient numbers to provide a menace. These sources put the number of Germans of all ranks at about 15,000 and said they were engaged mainly in guarding the rail line and in arranging repatriation of Germans in that area.

Presence of General Maxine Weygand in Turkey gave rise to speculation whether the Allies expected the conflict to spread in the spring to the eastern Balkans and Danube. Considered one of France's ablest soldiers—he drove the Russians out of Poland in the early days of that Republic —General Weygand has been in the Near East since the war began and his consultations with the Turkish General Staff have been frequent.

JAPANESE—U. S. TREATY EXPIRES

Countries Doing Business on Day-to-Day Basis Although Customs Duties Remain Unchanged

Washington, Jan. 26—(AP)—Expiration of the Japanese-American Commercial Treaty at midnight tonight opens the way for the United States Congress to place an embargo on shipments of raw materials or take other action to hinder Tokyo's war on China.

Whether any steps actually will be taken apparently depends on Japan. The treaty's termination places commercial relations between the two countries on a day-to-day basis, although customs duties remain unchanged.

American abrogation of the pact is believed in many quarters here to have been prompted by congressional agitation for an embargo on materials which Japan needs for her military campaigns.

Bills pending in the senate would stop exports to Tokyo on the ground that Japan has violated the Nine-Power Treaty respecting the territorial integrity of China.

Commerce between Japan and the United States approaches $400,000,000 a year. Japan has sought unsuccessfully to obtain a new treaty or some stop-gap arrangement to continue present commercial relations.

EXPLOSION CUTS OFF POWER

London, Jan. 26—(CP)—A terrific explosion at the power station at Irlam, Lancashire, today cut off power to the townships of Irlam and Cadishead. Officials said they had no suspicion of sabotage.

The entire roof of the building, 60 by 45 feet, was blown away by the blast and debris blocked a nearby railway. Fire followed the explosion. No casualties were reported.

Police said the explosion may have been caused by faulty electrical apparatus.

Late News Flashes

SETTLEMENT NEAR

Tokyo, Jan. 26—(CP)—The Anglo-Japanese dispute over the Asama Maru incident was reported near settlement today.

The issue was raised when a British warship stopped the liner Asama Maru near the Japanese coast last Sunday and took off 21 Germans who had embarked at San Francisco.

According to a reported compromise arrangement now in the making, Great Britain would promise to avoid stopping Japanese vessels at sea provided Tokyo promised that the vessels would not accept as passengers Germans eligible for military service at home.

The Japanese Government, it was said, will instruct shipping lines to verify papers of prospective passengers of belligerent nationalities with regard to their military status and to refuse passage to those on their way to active service. Earlier in the day controversy over the Asama Maru incident reached new bitterness.

HINT DEUTSCHLAND SUNK

London, Jan. 23 (CP)—British newspapers hinted today that the reason for the transfer of the name Deutschland from the German pocket battleship to a war vessel as yet unlaunched might be that the original Deutschland had been damaged or sunk.

The German Admiralty claimed yesterday that the Deutschland had returned to its home port after forays in the Atlantic and that it was being renamed the Luetzow.

The transfer of its name, said the naval expert of the New Chronicle "encourages the suspicion that the original Deutschland was the vessel sunk by the submarine Salmon" last month. Another possibility the same correspondent said, "is that one of the three submarines which were reported to have been lost last month, the Seahorse, Starfish and Undine, torpedoed and sank the Deutschland before herself being destroyed."

One month ago Mr. King (Prime Minister Mackenzie King) announced the meeting of Canada's Parliament on Thursday, Jan. 25. The members of that parliament arrived yesterday in Ottawa from all over the country but instead of meeting in session for Mr. King and his Government to give an accounting for their stewardship, it was announced by Mr. King, in the Speech from the Throne, that he is going to call an immediate election.

Only one conclusion can be arrived at as to the cause of this extraordinary and unprecedented action of the Prime Minister, namely, that he is afraid to meet the representatives of the people and submit the conduct of his Government to their analysis, inquiry and discussion.

Mr. King has for years gone about Canada proclaiming his profound belief in the supremacy of parliament, but yesterday he threw aside his cloak of democratic belief in a manner that was an affront, not only to parliament but to the whole British parliamentary system of government—indeed, to the people of Canada generally.

Charges No Preparation

Undoubtedly the true cause of this action of Mr. King is that he knew full well the grave dissatisfaction among all classes of our people, not only at the disgraceful condition of unpreparedness which has been exposed by the outbreak of war, but the deplorably weak manner in which he and his government have carried on every aspect of Canada's effort in the war. It is the feeling of the Canadian people from coast to coast that, having once declared ourselves by the side of Britain and France in this war against the barbarism of the autocracies, we should take our part heartily and sincerely in the struggle.

Yet despite the repeated boasts of the Prime Minister that for four or five years his chief anxiety has been the outbreak of a war in which we would be involved, and despite vast sums of money expended by his government on defence, Canada had no preparation for her men in the way of clothes, boots, blankets or military equipment—no defence for our shores—no defence equipment for any section of Canada — no machinery for the caring of the loved ones of the men who are offering their lives in Canada's behalf. What is worse, no plans for the speedy correction of these deficiencies were ever prepared, though the Canadian Defence Association advised their preparation as long ago as 1936.

Claims Effort Inadequate

As a result, our whole effort has been so inadequate, and yet so extravagant, that Mr. King feared to face the parliament of Canada which he had called for Jan. 25.

He has flouted parliament, to which he has paid so much lip-service—he has ignored the tradition and practice of our parliamentary system; he has, in fact, laughed at the people's representatives in parliament itself, and by all these acts he has imitated the autocracies which we are fighting.

However, the die has been cast by Mr. King, without discussion with myself or the leaders of any of the other political parties, despite the fact that, so far as the National Conservative party is concerned, we, in the war session of September last, not only fully co-operated with the government and refrained from criticism of any kind but we have held ourselves open since that session to continue such co-operation and offer any assistance to the government that might be within our power.

We have been ignored as completely by Mr. King and his government as he is today ignoring all the historic principles which govern the conduct of Canada's affairs by the government and parliament of Canada. Indeed, had he and some of the members of his government had their way, we would have been gagged yesterday, and so not permitted to express an opinion of any kind.

Charges Attempt At Snap Decision.

To sum up: Mr. King is attempting by the most unfair and unsportsmanlike trick to obtain from the people of Canada a snap decision, before they have the opportunity of being advised as to the weaknesses of Mr. King and his government and their unfitness to administer Canada's war effort. They have been as incompetent in this as they were incompetent in times of peace, when they earned most deservedly the nickname of the "do nothing government".

Between now and election day, it will be the duty of myself and the party which I have the honor to lead to inform the people of Canada fully and fairly, not only of the failures of the Mackenzie King government, but to expose to them all aspects of Canada's war and peace problems.

I am convinced that fair-minded citizens everywhere will place their stamp of disapproval upon this unnecessary and uncalled for political manoeuvre, and will put into power a government of action, decision, courage and vision ,to handle not only our war effort but to assure the necessary attention to after-war problems.

Such a government, to be really effective and to achieve the results desired by all Canadians, must be a truly national government in the sense that the very best brains obtainable among our people are drafted to serve in the cabinet. Therefore, if the National Conservative party is successful at the coming election, I shall form such a government.

National Conservative Party Caucus Adopts Resolution

That this meeting of National Conservative members of the late Parliament record its unqualified confidence in its leader Hon. Robert James Manion, their approval of the course he has pursued since the outbreak of war in abstaining from partisan purpose in his public utterances, and in offering to the government his hearty co-operation in the execution of war measures worthy of Canada, and calculated to preserve the integrity of the British Commonwealth of Nations, to achieve the triumph of the principles of democracy, and to perpetuate liberty, law and justice among our peoples.

That we deplore the rejection by the Prime Minister of this tender of close co-operation designed to produce unity of action in the prosecution of the war by the Canadian people.

'Action Unprecedented' Says Caucus

That we condemn in the strongest terms the unprecedented action of the Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. MacKenzie King, in dissolving the House of Commons on a flimsy pretext after advising His Excellency the Governor General to summon Parliament for the despatch of business.

That this proceeding is a violation of British parliamentary practice and an insult to the Peoples' representatives in the House of Commons.

That the obvious purpose of this arbitrary action is to nullify the working of the Great Inquisition of the land, and prevent disclosure of the actions and administration of the government since the outbreak of war.

That the National Conservative party, under the brilliant patriotic leadership of Hon. R. J. Manion, reposes confidence in the impartial judgment and sense of fairness of the Canadian electorate to resent and repudiate at the polls the arbitrary, dictatorial conduct of Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King in springing an election to prevent parliamentary inquiry into his conduct of public affairs.

NATIONAL GOV'T

The Conservative leader said there could be only one explanation for the unprecedented action of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, that he was "afraid to meet the representatives of the people and submit the conduct of his government to their analysis, inquiry and discussion."

The prime minister had thrown aside "his cloak of democratic belief in a manner that was an affront, not only to parliament but to the whole British parliamentary system of government—indeed, to the people of Canada generally."

"He has, in fact, laughed at the people's representatives in parliament itself and by all these acts he has imitated the autocracies which we are fighting," Dr. Manion charged.

The National Conservative party had refrained from criticism and had been continually ready to offer any assistance in its power to the government but "we have been ignored as completely by Mr. King and his government as he is today ignoring all the historic principles which govern the conduct of Canada's affairs by the government and parliament of Canada.

"Indeed, had he and some of the members of his government had their way, we would have been gagged yesterday and so not permitted to express an opinion of any kind."

He contended that the prime minister was trying "by the most unfair and unsportsmanlike trick" to obtain from the people of Canada a snap decision, before they have the opportunity of being advised as to the weakness of Mr. King and his government and their unfitness to administer Canada's war effort."

A few minutes before Dr. Manion issued his statement, the party caucus made public the text of an adopted resolution condemning "in the strongest terms the unprecedented action of the prime minister, Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, in dissolving the House of Commons on a flimsy pretext."

The statement said "this proceeding is a violation of British parliamentary practice and an insult to the people's representatives in the House of Commons". The obvious purpose, the statement continued, of this action is to nullify the working of parliament and "prevent disclosure of the actions and administration of the government since the outbreak of war."

The resolution, moved by Douglass Ross (Con. Toronto St. Paul's) and seconded by N. J. M. Lockhart (Con. Lincoln), also expressed confidence in Dr. Manion.

'Simplicity of Jesus' Theme at Winter School

The individual morning classes of the Winter School came to an end at 10.30. Devotions were then conducted by Rev. T. M. Wesley, with Miss Lucille Herrington at the piano. Rev. T. M. Wesley spoke on the "Simplicity of Jesus." This simplicity was seen in the singleness of purpose of Jesus, the freedom of His life from material things. The baggage of life was often an impediment to Christian character. His simplicity was revealed in His freedom from moral and Theological details. To Him God was the great reality. Religion was being sure of that reality. It was seen also in His loves. There could be many friendships in life but few great loves. The life of Jesus was beautiful and effective because it was gathered up in one great love for God and man.

Rev. A. McLauchlin who had to leave for a funeral, was given a great hand. He replied that he had been attending many schools and this was one of the very best. He urged the young people to give their lives to the church which was the only institution that had the truth for the solution of the problems of the world.

The school appointed Daniel Archer of Crofton, Cobourg Presbytery, as student representative to the executive.

No Irregularities In Coroners' Juries

Toronto, Jan. 26 (CP)—As the result of an investigation made by Supervising Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson into the charge by Alderman Percy Quinn that coroners' juries were a "racket" in Toronto, it is reported that there have been no irregularities.

The report of Constable Quackenbush, who is in charge of coroners' juries, admitted there was one case where a man who was believed not to have been qualified to vote on Jan. 1, 1940, had been used as a juror. Attorney - General Gordon Conant admitted that this was a slight deviation from the provisions of the Coroners' Act and, although it was not serious, he ordered that it be not repeated.

British Political Circles, Press Taken by Surprise

Result Will be Demonstration of Canada's Loyalty to Empire Says Post

London, Jan. 26 (CP). — Prime Minister Mackenzie King's decision to dissolve the Canadian parliament and call a general election has taken British political circles and the press by surprise.

Newspapers gave front page prominence to dispatches from Ottawa telling of the prime minister's move.

The Evening News headlines: "Storm Over Canada's Snap Election". Like others the Evening News devotes a good deal of space to a discussion of the personalities involved in the war effort controversy which led to parliament's dissolution.

The newspaper says that "many Canadians will watch with interest the reaction of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. Back in his country house in Surrey, Mr. Bennett can undoubtedly play a strong moral part in influencing Canadian opinion should he wish to do so."

However, Mr. Bennett declined to say whether he would take any part in the election campaign, explaining it was too soon to comment.

The Yorkshire Post believes that "the result of the election certainly will be an impressive demonstration of Canada's loyalty to the British Commonwealth and the cause she is helping us defend in the war."

The Daily Mail quoted Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, Commander of the Canadian Active Service Force, as saying that members of the First Division now encamped at Aldershot would be given every opportunity to vote in the forthcoming election. The ballot boxes will be sent to Canada to be counted.

London, Jan. 26 (CP-Cable). — Under the heading, "Germans Invent Bigger Bertha", the Daily Telegraph reported today that the Nazis have a gun capable of firing a 661-pound projectile 155 miles.

If such a super-gun actually has been developed and if the Germans could seize one of the Dutch islands in the Schelde River estuary, they might be able to bombard London and other parts of the United Kingdom.

Militarists here were not perturbed by the report which came from the newspaper's Brussels correspondent. They pointed out that the life of such a gun is extremely short and would be extremely costly to manufacture. It would be difficult to transport and could be fired only with approximate accuracy.

The correspondent said the super-Big Bertha's barrel is 115 to 118 feet long and fires shells with an initial velocity of 5,905.5 feet per second.

The mammoth projectile would reach an altitude of 37 miles and travel 12 miles into the stratosphere before falling to earth.

German Lie Denied

London, Jan. 26.—(CP)— An official statement was issued today denying German claims that two neutral ships sunk by U-boats this week had been travelling in convoy, "which Germany maintains is sufficient excuse for attack".

The statement follows:

"Germany admitted on the Hamburg Radio in the early hours of January 25, that the Greek ship Ekatontarchos Dracoulis and the Danish ship Tekla had been sunk without warning.

"The claim was made that they were in convoy, which Germany maintains is sufficient excuse for attack. The Tekla, however, was not in convoy. She was torpedoed at 5 a.m. on January 21, in the North Sea without warning. She was alone and it was three hours and 40 minutes before eight of her crew were picked up by the Norwegian steamship Iris.

"On the same day but in the Atlantic off the coast of Portugal the Greek ship Ekatontarchos Dracoulis, also not in convoy, was attacked without warning. The ship sank immediately and those who could get away had no time to save anything except themselves. Six men in the engine room were killed instantly. Twelve of her crew were picked up by the Italian ship Nino Padro and others were landed at Peniche, in Portugal, in, it is reported, a half-frozen condition".

Ballot Boxes Will be Flown Across Ocean

London, Jan. 26—CP)—Ballot papers and boxes for members of the Canadian Active Service Force to vote at Aldershot in the Canadian general election will be flown across the Atlantic in a Pan-American Airways Clipper, the political correspondent of the Evening Standard said today.

He said that officials of Canada House in London will act as polling clerks and returning officers. The ballots will then be sealed in boxes and flown back across the ocean.

This will not be the first time that Canadian soldiers have voted outside Canada. It happened in 1917—Canada's last wartime election.

GIRL MISSIONARY TELLS EXPERIENCE IN HOME AREAS

Miss W. Paddock Finds People Eager and Responsive She Declares

FIELDS OF EFFORT

A graphic description of work being done by the Home Missions Board of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church, was Bay of Quinte Winter School in given attending delegates at the Bridge Street United Church today by Miss Wilma Paddock, religious education worker in a field in the northeastern part of the province.

In a highly interesting address Miss Paddock pointed out the progress being made in fields that formerly had been neglected. For years, she said no church services had been held, and she had found the people eager and responsive.

In her duties as assistant to a minister whose charge is a large one, she covered large areas of territory, and everywhere the work of the church was going ahead. As education seems to be the most effective method in secular views, so religious education is taking its place in the lives of these people.

She was impressed, she said, with the instinctive longing of man for God. She had heard of it but had not realized that it actually existed until last year. Her greatest joy, she said, was conducting church services to the fine types of people to be found in the charges of the area in which she works, but it carries with it a responsibility.

Special Services.

She spoke in glowing terms of the Christmas, Thanksgiving, Easter and other special services held during the year. There was the fullest cooperation on the part of the communities, she said, and the result was well worth while.

Children's classes in vacation school had been inaugurated and were functioning splendidly, she said. The attendance is one hundred per cent and the effort formed a sound foundation for Sunday school work. She urged the support of vacation classes whether inside the church or outside.

Handcrafts.

Introduction of handcrafts had proven successful in that it kept people busy in times when unemployment was rife. The type of Sunday school teachers, Miss Paddock told the delegates, was of the highest. They not only imparted knowledge but took such an interest in their charges that it was not necessary to ask the children to attend.

Women's work has proven successful. Groups were formed and such enthusiasm soon became apparent that after a period of time they conducted money-raising functions such as bazaars, etc.

Libraries have been installed while young people's activities are gaining momentum. She urged the delegates to stress the importance of young people's work. "It has splendid possibilities," she said, "so do not minimize its importance, for we are living in an age when there is so much to drag down our young people.

On Friday evening the members of Eggleton Mission Band met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Fitchett for the January meeting.

Mrs. Fitchett led in prayer and after this the Bible story "Life of Daniel" was read.

Glen Clarke took up collection and Marcella Stapley and Rosella Fitchett were appointed to prepare program for February meeting.

Short readings were given by Helen Stapley and Gladys Clarke. Rosella Fitchett contributed a piano solo.

Jack Clarke and Vera Stapley gave short missionary readings and Marcella Stapley read "The Legend of the Dipper." Mrs. Fitchett gave a reading "Nubbins," showing the wonderful results from a boy singing hymns in a northern mining village.

Meeting closed with singing "When He Cometh", and repeating Mizpah Benediction. The hostess then served a dainty lunch.

Black Hawks Play Boston Bruins to Tie in Other Game of N.H.L. Schedule

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Maybe the trailing teams will stand up now to whoop and holler down the stretch of the National Hockey League schedule. At least it's about time.

New York Americans have acquired the mighty Eddie Shore; Chicago Black Hawks are starting to kick the leaders around; Montreal Canadiens have changed from beer to tea as a liquid builder; and Detroit Red Wngs have summoned Alvin (Buck) Jones to ride here again on their defence.

The Americans and Canadiens, who up to now have been mooching along with the other laggards while New York Rangers, Boston and Toronto have been hitting the high spots, rate first place in the news today. They played a 2-2 overtime tie last night at Montreal after two of the most startling developments of the season.

Before the game the Americans acquired Shore, the 37-year-old bruiser who for 13 years was heart, soul and chief driving force of Boston's Bruins. They traded right winger Eddie Wiseman to the Bruins for the right to use Shore in games that he can spare away from his investment in the Springfield club of the International-American League. Shore expects to join his new team at New York Tuesday.

Amerks in Sixth Place Tie

Then the Canadiens turned to sipping tea between the second and third periods of play. In the third period against the Americans they scored two late goals to earn the draw.

The result lifted the Americans into a sixth-place tie with Detroit and left the Canadiens a point behind them in the cellar, heralding a battle down the stretch for the sixth and last playoff spot.

Johnny Sorrell scored for the Americans halfway through the second period and Murray Armstrong halfway through the third. Charley Sands reduced the margin to 2-1 with six minutes to play and Marty Barry levelled the score a minute later.

ago stopped the Rangers after a great winning streak, turned on the second place Bruins at Chicago and played them to a 2-2 overtime tie. The split in points left Chicago secure in fourth position.

Shewchuck Scores

Doug Bentley and Mush March put the Hawks two goals up early in the game but Johnny Shewchuck, the improving defenceman from Brantford, Ont. scored for Boston before the first perod ended. Red Hamill completed the scoring on a play with Flash Hollett five minutes after the third started and he teams went through 25 more minutes without scoring.

The Rangers, scoring their 14th victory in 15 starts, blanked Toronto 3-0 at New York and extended ther league lead to three points. It was the first time the Maple Leafs had been shut out.

Dutch Hiller bagged a goal in the first period, Alf Pike in the second and Bryan Hextall in the third, while Toronto met the stern resistance of goalie-of-the-year Dave Kerr. The Leafs, already deprived of Syl Apps and Nick Metz through inpjuries, had to play without Pordon Drllon because of an indisposition.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Jan. 26 —(AP)— Jack Zeller's job as generalissimo at Detroit is safe despite the big upheaval . . . You'll be surprised plenty when they announce Joe Louis' opponent for the Finn relief fund fight in March . . . The big St. Louis books which laid 8 to 1 against the Cards last spring, will start them out this year at around 2 to 1 . . . The Reds will be the early favorites at 8 or 9 to 5 . . . Lou Diamond ,the honest brakeman (he never stole a box car) will be Mike Jacobs' matchmaker for the Conn-Lesnevich brawl at Miami.

Washington beat all the other big league clubs under the wire with its 1940 roster . . . Which makes Washington first in rosters and first in the hearts of the Cubans, Venezuelands and Lithuanians—but still sixth in the American league.

Today's true story:

The other day Warren Wright and trainer Ben Jones sent four consecutive winners to the post at Hialeah . . . That was nice going, but it wasn't the first time it had happened . . . Larry S. Williams, former Arizona legislator, was at Latonia one afternoon back in the 90's and saw horses owned by T. J. Megibbin of Cynthiana, Ky., sweep the entire card of six races . . . If that isn't a record it will have to do for awhile.

McNamara Gate Advocated for Harness Racing

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 26 (AP) — Elimination of tiresome minutes of waiting at the start of races through universal use of the McNamara starting gate would bring a nationwide revival of interest in the harness horse, a veteran of the sport predicted here today.

The issue is a controversial one with United States horsemen, but David "Piggy" Friedman, an old timer in the standard bred game, believes in the "new-fangled contraption."

Although comparatively new to harness races in this country, the starting system has been in use in Europe some time and was introduced to American tracks last summer by Leo C. McNamara, Indianapolis horseman.

The "gate" consists of a wire, from which hang strips of tape, suspended across the starting line. The system includes a phonograph with an amplifier, and a record that warns "get ready" and counts to 15 at one-second intervals. On the count of 15 the machine bellows "go."

"That starting system will mean everything to the public," Friedman said.

Use of the gate was scheduled for discussion at the meeting of the United States Trotting Association in New York today.

LONGSON DEFEATS SAVOLDI

Toronto, Jan. 26 (CP)—Wild Bill Longson of Salt Lake City defeated Jumping Joe Savoldi of Three Oaks, Mich., after 51 minutes of their headline bout in a local wrestling show last night. Longson won with a broad jump. Savoldi used a flying tackle to good advantage and had Longson in trouble several time before Longson applied his specialty and took the referee's nod.

SHORE ENTERS DUSK OF CAREER WITH AMERICANS

Brilliant Defenceman of Boston Bruins Traded to Amerks for Eddie Wiseman

DUTTON PLEASED

Shore and Ross Have Had Differences Ever Since Shore Purchased Indians

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 26—(CP)— The bow-legged man with the thinning hair, none other than the great Eddie Shore, will spend the dusk of his brilliant and turbulent National Hockey League career with New York Americans.

After 13 seasons in the uniform of Boston Bruins, most of them as the league's No. 1 defenceman, Shore was sold yesterday for "about $5,000 cash" and little Eddie Wiseman, 28-year- old right wing. Manager Red Dutton of the Amerks revealed the financial part of the deal in a long-distance telephone call from Montreal last night.

So to the Americans, home of N.H.L. castaways, at last came one who should do them a lot of good. Despite his 38 years, Shore still is a great defenceman. Good enough in Dutton's opinion to spark the Americans into the playoffs.

Coming for Long Time

Shore's break with the Bruins has been coming since he invested $40,000 in Springfield Indians of the International-American League between seasons. Eddie was to have played in all Bruin home games after Dec. 15, and at the end of the season was to have been made a free agent. He asked and obtained a few weeks ago his release from the contract calling on him to play for Boston, and finally he was given permission to play home games for the Indians.

Differences cropped up between Shore and Art Ross, Bruin manager, and the rumors of a trade finally were confirmed in announcement by the American office here and by the Bruins in Boston.

Play as Often as Possible

Dutton said Shore will play "as many games as possible" for the Americans, on the road and at home, but he also will play with the Indians. Final details as to the number of games with each club were left for a conference Monday.

The big Alberta wheat farmer who fought tooth and nail over salary with the Bruins almost every season had no trouble reaching terms with Dutton, a close personal friend. Dutton would not reveal any details except to say Eddie would be paid a flat sum for the balance of the season irrespective of the number of games played.

Shore will play for the Americans if they reach the Stanley Cup playoffs and he will play with them next season, Dutton added.

Will Play Tuesday

Dutton hopes to have Shore in uniform for the game against Canadiens next Tuesday. He'll take Hooley Smith's place on defence with Hooley moving up to centre, Johnny Gagnon replacing Wiseman at right wing and Nels Stewart being held in reserve for power plays.

Though he is well beyond the age when hockey players are considered through in the big league, Shore was good enough to make a defence post on The Canadian Press all-star team last season.

He's been a perennial all-star in the last decade, seemingly improving with age. Possibly the last of the great individualists, his career with the Bruins was filled with some of hockey's finest achievements and some of its most dramatic.

N.H.L. STARS

(By the Canadian Press)

Davie Kerr, Rangers, became the National Hockey League's leading shutout goalie by turning in his fifth perfect effort of the season as Rangers topped Toronto 3-0.

Bryan Hextall, led the attack against Leafs with a goal—his 17th of the season—and an assist.

Murray Armstrong, Americans, sparked his team's attack in a 2-2 draw with Canadiens by scoring one goal and aiding in the other.

Red Doran, Canadiens, assisted in both Canadiens' goals and did some lusty body-checking on the defence.

Red Hamill, Boston, gave the Bruins a 2-2 draw with Chicago Black Hawks by firing a goal in the third period.

On Being Well Dressed

SHOW YOUR COLLAR

The shirt collar is meant to be seen. Never wear your suit coat high enough to bury the shirt collar, giving a shirtless appearance from the rear. A proper shirt collar should show at least half an inch abouve the coat. With formal wear a high starched collar should show even more. Also avoid shirt collars that are cut too low in front. Your necktie knot should not show the collar band above.

Detroit Red Wings

A player with a brilliant future is about the best way to describe Don Grosso at this stage of his career. He's been a pro less than a year and has taken part in fewer than a dozen N. H. L. games, but no one doubts his ability to win a name for himself. Last spring Don Joseph (that's his full name) was a ball of fire for Lake Shore Blue Devils of Northern Ontario and played brilliantly right through the Allan Cup playdowns, which saw his team ousted by Toronto Goodyears. Shortly after that, on March 18, he signed with Detroit, just in time to get into their last home game of the season. In this he joined the not-too-extensive ranks of players who have scored in their first major league game as he fired a goal and received credit for an assist in Detroit's 3-2 win over Chicago. That's pretty near his entire league career. He played through the Stanley Cup playdowns as far as the Wings went, but before the start of this season suffered a wrist injury that kept him out of the first couple of dozen games. Born at Sault Ste. Marie 25 years ago. Played amateur there, then with Sudbury Juniors, then Falconbridge, then back to Sudbury for the Allan Cup winning team of three winters ago. Then Falconbridge again and Kirkland Lake before signing with Detroit.

FOXBORO FOXES BEAT GLEN ROSS IN SMART GAME

First Time the League Leaders Have Been Defeated This Season

IVANHOE BEATEN

Last Period Goal for Zions Hill Gave Team 2 to 1 Victory

Stirling, Jan. 26—(Special)—The long string of unbroken victories for the hustling Glen Ross Riversides was broken last night at the Stirling Arena, when a two-minute power play by the hard-pressing Foxboro Foxes netted them two fast goals from the stick of "Smoothy" Elder. Elder, a new comer to the league this season, was the star of the evening, being responsible for all three goals scored by the Foxes. Next in line for starring honors was Bert Hagerman in the Glen Ross net, who turned away more hard shots last night than have been fired at him all season. In the first half of the double bill Zion managed to squeeze a win from the "dogmatic" Ivanhoe squad, who though nursing the lower rung in the race for a play-off berth are a continual threat to any team they meet. Gifford in the "Irish" nets was their greatest problem last night and but for his much improved game Ivanhoe might have easily been the victors.

Large Crowd Present

A good crowd was in attendance and enthusiasm was continually at high pitch as play became a bit rough at various points in both fixtures. Glen Ross' Riversides, a team that have stuck together for several years, have a distinct edge over each of their three sisters and have proven their strength in taking several championships. But the display of determination on the part of Zion, Foxboro and Ivanhoe will give them something to think about before the finals are reached this year. No doubt their loss last night was partially due to the absence of "Doug" Martin, their shifty pivot man.

First Game

In the opener of the evening's performance Ivanhoe playing without their hustling centre, Dan Cook gave the "Fighting Irish" from Zion a real battle displaying slightly superior speed and aggressive strength. Time after time they broke through only to be beaten by Gifford in the nets. After nine minutes of a fairly even period the "Irish" took the lead when Simms scored on a pass from G. Tummon. There was no score in the middle period, which found the Easterners on the offensive and keeping Gifford plenty busy. Tummon scored Zion's second goal early in the last period and the best play of the evening was made when Kirby and Reid combined on a passing play that beat Gifford for their only counter. Brough, Thomlinson and Simms served the only penalties of the game which featured plenty of heavy checking.

The teams: Zion Hill—Goal, Gifford; defence, Dickey and Bedford; centre, Brough; wings, Simms and Ketcheson; subs, Tummon, J. Gay.

Ivanhoe—Goal, Delve; defence, Reid and Thomlinson; centre, Kirby; wings, Thompson and Wright; subs, Woods, Murphy, Fleming and Downey.

Summary:

First Period
Zion Hill, Simms (Tummon) 9.00
Second Period
No score.
Third Period
Zion Hill, G. Tummon 10.00
Ivanhoe, Reid (Kirby) 14.30
Penalties — Brough, Thomlinson and Simms.

Foxboro Defeat League Leaders

The second game of the evening was without doubt the most thrilling of the season. Glen Ross minus the services of Martin were pressed hard all the way. They had the lead twice, holding the Foxes scoreless for two hard fought periods in which Hagerman was brilliant in their nets. Armstrong netted the only counter of the first two periods, taking a pass from Pyear after six minutes of the last period. Elder tied the score with Thompson, getting the assist. G. Pyear put the Riversides in the lead again batting in a nice pass from "cousin" Russell Pyear. Then came the crack up. Jack Armstrong drew a penalty for a trip, only two minutes, but it meant two goals and the game. The Foxes swarmed in, feeding each other for lightning shots at Hagerman. Elder clicked twice just before the curtain fell on the evening's show, which was really the hit of the season with Elder by far "the leading man." The team that play Foxboro in the future will have to watch this boy close.

The teams: Foxboro—Goal, Guay; defence, Noley Guay, and G. Walt; centre, Elder; wings, Spencer and Thompson; subs, Gordon Gay; Gough, Dafoe, Halliwell and J. Guay.

Glen Ross—Goal, Hagerman; defence, Fraser and Brown; centre, Armstrong; wing, G. Pyear and R. Pyear; subs, Macdonald and Brooks.

Summary:

First Period
Glen Ross, Armstrong (Pyear) 4.30
Second Period
No score.
Third Period
Foxboro, Elder (Thompson).. 6.00
Glen Ross, G. Pyear (R. Pyear). 12.20

CARL LISCOMBE SUPPLIES PUNCH

Indianapolis Capitals Blast Providence Reds With 8-0 Shutout

(By The Canadian Press)

Any hopes International American League hockey teams might hsve held that Indianapolis Capitals were losing their touch were dissipated today. The Capitals banished them last night with an overwhelming 8-0 victory over Providence Reds.

Since the season started no teams has been able to catch the high-flying Indianapolis club that has lost only 10 games in 35. Their victory over the Reds, in the only game of the night, widened their first place margin over Cleveland Barons in the Western Division to 10 points.

Carl Liscombe, apparently gunning to get his job back with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, supplied most of the punch as the Capitals scored in every period. He scored two goals, one single handed, and assisted in three others.

Ronnie Hudson, Syd Abel, Thomson, Don Deacon Ross, and Bush fired the other goals. The Capitals got four counters in the space of two minutes in the first period. Three coming within a minute and four seconds while Ab Demarco of the Reds was serving a penalty.

No games are scheduled in the Int-Am tonight.

Phil Cavarretta On Comeback Trail

Hollywood, Fla., Jan. 26 (AP)— Phil Caverretta of the Chicago Cubs, who played in his first world series as an 18-year-old, is ready for the comeback trail at 22 after recovering from an injury that almost struck him out of baseball.

Cavarretta broke his right ankle sliding into second base at the Polo Grounds last May 8 and was out for the rest of the season. The bone failed to heal properly and months later an operation was performed.

"The surgeons just did get to it in, time," Cavarretta said today as he baked the ankle in the Florida sun. "They had to take out a wire that was holding the bone together, and the ankle was badly infected."

Eager and anxious as any rookie, Cavarretta discussed his chances of winning back a regular berth with the Cubs. He is assured of being on the payroll, for he signed his contract months ago.

LEAFS LEAD LEAGUE

Chalking up their third consecutive win, without a defeat, the Maple Leafs remained leaders of the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association with a 4-1 win over the Americans at the Hume Arena last night. In the opening game of a dual bill of minor league hockey in Belleville's "little big league" the Black Hawks defeated the Canadiens 3-2 to remain in second place, only one game behind the league-leading Maple Leafs. The Americans and Canadiens are tied for third place, however.

In the nightcap affair Frank Cunningham's Leafs were forced to come from behind to win, as the inspired Americans scored the only goal of the initial frame. Three rapidly scored goals in the middle session cinched the game for the Leafs, however, despite the fact the winners scored the only tally of the third stanza. May of the Leafs, led the scoring with two goals, both being the result of assists by Robertson.

Sturdy Defence

Ingram and Clark proved a sturdy rear-guard for the Leafs and repeatedly turned aside the advancing squad led by Coach Bill Dennis. The Leafs' backchecking and speed proved the difference in the scoring.

The line-ups:

Maple Leafs: Goal, Clark; defence, Burkholder, Ingram; centre, Goyer; wings, Langabeer, Powers; subs, Robertson, May, Barnum, Bradley, McCormick.

Americans: Goal Mills; defence, Sharpe, Rose; centre, Kellar; wings, Mcguire, Cronk; subs, Reid, Cook, Rosebush, Carson and Asselstine.

Referee: Cliff Howie.

Summary

1st period.
Americans: Mcguire (Kellar) . 9.50
Penalties—none.
2nd period.
Maple Leafs: Langabeer (Powers) 2.35
Maple Leafs: May (Robertson) 8.50
Maple Leafs: Barnum 16.10
Penalties: Sharpe and Ingram.
3rd period.
Maple Leafs: May (Robertson) 12.35
Penalties—none.

THIRD PERIOD GOAL

Maracle's third period goal gave the Black Hawks their 3 to 2 win over the Canadiens in the opening game that saw too much bunching on the part of both teams. Maracle scored two goals and had an assist to lead his teammates to victory, McCabe getting the other Hawk counter.

In winning the Black Hawks set up a strong defence headed by goalie Cook. Slower afoot as a team the Canadiens found a formidable stonewall to crash on their thrusts. Theobald and Reid scored for the Canadiens. Maracle and McCabe looked the best for the winners, while McBride and Barrett carried the play for the losers. Thirteen-year-old Billie Holway on the Hawks defence took the eye of several fans in his steadiness.

The line-ups:

Canadiens: Goal, Thompson; defence, Hunter, O'Connor; centre, Reid; wings, Barrett and McBride; subs, Symons, Hutchinson, Rogers, Bennett and Theobald.

Black Hawks: Goal, Cook; defence, Fitzgibbon, Rowe; centre, McCabe; wings, Rosebush, Maracle; subs, Holway, Davis, Hall and Gannon.

Referee: "Lum" Carson.

Summary

1st period.
Canadiens: Theobald (Symons) 4.55
Black Hawks: Maracle 11.00
Black Hawks: McCabe (Maracle) 16.35
Penalties—none.

How to Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. PICTON

PICTON PARENTS HEAR FROM BOYS NOW OVERSEAS

Troops State They Are Well Treated and Have Plenty of Food

OTHER NEWS ITEMS

Picton, Jan. 26.—Local people were very pleased to learn that Lt.-Col. Sherman Young, V.D., Officer Commanding Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, now at Aldershot, was among the officers presented to His Majesty the King during the inspection of the First Overseas Division, and also that he was included at the luncheon attended by His Majesty. Letters to relatives and friends from the men overseas tell of a determination not to be overshadowed by any other regiment and that every man was co-operating to make this possible. The letter writers state that they are well satisfied with food and barracks but comments on the weather vary. The dampness appears to be felt keenly and many suffered colds as a result. The writers also definitely state that warships or destroyers in the convoy attacked a submarine the day before they landed. One writer states that their boat shook from stern to bow and that this was the result of shooting from a destroyer. Other writers state that a U-boat was sunk. Many local people are hopeful of hearing local men on the radio newscasts. They are not a little annoyed that attention seems to be devoted for the most part to certain regiments whose pictures dominate the daily press and whose men seem to be given preference in radio interviews. Local people are confident that Canada's only rural regiment will acquit itself with credit to the district and to Canada.

George Rose and Brian Dodds represented Prince Edward Agricultural Society at the annual meeting of the Fairs Association in Belleville on Thursday when dates of fairs in the district were set.

Walter Hyatt, who operates the Lakeshore Hotel at the Sandbanks, suffered several cracked ribs, abrasions and bruises when he was struck by a truck on Front street, Belleville. He had stepped from his car to enter a store at the time.

The annual meeting of the local Baptist Church was featured by the presentation of encouraging reports from all departments. Officers elected were as follows: Clerk, Mrs. Morley Ackerman; treasurer, Mrs. H. Weidmark; financial secretary, Blake Branscombe with Mrs. Branscombe and Mr. A. Merritt as assistants; organist, Mrs. Weidmark; Communion stewardess, Mrs. A. Merritt; Communion treasurer, A. Merritt; sick and flower committee, Mrs. Frank Starr, Mrs. H. Daubney, Mrs. H. Merritt, Blake Branscombe and E. Goodman.

Mrs. J. W. Leavens spent a couple of days this week in Toronto.

Miss Mildred Caughey and Miss Margaret Graves will spend the week-end in Kingston.

Mrs. A. H. Lloyd was convener of the card party Thursday night at the I.O.O.F. hall. The prizes were won by Mrs. L. Gillies and Mr. H. Stevens. The successful event was sponsored by the Rebekah Lodge.

The soldiers and their friends enjoyed a dance at the armouries last night with Jimmie Davies' orchestra furnishing music. Mr. Davies is now a member of the local regiment.

Miss Ila Welsh is spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Keith Noble of East Lake.

The Tennyson Club met Tuesday night at the home of Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Gullett with a good attendance. Featuring the program was a one act play presented by the Dramatic Club of Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute entitled "Buddy Buys an Orchid". It was directed by Miss Mary Purkis and members of the cast were Fred Walden, Marion Fraleigh, Mary Spencer, George Vanskiver, Analise Kraglund. Mrs. L. B. Calnan gave a splendid review of Antoine de Exupery's book "Wind, Sand and Stars". Mr. Albert Case gave two piano solos. Assistants at the social hour were Miss Verna Rutledge and Mrs. Harry Treblicock.

NEED BE NO RENNET SHORTAGE IF PROPER PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

"If farmers, butchers and packing houses, save all the stomachs of calves slaughtered at the right age, there is no reason why Canada's needs in this respect cannot be supplied", a department of Agriculture representative said today, commenting on the reported shortage of rennet, described as a contingency which would be disastrous to the cheese making industry.

The manufacturers of extracts have depended on Europe for their supply but due to war conditions that has been cut off.

DREW STATES KING EVADES CRITICISM BY ELECTION MOVE

Had Promised He Would Answer Every Charge When Parliament Met

ANSWERABLE TO HOUSE

Toronto, Jan. 26 (CP) — Ontario Conservative leader George A. Drew last night made the following statement in comment on the calling of a Federal election:

"This country has seldom seen such an act of abject cowardice. Mr. King held back the mounting wave of criticism of his war effort with the promise that he would answer every charge when he met parliament. Now he has deserted in the face of the enemy. He was answerable in the House of Commons where Dr. Manion was ready to demand an accounting for Mr. King's disgraceful bungling of our war effort. His excuses for refusing to explain his pitiful failure are a shabby return for the courtesies which have been extended to him by Dr. Manion.

"Mr. King apparently thinks he can hide behind his powerful propaganda machine. He will soon learn how much the public already knows.

"I know that every Conservative in the province of Ontario will get behind Dr. Manion in a united effort to restore responsible government at Ottawa."

CALLING 'EM

Ken J. Colling

All highways and byways lead to the Hume Arena and the annual V.O.N. charity ice carnival this very evening. No expense has been spared by President Harold Vaughan and his arduous band of Y'smen and other workers to assure the patrons of a gala night's program, crammed full of delightful skating, comedy, thrills and even a fashion parade. The Hume Arena will be decorated most gayly, spot lights have been put in place and all is set for an evening of kaleidoscopic wonder. Two Canadian figure skating champions, Miss Shirley Halsted and Dennis Ross of Toronto and Ottawa respectively, will head a show that includes the famous Minto Four of Ottawa, skaters from the Toronto Skating Club and our own Clare "Mike" Ridley, of the Quinte Skating Club. In all probability Mr. Ridley will skate with Miss Shirley Halsted in the octette and also in the pairs. "Mike" has skated with Miss Halsted before, so watch his face beam tonight. (Can't say as we blame him).

The much-talked of Hub Smith-Jiber Ellis fight is off, at least for the time being it's taboo. It seems Commissioner A. E. Lyons (Perth), of the Ontario Athletic Commission, was in Belleville on Wednesday night, when a rather hushed-up meeting of fight heads from the R.C.A.F. and district met Mr. Lyons in a local hotel and it was following this conclave that the said Mr. Lyons recommended to the O.A.C. that no permit be given the Trenton promoters for the proposed Ellis-Smith fight of Feb. 3rd. Like all meetings held in camera, however, the basic principle behind the meeting came to the surface and we first got the tip off from Trenton yesterday morning. One thing certain, the Ontario Athletic Commission is out to stamp out all unsanctioned (amateur or professional) boxing and wrestling bouts in this province. Commission Chairman Lionel Conacher promised this clean-up when appointed to office and judging from the unconfirmed reports emanating, the meeting held here district fight and grappling promoters need not expect too much leeway in their activities in the future.

According to the Athletic Commission Act of Ontario, 1939, the objects of the Commission shall be —"To assist, promote and encourage amateur sport and recreation in schools, community centres and through associations of amateur sportsmen and to supervise professional contest and exhibitions." However, we understand Commissioner Lyons made it clear that no further "bootleg" contests would be tolerated. The O.A.C. is placing the promoting of boxing into the hands of district military heads where possible and as we understand it the R.C.A.F. Sports Club is the No. 1 outfit along these lines in the district. The R.C.A.F. was granted a permit to hold a Queens-Air Force boxing and wrestling tournament later this month, but the Trenton promoters, who sought to stage a return Ellis-Smith bout might just as well forget the whole thing. Naturally the Trenton interests were quite peeved when they heard of the decision of Commissioner Lyons and the O.A.C. yesterday, but there seems little left to say, except that we feel the commission should have made some official announcement to the public regarding why the secret meeting was held in Belleville and its final out-come.

According to reports seeping out of the meeting, Billie Hughes, former Canadian bantamweight champion, was named as boxing referee-in-chief for the entire district and aside from the O.A.C.'s final decisions. Mr. Hughes will appoint all fight referees and judges for boxing bouts staged in this entire area. Dr. Austin Walters was named as one official judge by the commission, but we could not ascertain the name of the other local official named by Mr. Lyons. The principle prompted by the O.A.C. in cleaning up boxing and wrestling shows throughout Ontario is a splendid gesture but the public should be acquainted with these moves, as it is John Q. Public who pays the shot. Incidentally the Belleville Armouries was named as an accepted place for indoor bouts and sanctioned by Mr. Lyons, but here again only military units may use an armory during wartime, so where does this leave the civic sports club?

Of course under the regulations of the O.A.C., any recognized sports organization may apply to the Commission for a permit to hold a boxing or wrestling show, be it amateur or professional. Following the application, however, the Commission in the future will carefully scrutinize the background of the officers or executives of the said sports club making application and may sanction or reject the application, as seen fit.

Do you remember when leading woman figure skater for nearly 10 years, Sonja Henie won the European championship at Berlin four years ago today? The 24-year-old Norwegian turned professional shortly afterwards and began her career in motion pictures and skating carnivals.

S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, O.H.A. executive member and local representative on the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, called us yesterday to say he was endeavouring to procure sports equipment for the boys stationed at the Hastings and Prince Edward Depot at Picton. Recently Sergeant James Donahue, formerly our contemporary, made an appeal for sports equipment for the boys of the depot and it looks as though Sergeant Jimmie's request is going to be met with new sports equipment, rather than used articles of recreation, which was requested.

There's big hockey news in the air today. Rumors have a big shake up within the ranks of the Detroit Red Wings with Jack Adams relieved as coach and kicked upstairs to the position of general manager of the entire Red Wing set-up and Ebbie Goodfellow headed for the coaching job. This shake-up was startling enough, but the announcement that Eddie Shore had been secured by the New York Americans, with Eddie Wiseman going to the Boston Bruins in the deal. Apparently there has been trouble between Art Ross and Shore ever since their flare-up over Shore's unwillingness to play all games with the Bruins. Ross and Dutton, skipper of the Americans, have long-since been great pals, both coming down out of the west. Shore on more than one occasion expressed his desire to play for the Americans. What the future holds remains to be seen, however.

SPORT SPICE—Last night the New York Rangers handed the Maple Leafs their first shutout of the current N.H.L. season... Cleveland's Bob Feller says he's not going to shoot for 1940 strikeout records, but rather will confine his pitching efforts to winning games...Joe DiMaggio says he doesn't expect any salary trouble with the Yankees' front office. ...Connie Smythe thinks the Rangers have the Stanley Cup in the bag now.

OVERHEATED PIPES CAUSED ALARM

Overheated pipes and a blazing chimney sent city fire squads racing to 18 Howard Street early today, where the blaze threatened to get out of control. Prompt application of chemicals reduced the flare, and no damage resulted.

Throw a Dollar out of the window

There's a certain amount of pleasure in throwing a dollar bill out of the window (we suppose—we've never tried it) . . . watching it float through the air . . . guessing where it's going to land . . seeing it finally settle on a curbstone . . . and perhaps seeing some surprised individual pick it up.

At least, it's certainly more fun than throwing away a dollar bill by paying one hundred cents extra for something you're buying. Yet every year we all part with a goodly sum of hard-earned cash that we might otherwise save — IF WE KNEW HOW TO BUY!

The quickest, easiest, simplest way to learn how to buy is to read the advertisements in this newspaper. Know values. Know prices. Know quality. Start now to STOP throwing dollar bills away!

"All the World May Stare"

AMY CAMPBELL

It was the glamorous night of their rediscovery. They had been interrupted in the garden and so were dancing again, two people who invited adoring eyes for their youth and meantness for each other.

He was vowing that this time it must not be too beautiful to last with this woman who had been his wife.

He found himself mistaken in the thought that he had remembered how vivid, how utterly desirable she could be. Her gown, shimmering in the old mysterious way, reminded him of his loneliness the last empty year for just the intimacies of her belongings.

There was still that look of intercepted flight in her eyes. No one, nothing, had taken that away. It was so peculiarly hers he wanted it to stay forever.

At the instant, in a way that had once been most marked between them, their thoughts met contrariwise.

"This time you must clip my wings," she said with veiled rapture.

He hesitated. It was still difficult to touch the past lightly.

"You said they were powerless before." He spoke as if it were something he must now have only dreamed.

"I go over and over the things I said. How can you still care?"

"How could I not care? You are unconquerable in my heart." He appeared to be viewing mentally something lovely and quite apart from them both.

He was recalled by the bafflement in her eyes and remembered instantly how she used to say she never really knew what was back of his eyes when he looked away like that. Again there was her old demand in the glance she gave him saying so plainly that she must know. It had the old effect of producing helpless silence on his part. This would not do.

He looked down at her in tender, anxious concern.

"Out in the garden you said....." she hesitated as if savoring something he might, under pressure, repeat.

There was a slight groping silence on his part.

"Say it again," she pleaded. This was very great condescension from her. His very amazement made him powerless now to break a silence so seemingly imposed by some cautious angel.

"Oh now I know," she said, a gentleness breaking over the rebellion in her eyes as she looked up into his. "You always told in little continual ways. The big moments were very rare. Very waited for."

"Always wait, Tawny Lily," he begged, his voice rough with rushing tenderness. "So much can only be lived and looked."

People were watching them intently. It was the first time they had met since they parted. He saw that she was swiftly, cleverly, appraising what she read in eyes everywhere as they moved effortlessly through the crowds. Finally she said, "They think they are seeing an attempt to play with you again."

" 'All the world may stare—' " he quoted with contagious sufficiency.

The misted meaning in her eyes made him forget to go on. Instantly, thrilling, she took him off guard by continuing what he supposed she would have forgotten.

"You and I are bound together so!"

There was suddenly a look of appalled surrender in her eyes before incredibly, her precious, proud head bowed swiftly on his shoulder. He was unprepared for the tears crowding under her lashes, as he guarded this, his great moment of pride, and hers of such complete surrender, by guiding her towards the garden again.

Secure in the dimness blurred with white cherry blossoms, she said:

"I'll never do that again. I've shocked even myself. Now there will be nothing piquant about me for you ever any more."

"It's wonderful to have you say things you don't mean when you shouldn't mean them," he told her gravely.

"I had to tell you."

"And I had to know!" He was thinking that she had always really been for him. She confirmed this with her next words.

"Now I have clipped my own wings, and gladly, for you. Always I've been a little afraid of the restlessness in them anyway."

He drew a branch of white blossoms down around her shoulders and then startled with the effect, looked at her intently.

"There will always be a bough waiting for the sweetest wild wings in the world. Only remember your way home, my dear!"

"And you would star it with flowers for me! I can see that in your eyes. Even after saying I was already too tired and frail to be windblown or streamline. That I should be yours."

With one hand he held the blossoms closer about them and with the other drew a sprig across her eyes for a moment to veil the sweetness there while he made a secret petition that it might always stay.

"There was one white petal fell on your hair as you kissed me. It is still there," she told him with a queer little sort of reverence.

"They would all fall on you if you were to kiss me—again," he promised.

"Red hair needs exquisite care. Let's prolong the process by letting the years make it white."

"In just such a way?"

"In just such a way!"

WALL STREET.

New York, Jan. 26 (AP). — The stock market had its bright spots today but the list as a whole continued under speculative clouds. The fourth hour, minor gains and losses were about evenly divided.

Among scattered strong shares were those of Bethlehem 5 and 7 per cent pfds and Cluett Peabody. These made new tops for 1939-40 with advances of 1 to 2 points.

Supported also were Douglas Aircraft, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem Common, Loft, Westinghouse, Chrysler, General Motors, Kennecott and Allied Chemical.

Lacking rising steam were Goodyear, American Telephone, Great Northern, Montgomery Ward, Anaconda, American Can and Johns-Manville.

Dome Mines and McIntyre, in the Canadian group, improved fractions while International Nickel eased as much and Lake Shore Mines held unchanged. In the bond market Canada 4s were easy.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Jan. 26.—(CP)—Toronto Exchange dipped further today in early session, weakened possibly by the unsettling prospect of an early election campaign. Only 188,000 shares changed hands.

Losses were narrow in the Industrials held fairly steady and the foods, held fearly steady and the foods, papers, implements and miscellaneous issues were moderately weak.

Pend Oreille and Sherritt were the weakest of the Base Metal list and the Golds Limited losses to about 5 cents. Wright Hargreaves recovered about 20 cents of Thursday's loss.

Home, Davies, Anglo-Canadian and Calgary-Edmonton were mildly weak issues of the Western Oil group.

Increased Receipts Lower Egg Prices

Toronto, Jan. 26—Slightly increased receipts and only fair demand caused prices to weaken for graded eggs on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Butter remained unchanged.

Buyers worked cautiously on the egg market and dealers shaded down prices in the graded section in an effort to stimulate business and clear the heavier offerings. Grade A-large dropped 1c per dozen to 22c, with medium and pullets off a like amount at 21c and 19c, respectively. The retail section showed no change.

Prices held up on the butter market in the face of lack of interest on the part of buyers. Current supplies continued light and holders were not pressing butter on the market, so that offerings were not burdensome.

Montreal Produce

POSSIBILITY

today in preparation for as hectic a general federal election as the country has seen in 20 years or more.

Already many candidates have been placed in the field by most political groups but battle lines for the past six months have been relaxed in large degree. The Conservatives have about half their candidates already lined up, the Liberals have less than a third, the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation a third.

A major point of immediate interest to most members is the fact they will not get the $4,000 indemnity for this session which they could have used to finance their campaign.

This, among other pressing considerations, will undoubtedly be neatured at caucuses of both the Liberal and Conservative parties. The national executive of the C.C.F. began a week-end meeting Thursday, originally intended to deal with sessional matters.

The Social Credit group, closely knit, feels it is ready for an election any day as far as the present members, all from Alberta, are concerned.

70 Liberals Named

Conservatives at present have named 90-odd candidates and another 25 members will be re-nominated without trouble. They will contest all 245 constituencies, as will the Liberal party which has named about 70 candidates so far.

The C.C.F. national office estimated that about 100 C.C.F. candidates have been nominated and another 50 or so will be placed in the field. Conventions have been held in nine of the 17 Alberta ridings by the Social Credit party. In each case three possible candidates were named, one to be selected by a local committee.

SCHOHARIE

Mr. John Shaw and Mrs. Aaron Clarke were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Stone on Sunday.

Mr Homer Walters of Cherry Valley spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walters.

The many friends of Mr. John Benson are glad to know he is able to take a short walk each day and convalescing from his recent serious illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walters spent Thursday in Consecon with Mr. and Mrs. J. Thompson.

CHARLES A. DEAN GIVEN ONE YEAR

Convicted of Making a False Affidavit About Jewelry Business

Charles A. Dean, Belleville, was sentenced to one year in Ontario Reformatory by Judge Madden in County Court held here yesterday after Dean was convicted of making a false affidavit, contrary to the Dominion Bankrupt Act. On charges of concealing assets with intent to defraud and failing to keep books, additional terms of six months were given in each case, after Dean had been convicted on these subseuent counts. All sentences to run concurrently, however.

Dean was arrested by Belleville police some weeks ago after he had made assignments of a jewelry business in Trenton. The charges all arose out of a bankruptcy action, during which Dean was alleged to have made false statements. B. C. Donnan, K.C., County Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution, while Robt. McCulloch, local barrister, appeared for Dean.

Chlorine Gas Leak From Tank Car Kills Two at Oslo, Norway

Oslo, Jan. 26—(AP)—Poisonous chlorine gas from a leaking tank car was wafted by a light wind into the homes of sleeping residents of the little village of Mjondalen early today.

Two were killed and 26, including eight women and several children, were hurried to hospital.

Rescue squads, wearing gas masks saved hundreds of the 2,000 inhabitants by rushing them away to clear air by automobile, still in their night clothes.

The tank car leak developed about 6 a.m. and gas had seeped through many windows and doors before an alarm was given. Workers from a pulp factory for which the chlorine was intended managed to plug the leak.

He reports: "The highgrade on the 385 ft. level at the No. 1 shaft now exceeds 400 ft. in length and mine assays indicate a grade of about 1 oz. ($35.00) over a width exceeding 3 ft.

"Both north and south faces are still in highgrade with prospects of extension excellent.

"Hydro power will be available in March and the 125 ton mill will be ready for production."

FURIOUS ATTACKS

In the attack on Fort Mantsi the army said the Russians left "over 100 dead in front of our positions."

Military authorities reported Red Army divisions had been stopped at Aittajoki and Kollaanjoki, on the front northeast of Lake Ladoga, in drives to relieve large Russian forces virtually isolated near Kitela.

In Lapland, another large Russian force seemed to be in difficulty near Markajaervi, where, a Finnish communique said, an enemy attack "was repulsed."

Fight Rear-Guard Action

This indicated an unsuccessful counter-attack on the Salla front, about 50 miles from the Russian frontier. Retreating to Markajaervi some days ago after abandoning a drive intended to cut through Finland's narrow waist, a Red army force of 40,000 men had been forced to wage rear-guard warfare.

Unofficial accounts said about 6,000 Russians were in peril of starvation in the Salla district and that Russian warplanes were attempting to get food to them by parachute.

In the southeast, where Russians were said to have charged across the frozen lakes on the flank of the Mannerheim line in a costly effort to reach the marooned force at Kitela, Finns pictured the Red Army on a tremendous treadmill.

Since the war started, they said, the Russians have sent men and machines against the Finns in repeated assaults but have remained virtually at their starting place.

Seven United States fliers arrived yesterday to join other foreign volunteers with Finland's air force. They were headed by Vincent Schmidt, veteran of the first Great War who served with the Chinese and Spanish Republican air forces.

NAZIS BOAST

(These sources said that three German submarines, accompanied by a passenger boat now turned tender, had reached the vicinity of Trinidad, on the flank of sea lanes to and from the Panama Canal.

(In these quarters it was felt that the Reich was planning to attempt an assault against British and French ships carrying grain and other supplies.)

British aviation experts, speculating on the reported launching of German plane carriers, expressed belief that the floating air bases would find difficulty in obtaining supplies sufficient to sustain important operations on the High Seas even if they found it possible to slip past British naval and aerial patrols in the North Sea.

NEWS SURPRISES C.A.S.F. OVERSEAS

News From Canada is Almost Sole Topic at Breakfast Table at Aldershot

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, England, Jan. 26 (C. P. Cable) — Announcement that Prime Minister Mackenzie King had called a general election came like a thunderbolt to members of the Canadian Active Service Force in training here.

That news was almost the sole topic of discussion at the breakfast table. Everywhere groups of officers and men huddled around anyone lucky enough to have a copy of a morning paper. The same paper was passed on from group to group until bugles summoned the troops to the parade ground.

Issue Discussed

Men on active service do not speak for publication on matters political. But they discussed the issue among themselves as freely and candidly as they would in peace time.

The concensus inclined to this view: "The sooner this election business is disposed of the quicker we'll be able to concentrate on the task of winning the war."

One lad piped up: "If the election campaign will help break the present cold wave, I'm all for it."

Another shot back, "I'm all agin' it unless we get leave to go back home to vote."

Canadian news has been so meagre in papers in the United Kingdom that the boys seized on the election report as a welcome diversion.

CONSUMPTION

For the period under review total sales were valued at $49,637,986, compared with $51,005,668 in the previous year. Total profit was $9,576,021, down $317,566.

Sales of native wines and licensed wine offices and wineries were valued at $2,025,700, up $139,170. Gallonage sale of beer dropped to 24,715,368 from 25,790,176.

The total profit, together with accumulated profits from previous years' operations, sundry adjustments, and sums on account of permits and forfeited liquor, was turned over to the provincial treasurer, $11,000,000 in all. In the previous twelve months the provincial treasury was enriched by $10,500,000 through the board's operations.

Finnish Patriot Will Leave Soon to Enter Finland's Army

'Tony' Hyttenen, Chauffeur for Col. Wills, Honored by Friends at Northport

When a Canadian Red Cross ambulance crawls across the deep snows of Finland on its errand of mercy among heroic Finnish troops, at the wheel will be a determined young Finnish-Canadian.

He is Tauno Hyttenen, who has spent fifteen years in Canada, and the last four in the service of Colonel F. H. Wills of Belleville and Northport. Of splendid physical build, the thirty-one-year-old Finn, who has been Colonel Wills' chaffeur, since their association, is a finished athlete. He excels at wrestling, boxing and swimming and is a skier par excellence. He will sail for Vassa, Finland, from New York, about the first of February.

"He is a splendid type of man, and one with whom I hate to part", Colonel Wills said last night, "but as the war progressed in Finland, and became closer to the scenes of his boyhood, it became extremely hard to hold him. Finally I had to let him go".

" 'Tony', as he is familiarly called by a host of friends in Northport, is the son of a Finnish warveteran, who died in the last Great War. His mother and sister live on a farm forty miles from the Russian border, northeast of Lake Ladoga, in the Karelian Isthmus, where some of the heaviest fighting of the Russo-Finnish conflict has taken place. His younger brother at present is fighting with the Finnish navy.

Mrs. Hyttenen will remain with the Wills' family with whom she has worked with her husband since his arrival in Northport. Her mother and sister live near Vassa, Finland. Her father was murdered by Russian Bolshevists in the last revolution.

BOYCE'S GARAGE WIN AT HOCKEY

There were sounds of revelry by night heard at the Hume Arena last night, lasting long into the wee small hours. The occasion was a friendly hockey match being played between the employees of the J. B. Boyce garage and the employees of the Trudeau Motors pucksters. There was never much doubt as to the final result as Bert Boyce's charges took an early-game lead and finally won by the wide margin of 17 to 5 over the Fordites.

BRITAIN DRAWS ON CANADA FOR HUGE TIMBER DEMANDS

Unstated Amount of B. C. Timber Will be Transported Across Canada PIT PROPS NEEDED

(By Harold Fair, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Jan. 26—(CP-Cable)—Great Britain, excluded from the Baltic, is depending heavily upon Canada and other Dominions to meet her war-swelled timber demands, timber controller A. J. Harris disclosed today.

Mr. Harris told a press conference that negotiations were proceeding with two Canadian railways for the transport of an unstated amount of British Columbia timber to the Atlantic coast by rail for trans-shipment by boat. This is to cut down the shipping time to the United Kingdom.

Britain also is seeking huge supplies of pit props in Canada and a commission now is in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Newfoundland. A few cargoes already have arrived. Mr. Harris said Canada is the main source of Britain's timber supply.

The controllers said the government had contracted for overseas timber valued at about 17,000,000 pounds but he was unable to specify what amount was Canadian. He did say, however, that "our purchases in eastern Canada amount to considerably more than has been sold to this country in the last 24 years." Heavy British Columbia purchases had been disclosed previously.

Compared with the last war, a large source of supply was developed in Canada when this war started. Particularly after the Ottawa Trade Agreements, business with Canada worked up to a considerable volume.

POLICE COURT

Richard Armstrong, of the Trenton R.C.A.F., appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court on two charges, that of being intoxicated and secondly of stealing 12 packets of cigarettes, the property of the Globe Cafe. Armstrong admitted to the intoxication charge, but registered complete surprise when faced with the theft count.

"Nothing was said about a theft charge when I was arrested and released the other day," revealed Armstrong as he requested an enlargement on this count. On the L.C.A. charge the accused paid the conventional "ten and costs". When arrested by the city police following complaints from Thomas Wong, proprietor of the Globe Cafe earlier this week, Armstrong is said by police to have been in possession of the cigarettes, which he said at the time were merely taken as a joking gesture, police officers reported.

Lad Pleads Guilty

Leslie Potts, 16, Belleville, appeared charged on two counts of receiving stolen goods. The lad pleaded guilty on both counts and was given a six months suspended sentence after Jacob Goodman, local barrister appearing for the accused youth, revealed to the court it was young Potts' first offence.

Fails to Appear

When the name of David Hill was called to answer to a charge of careless driving the accused failed to answer to his name. "Issue a warrant for this man's arrest and bring him into court," instructed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., as he suggested that in the future either cash bail be provided, or accused persons held until trial.

Granted Enlargement

Anita Dillabough, Toronto, appeared on several charges of obtaining goods and money by fraud, to wit worthless cheques. The accused woman was granted an enlargement until Monday.

TRANSIENT SENT TO REFORMATORY

Harry Dobson to Serve Six Months on Shoplifting Charge

Convicted of stealing gloves from off the counter of a Front Street Store, Harry Dobson, of Amherst N.S., was sentenced to serve not less than six months nor more than nine in the Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court.

Dobson was arrested by local police last week on a charge of shoplifting and when apprehended was found to be in possession of two pairs of gloves and four odd gloves, said to have been stolen from the Metropolitan Stores. In court today Dobson pleaded his own case and pointed out the value of the articles taken amounted to only $4.76.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan read Dobson's list of previous convictions, which numbered well over the dozen mark and included convictions in Canada, the United States and Germany. "You really get around, don't you", remarked Mr. Donnan as he urged a Reformatory term.

"The county jail is no place for a man like you", added His Worship as he sentenced the accused to six to nine months in the Reformatory.

WAR BRIEFS

St. John's, Nfld., Jan. 26 (CP) —The British admiralty sought an additional 1,000 Newfoundlanders for Royal Navy and the War Office has asked for 1376 recruits for a heavy artillery unit, Governor Sir Humphrey Walwyn told a Burns' Night dinner here last night. The artillery unit would be for overseas service.

Paris, Jan. 26 (AP)—A parody on a new French decree tightening restrictions on speech and the press is printed on the newspaper L'Oeuvre today. The government said the decree, issued yesterday, was aimed against defeatism.

The paper recounted an imaginary conversation in which one man tells another that he is afraid to say "it's cold" for fear "I would be propagating information of a nature to weaken the public morale" and run the risk of a two-year prison term.

Montevideo, Jan. 26 (AP) — The Uruguayan government today ordered several officers of the scuttled German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee from their refuge in the German legation in Uruguay to be interned elsewhere in Uruguay.

The order applied also to five members of the crew of the Graf Spee found aboard the German merchantman Tacoma and to the crew of that vessel, which the government has interned as a naval auxiliary of the German warship.

IT'S AN OLD TRICK AFTER ALL

Contrary to general belief, the stunt made famous by the Finns of employing white shrouds over the uniform as camouflage is not new. And here is the proof. The photo, made 25 years ago during the world war, shows British snipers, dressed to blend with the snow, going over the top of their trench in the Arieux sector on a manhunt. Even in summer this white camouflage was used in certain areas where a great portion of the terrain was of white clay—the kind used in the manufacture of pottery and clay pipes.

WINSTON CHURCHILL TERMS GERMANY OF 1914-18 'STRONGER ENEMY' THAN PRESENT NAZI GERMANY

Doubts Ability Of Germany to Withstand Losses

First Lord of Admiralty Delivers Speech on Progress of War at Free Trade Hall at Manchester

SUPERIOR AT SEA

Tells British People They Will Have to Pay "Relentless Toll for Mastery of the Seas"

Manchester, Eng., Jan. 27 (CP)—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, today termed the Germany of 1914-1918 as a "stronger enemy" than the Nazi Germany of today.

In a speech in Free Trade Hall, Mr. Churchill said he doubted the ability of Germany today to withstand reverses as she did in the first Great War.

"I always hesitate to say anything that tends to underrate the formidable character of the foe we have to fight," he said. "Yet, I cannot rid my mind of the thought that the Imperial Germany of 1914 was a stronger enemy than the Nazi Germany of today."

He had no idea what the war would cost but he believed that France and England in money and man power "can and will outlast the enemy."

Superior at Sea

On the sea Mr. Churchill said with emphasis, Great Britain is proving its traditional superiority. The odds were 500 to 1 against the Germans sinking any British-convoyed merchant ship which obeyed Admiralty orders.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Wind and snow! With no wind, freshly fallen snow is easily measured because its depth on a level surface is the same everywhere except for changes in different places due to changes in intensity. When snow is falling accompanied by wind, it is not only blown into drifts, making it impossible to secure a true catch, but often the wind picks up old snow, mixing it with the new and making even approximate measurement impossible. Wind laden with snow has immense abrasive power, forming fantastic shapes much as wind blown sand cuts the native rock. Wind also compacts a snow mass and puts it into an unstable condition, the slightest disturbance causing an avalanche if the slope is sufficient.

FORMER KAISER 81 YEARS OLD

Gay Family Celebration of Other Years at Doorn Missing This Year

Doorn, The Netherlands, Jan. 27 (AP)—Shadows of another war fell today across observances of the 81st birthday of former Kaiser Wilhelm II.

The gay family celebration of other years was missing from Doorn Castle, where the former German ruler maintains formalities of his former court and watches, in exile, the progress of another generation of Germans at war with the Allies.

Hohenzollerns in Adolf Hitler's army provide part of his interest in the flagged pins he sticks in war maps to follow the campaign. He has 22 grandsons in the German army. Another, Prince Oscar, lost his life in the Polish campaign.

The Kaiser and Princess Hermine, his wife, invited members of his court, a few dignitaries and friends in Doorn village, including Mayor Baron Von Nagell, to a simple luncheon.

But there were no visitors from Germany or other countries in contrast with a year ago, when sons and grandsons of the Kaiser came in gala uniform with their families Instead, he received gifts and numerous congratulatory letters, many of them opened by the German censor.

Although confined to his castle a few days earlier this month with a cold, he has been going into his snow-covered garden lately and taken occasional, short automobile rides.

WATERTOWN HAS BIG SNOWFALL

Watertown, Jan. 27. — The city of Watertown, N.Y., and district are recovering from a snowfall of 68 inches in five days' time. Motor traffic was paralyzed and railway travel crippled. For some time the road to Syracuse was the only one open from Watertown and 32 passengers on two Greyhound busses had to secure shelter in the substation of the state police at Adams when the buses stalled in deep snowdrifts. So far this winter 116 1-2 inches of snow have fallen at Watertown.

26 of 90 German Aircraft Attempting To Reach Britain Are Shot Down

London, Jan. 27 (CP)—Royal Air Force statistics covering the period from the start of the war, Sept. 3, 1939, to Christmas, show that of approximately 90 German aircraft which reached or attempted to reach British soil 26 were downed and one crashed.

Altogether 58 German aircraft were destroyed by British arms during the period reviewed of which six were destroyed by anti-aircraft fire, 51 by British aircraft and one crashed.

The statistics show the coastal command of the Royal Air Force had flown more than 3,750,000 miles in 44,000 flying hours and that every day they covered a total distance greater than the circumference of the earth (25,000 miles).

Patrols sighted German submarines 107 times and attacked them 57 times. The coastal command also provided escorts for 400 convoys and patrolled a sea-area of 3,000 square miles.

The bomber command up to Christmas made 27 mass flights over Germany.

SOUTH AFRICAN HOUSE REJECTS HERTZOG'S MOTION

Former Premier Calls for Separate Peace Between S. A. and Germany

OPPOSES WAR

Vote of House Shows Weakening of Minority Which Supported Hertzog Last September 5

Cape Town, Jan. 27 (CP-Reuters— The House of Assembly today rejected General J. B. M. Hertzog's resolution calling for a separate peace between South Africa and Germany. The vote was 81 to 59.

Vote on the former premier's resolution came when the House reassembled following an all-night debate.

Intended As Propaganda.

A Labor party speaker declared Hertzog's proposal was intended as propaganda to suggest disintegration of the British Commonwealth, and that Oswald Pirow, who was Hertzog's defence minister, "inherited every German characteristic except the ability to organize an army."

Hertzog, who opposed joining the war against Germany and was succeeded by General Jan Smuts Sept. 6, proposed last Tuesday a resolution that "this House is of the opinion that the time has come for the state of war against Germany to be ended and peace be restored."

The vote of the House showed there had been a weakening of minority which supported Hertzog last Sept. 5 in opposing a declaration of war.

The House at that time voted 80 to 66 against Hertzog's anti-war stand and the next day he resigned, to be succeeded as prime minister by General Jan Christian Smuts, whose government dclard war.

ONTARIO MAY ACT INDEPENDENTLY IN FISCAL POLICY

Provincial Budget May be Drafted Without Knowledge of Federal Factors

NEW DUTY BILL READY

Toronto, Jan. 27 (CP). — Ontario legislators will study during the week-end, if they heed Premier Mitchell Hepburn's request, their copies of the bill to amend the Succession Duty Act—a bill bought in by the govenment as a bill to end all bills on succession duties.

Expected recess of the House Monday or Tuesday may not take place. After yesterday's brief sitting, Premier Hepburn said that the inability of the federal parliament soon to be elected to deal with the federal budget before March 31, and of Ontario's fiscal year, might mean Ontario will have to act independently in fiscal policy.

Purpose of Recess Defeated.

As it is now the provincial budget will have to be drafted without foreknowledge of what the federal parliament will do in the way of increased taxation, said the premier. Original purpose of the recess was to enable the premier to present a budget that would have regard to the federal factors.

Premier Hepburn said that during the week-end he would ponder what part, if any, he will take in the federal general election campaign.

Dangerous Interned Germans Belong to Nazi Socialist Party

Many Are Skilled Workers and Highly Intelligent but Menace to Public Safety

FIVE CLASSES

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Petawawa, Ont., Jan. 27 (CP). — Many of the prisoners of war interned in Canada are members of the German National Socialist party who have sworn to obey orders of Adolf Hitler and his representatives without question.

They are among the most dangerous of the several hundred men confined in the internment camp at Petawawa, about 120 miles west of Ottawa, and the western camp at Kapuskasing, Alta. The prisoners are a varied lot in their political views, in the degree of their subservience to the Nazi regime and in their talents.

Many are skilled workers. Not a few are highly intelligent and have good educations but all are considered by the authorities a menace to public safety in Canada so long as the war lasts. Practically all have had their cases reviewed by a special tribunal set up by the government to hear any reasons they may advance as to why they should be set at liberty.

Skilful Piloting Saves Lives of Six Passengers

Vancouver, Jan. 27 —(CP) — Trans-Canada Air Lines officials today credited the skillful piloting of Captain Z. L. Leigh for saving six passengers from possible death or serious injury when he skidded his plane to a stop at the air port here without landing gear.

Captain Leigh was forced to return to the airport last night soon after he took off for Lethbridge, Alta., because he ran into bad ice conditions, airport officials said they believed the ice made the retractable landing gear stick so the wheels would not drop into landing position.

Fire-fighting apparatus stood by as Captain Leigh brought the big ship down, avoiding the paved runways for a strip of grass. The plane skidded to a stop on one wheel and the fuselage. No one was hurt. Only damage to the plane was to the landing gear.

Further Canadian Progress Will Solve Railway Problem Says S. J. Raymond at Banquet

LARGE ATTENDANCE

"The actual railway problem, in the solution of which the success of Chambers of Commerce and similar organizations will be the main factor, resolves itself into one of further development of Canada, permitting us to handle more freight and passengers," Mr. S. J. Raymond, Toronto, Commissioner of Industry of the Canadian National Railway, told one hundred and sixty members and guests at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce annual banquet in the Hotel Quinte last night.

High-ranking executive officials of the railway and a representative audience that included all walks of life from the city and district, business, professional, industrial and manufacturing heads, political, municipal and civic representatives and a large quota of railway officials of this section of the province, heard a highly informative address on the part played by the C.N.R. in the development of Canada from its infancy to the present day.

Colonization Departments Active.

Colonization departments of the company, Mr. Raymond said, were one of the main factors in the development of the Canadian west. Settlers brought in increased Canada's wheat production from 55,000,000 bushels in 1900 to 490,000,000 in 1939. Without construction of branch lines, immigraion, land set-

Air Force Pilots Must Recognize Nazi Planes at Sight

London, Jan. 27 (CP)— Every Royal Air Force pilot must learn to recognize Nazi warplanes at sight. Before being sent up to try conclusions with a German bomber he attends a series of lectures or recognition classes.

No two types of aircraft are absolutely identical but in some types the differences are so slight that only a highly-trained eye can recognize the distinguishing characteristics, especially when flying fast and high. At the daily classes the pilots see "recognition models" — replicas of German planes built to scale and complete in every detail.

By these models, pilots learn to recognize such features as camouflage, markings, positions of guns and turrets, shape of tailplane and fuselage.

The pilot must memorize the arc of fire from a Nazi plane's guns. The models are fitted with an ingenious device by which pilots learn to avoid these danger spots while directing their fire on the enemy's most vulnerable parts.

BRITAIN'S REPLY NOT SATISFACTORY

Communique Issued After Two-Hour Conference Between British and Japanese

Tokyo, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Japanese Foreign Office tonight indicated that it did not consider Great Britain's reply to Japan's protest against seizure of 21 Germans from the liner Asama Maru satisfactory.

A communique issued after a two-hour conference between Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and the British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, in which the reply was delivered said Arita "demanded reconsideration" of "legalistic expositions" contained in the reply.

Both Japanese and British sources said the meeting had produced no agreement of views but conversations will be continued. The British note is to be published Monday. It was understood to set forth an outline of international law covering such cases.

$42,000 FIRE AT MAXVILLE

General Store and Three-Family House Burned to Ground

Cornwall, Ont., Jan. 27 (CP) —A general store and a three-family house were burned to the ground early today in the village of Maxville, 26 miles north of here. Loss was estimated at $42,000, in the village's worst fire in five years.

The blaze broke out in the rear of G. H. McDougall's store and Mr. and Mrs. McDougall, whose apartment is over the store, were forced to flee thinly-clad into zero weather.

Nothing was saved from the stock of the store but families in an adjoining house had time to carry out their personal possessions and a good deal of furniture before their home caught fire. For a time the flames menaced a United Church next to the house, but bucket brigades, aided by a small pumper from a nearby village were able to save it.

Cause of this morning's fire is not known.

JAPAN AFFIRMS ANTI-COMINTERN PACT WITH REICH

Diplomats Willing to Continue Agreement Despite German - Russian Accord

CONFER WITH ITALY

Possibility of Organizing New Anti - Communist Group Mooted

Budapest, Jan. 27 (AP) — Japanese diplomats now in conference here will recommend reaffirmation of Japan's participation in the anti-Comintern Pact despite Germany's close co-operation with Soviet Russia, it was stated on reliable authority today.

Japan's loyalty to the pact, originally made between Japan and Germany in November, 1936, and later adhered to by Italy, Hungary and other nations, had been shaken by the German-Russian accord of last August.

However, it was said that recommendations for strengthening Japan's ties with the other signatories would be made by the conferees here, the ambassadors to Italy, France and Turkey, the ministers to Rumania, Bulgaria, Switzerland and Hungary and the charge d'affaires in Berlin, and the new government of Admiral Mitsumasa Lonai in Tokyo.

Confers With Ciano.

It was reported that the Japanese Ambassador to Italy, Eiju Amau, before leaving Rome had a long conference with Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister.

Ciano, according to usually reliable sources, suggested the possibility of organizing a new anti-Communist group in the event the Japanese government felt the original Anti-Comintern Pact had been discredited by the German-Russian accord.

The choice of Budapest for the conference was regarded as significant in diplomatic circles. The Hungarian government has long been strongly anti-Communistic.

While the recommendations of the Japanese diplomats here represent only one element in the Tokyo government, it was recalled that Japanese cabinets in the past have given considerable weight to opinions brought out in these periodic conferences.

BRITISH PAPERS SEE NO SLACK IN WAR EFFORT

Canada Will Continue Its Participation in War Regardless of Outcome of Election is Opinion

HAND STRENGTHENED

London, Jan. 27 (CP). — British newspapers today expressed the opinion that the Canadian general election is sure to demonstrate the dominion's full determination to continue its resolute participation in the war, no matter what the outcome may be.

The "grievances, real or imagined", being ventilated in the election campaign "detract in no way from the country's determination to play her full part in the war," the Manchester Guardian said editorially.

"With two Canadian detachments already in Europe and plans taking shape for a vast empire air school, to which Canada will be the host, it is hard to imagine that the charge of lukewarmness will lie against the government.

Japs Must Respect U. S. Rights In China to Get New Trade Treaty

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP).—Respect for American interests in China is the price which officials here say Japan must pay to obtain a new treaty guaranteeing her trade against discriminatory treatment by the United States.

The Japanese-American Commercial Treaty of 1911, which pledged both countries not to discriminate against trade of the other, expired at midnight last night. It had been abrogated by State Secretary Cordell Hull last July, following repeated interference by the Japanese with American interests in China.

Termination of the accord makes no actual change in trade between the two countries. But it leaves President Roosevelt free to raise duties on Japanese imports, if he finds that Japan is discriminating against the United States; to impose a complete embargo on Japanese imports if the discrimination continues, and to impose special harbor charges or tonnage rates on Japanese vessels.

The treaty's termination leaves Congress free also to authorize ad-

Helsingfors, Jan. 27—(AP)— A crushing Russian defeat northeast of Lake Ladoga with the capture of huge quantities of tanks and other war material by the Finns was reported today by unofficial Finnish sources.

These reports said the Russians, desperately trying to escape from an icy trap into which Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim's Generals had led them, had abandoned hundreds of tanks, armored cars, motorized anti- aircraft guns and other artillery.

More Red Army material was said to have been destroyed.

Only Fraction Escaped

How many Russian soldiers froze to death, were killed or died of starvation still was unclear, the Finns said, but the belief here was that only a fraction of four divisions engaged in a long-drawn battle in that area had succeeded in escaping.

Previous unofficial Finnish reports on the fighting above Lake Ladoga had indicated two trapped Soviet divisions might be beyond help while a crisis was expected momentarily for two others.

Benefited by the coldest winter in sixty years, the Finnish forces have launched attack after attack at Kollaanjoki and at Aittojoki, near the Russian border north of the lake.

COL. GEORGE DREW MAKES PREDICTION

Believes Hitler Will Strike Again in March Against Rumania and Hungary

Ottawa, Jan. 27 (CP)—Conservative leader Col. George Drew of Ontario, predicted in an address yesterday that Adolf Hitler may strike again in March and it will be against Rumania and Hungary.

Col. Drew referred to the calendar for his predictions that the German Fuehrer, "a man unquestionably mentally unbalanced," went into action at regular intervals of six months.

Austria was seized in March and Sudetenland in September, the rest of Czecho-Slovakia in March and Poland was invaded in September, he said.

"Hitler is a slave to words, a slave to any dogma he lays down; he has faith in some recurring event at each six month interval. Each March and each September there is some event of tremendous importance in the movement of that government."

Already there are signs of a preliminary buildup for demand on Hungary and Rumania, Col. Drew said.

The present "is very much more serious than our people as a whole have come to realize," said Col. Drew. "This is likely to be a very long war. The war will be won when the German people become convinced they cannot win."

MEMBER OF CREW SWEPT OVERBOARD AS LINER SINKS

SINKS QUICKLY

Tokyo, Jan. 27—(AP) — One member of the crew of the Philippine line President Quezon was reported lost today when he was washed overboard from a lifeboat after the 8,341-ton ship ran aground and sank off Tanegashima Island, southern Japan.

The steamship Ukishima Maru, one of three Japanese ships which answered the President Quezon's S.O.S. in a raging storm, said all others were safe.

Earlier conflicting reports had left the fate of some in doubt. Domei, Japanese News Agency, said three crew members were missing.

The Ukishima Maru wirelessed that the disabled President Quezon sank almost immediately when mountainous waves heaved her from the reefs on which she foundered.

The President Quezon struck one of many dangerous reefs off Tanegashima Island and sank stern first at 11.45 a.m. (9.45 p.m., EST, Friday) after pounding seas opened holes in her hull.

Misfortune dogged the President Quezon, formerly the President Madison of the American mail line. In 1935, when still called the President Madison, she capsized in Seattle Harbor, but was righted and repaired. The next year she broke loose from her mooring at Smith Cove and rammed two vessels, sinking one, the steamship Harvester.

She lay idle until late last year, when she was sold for $350,000, only a fraction of the $5,887,111 she cost to build 18 years ago.

Marsh Hill United Church Ends Splendid Year's Activities

The Annual Meeting of the Marsh Hill United Church and Sunday School was held on Thursday, Jan. 25, 1940 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Finkle. The first part took the form of a supper provided by the ladies of the congregation. The business period was presided over by the minister, E. M. Cook of Foxboro. The S. S. under the leadership of Mr. Berson Mitts reported an income of $90 and a year of splendid cooperation, especially by other young men who took their turn of leading the school as superintendent in three months' periods. This plan will be followed again this year.

The Y. P. S. attracts many of the older members of the Church which adds to the unity and good fellowship of all concerned. In the mid-winter season the meetings are held mostly in the homes of the members. The president this year is Jack Dafoe. The past president, Ralph Campbell, is now President of this Presbytery area.

The W.M.S. is again under the leadership of Mrs. Bert Finkle. The membership is 22 and the income for 1939 was $74.00 and the Mission Band $15.00.

Frank Finkle, Treasurer of the Missionary and Main. Fund spoke appreciatively of the manner in which the contributions had come in. $78.66 was voluntarily given. An increase of $10. Mr. Bert Finkle, Treasurer of the Church and reappointed, reported an income of $566.63 an a balance on hand of $17.65. The Board of Management for 1940 consists of: F. Campbell, B. Finkle, B. Mitts, D. Hollinger, B. Bleecker, W. Lindenfield, Colonel R. Vanderwater.

The Session: Rev. E. M. Cook, C. Vanderwater, G. Mitts, B. Mitts, and F. Finkle.

Mr. J. L. Herbertson, Elder and Trustee, was lost by death in the past year, Clayton Marisette was appointed trustee. Mrs. J. Frederick was reappointed organist of the church and Allison Vanderwater appointed leader. The Junior Choir takes certain regular Sundays in providing choir numbers and leading the choral part of the service.

A vote of thanks was heartily passed and tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Finkle for opening their home and the minister thanked all present for hearty and diligent attention to the business of the evening.

Titled Figure Skaters Delight Large Audience At V.O.N. Carnival

Brilliant young stars of Canada's figure skating world received a royal welcome at the Hume Arena last evening when 1500 members of the community attended the annual V.O.N. Carnival, sponsored by the Belleville Y's Men's Club. Canadian junior champions, and outstanding skaters of the Toronto Skating Club, the Minto Skating Club, Ottawa, and the Quinte Skating Club, Belleville, contributed to a program that had a varied appeal for the pleasure of young and old.

The Hume Arena was decorated in red, white and blue for the event with the shields of the V.O.N. and the Y's Men's Club, and flags and banners carrying out the decorative scheme. Featured skaters were spotlighted as they appeared on the ice, which added to the attractiveness of the scene.

Ald. Pringle Opens Carnival

"Bud" Haines and the Commodores provided the musical setting for the evening's program, their opening numbers introducing the carnival in smart swing style. In the absence of Mayor Glencoe Thompson, Alderman R. Pringle officially opened the event, welcoming the large audience and extending greetings to the guest stars of the evening. Mr. Pringle expressed the appreciation of the Victorian Order of Nurses for whose benefit the carnival was being presented, and of the Y's Men's Club, under whose auspices it was held, for the co-operation evidenced by the splendid representation of citizens present. On behalf of the clubs he thanked all those who had assisted in any way, the citizens, those taking part in the program and the firemen and police force for aid in preparation for the carnival. Mr. Pringle acted as master of ceremonies for the evening.

Open With Ten Step

As the orchestra swung into the tempo of the ten-step the visiting skaters took the ice, the beauty and grace of their performance assuring the audience a completely satisfying presentation in the numbers that were to follow. First of the single presentations was the number by Miss Margaret Wilson, of the Toronto Skating Club, who with Mr. Peter Killam, won second place in the Dominion championship for junior pairs in the Ottawa competitions last week. A dynamic figure in her royal blue skating costume she spun across the ice with beauty and poise that delighted the audience. Twelve and fourteen-year-old Constance and Andree Choquette of the Minto Skating Club, captured all hearts as they flashed on the scene for their pairs. Their costumes of forest green knitted skirts, flaring in rippling effect, and white angora jackets were very chic. For such youthful performers they displayed a skill and grace that seemed incredible.

Enthusiastic welcome was accorded Clare "Mike" Ridley, of the Quinte Skating Club, when he appeared for his number. Wearing a trim tailored black costume this local star, displayed a talent and dexterity that won for him prolonged applause.

Dressed in Black

Miss Shirley Halsted, Toronto Skating Club, who with her partner had won the Junior Pair Championship, 1940, at Ottawa, received an ovation as she skated on, for her single. In dainty black skirt, rose blouse and with sequinned cap on her dark hair, she was the picture of charm and beauty and her performance was of true championship form in the spins, turns, loops and jumps that made up her presentation.

Miss Margaret Wilson and Mr. Peter Killam of the Toronto Skating Club, displayed the qualities which put them in the honors class. The former was in white satin, that contrasted strikingly with the dark black suit of her partner. Their number was a delight to watch, an exhibition that was almost perfect in its co-ordination.

Adorable Little Elf

Little Miss Constance Choquette, twelve years of age, this time wearing a white satin costume with touches of blue appeared for a solo number looking like a particularly adorable little elf. For the final solo number the audience had the privilege of an exhibition by Mr. Dennis Ross of the Minto Skating Club who has just been acclaimed Junior Men's Single Champion. With extraordinary footwork, difficult dance steps beautifully executed and easy jumping, he demonstrated his marvellous prowess. His skating costume was a smart affair of black with black satin blouse.

The comedy side of the program was not neglected as local and visiting skaters gave glimpses of the lighter side of the sport. Messrs. Howard Palmer, Bill Juby and Walter Hutchinson convulsed the audience with their interpretation of mailing a letter after having imbibed too freely on bottled delight. Mr. ePter Killam of the Toronto Skating Club followed as the Lady in Red, a clever and amusing caricature of skating femininity. Mr. Arthur Nelles of the Minto Skating Club, in a costume that began dazzingly formal with top hat and tails and was completed with trousers of patchwork design gave a remarkable display of inspired skating. Squaring off around the orchestra and diving for his hat were choice bits of his number. Completing the comic note Mr. Howard Palmer did his famous jumping act while six accomplices had an anxious few moments of anticipation.

Dancing Enjoyed

While the visitors demonstrated dancing on blades, pupils of Miss Mary Forster added variety to the program by their tap dancing. Misses Ruth Hagerman, Madeline Walden, Mary Lou Pigden, Marguerite Garvin, Joyce Cooper and Ines Forster appeared first in trim red and white military costumes and danced a military number on drums, while for their next appearance they wore most original Highland costumes as they presented a swing version of Loch Lomond. The precision and skill of the young dancers made their part of the entertainment an unqualified success.

Sportswear Parade

A sportswear fashion show by Deacon's Sportswear firm was particularly timely and gave the audience a view of the latest word in sports ensembles for the fashionable feminine participant. Misses Vera Revell, Mercy Woodhouse, Nora Weeks, Betty Kew, Georgia Dunne and Marjorie Teney were the attractive models and their costumes included Grenfell jackets and ski trousers that introduced the new "battle dress" trousers, the parka topped jackets, the reversible jackets of gay striped effect, in such lovely colorings as black and white, Chinese gold and brown, brown and coffee beige, royal blue, green and black and flame and white, that would make vivid splashes of color on the ski run. The after ski-ing costume, badminton costumes, the strikingly beautiful rainy day apparel that would make one pray for showers and the slacks costume that reminds one that, after all, summer will come, made up a parade that was an instant hit with all present. Mrs. H. Vaughan acted as style commentator in a splendid manner for the fashion review.

The grand finale, introducing again the skating performers of the evening, closed an interesting evening's entertainment. In the preparation of the program, the inclusion of enlightening facts about Belleville compiled by Mr. Harold Vaughan, president of the Y's Men's Club through the courtesy of Mr. W. C. Mikel, received much commendation from the audience.

Banquet is Held at Holloway Street United Church and Fun-Night Program at Bridge Street Church

The closing devotional service of the Bay of Quinte Conference Winter School was held Friday afternoon. Miss Laura McKee was at the piano, Mr. Jack Garnett gave the call to worship, Miss Jean Mathews read the scripture and Miss Doris Williams took the prayer. Rev. A. R. Cragg gave the address emphasizing the truth that each should be a medium for the coming of Christ to the world. He had made no other provision for the continuing of his work on the earth. This task must be done wholeheartedly. He demands our undivided allegiance. It is a full time job, to build Jerusalem in this fair land.

At the close of devotions, Rev. Harry Mellow spoke a farewell message to the groups, expressing the hope that all would continue to have the intense sense of God's presence which all had experienced during this week of mountain-top living.

Banquet and Closing of School

There was a large attendance in Holloway Street United Church on Friday night. The banquet served by the ladies was exceptionally fine. Miss Jean Mathews, editor of the Winter School paper, then called Mr. Daniel Archer of Grafton to the platform and presented him with the prize for suggesting the best name for the paper. GIRL AT THE FRONT

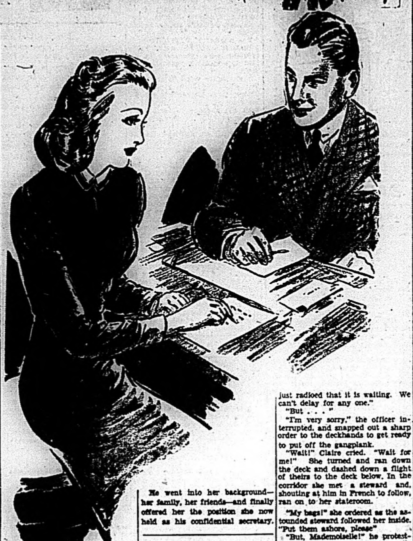
by ROB EDEN



He went into her background—her family, her friends—and finally offered her the position she now held as his confidential secretary.

CHAPTER 1

The girl at the head of the gangplank that bridged a strip of greasy water from the promenade deck to the dock was obviously an American.

The smart alertness of her face reflecting a quickness of mind, the freshness of her complexion, the trimness of her figure revealed her nationality as plainly as though she had worn an American flag in the lapel of her chic brown tailored suit.

She was grateful for the fact that she was a daughter of Uncle Sam. It meant a lot right now, with Europe locked in a bloody struggle, to be a citizen of a neutral country, free to sail away from the constant fear of crashing shells hurled from high-flying Nazi bombers.

She was grateful that a powerful government had arranged with the Companie Generale Transatlantique for one final trip across the Atlantic, daring the perils of lurking U-boats and sea raiders, to evacuate the last Americans remaining in France who wanted to go home.

It was reassuring to know that just outside the harbor a squadron of sleek grey American destroyers rode the swells, waiting for the St. Croix, and that they would form a cordon about the huge liner to give safe convoy within shouting distance of Pier 57 in New York.

"Hello, Broadway, good-bye France," she hummed, reversing the phrase of George Cohan's rousing ballad of the previous World War.

She was going home to peace and safety after weeks of nerve-tearing waiting for air-raid alarms, of seeing gay young men clad in horizon blue, marching off to the front to find, perhaps, death at the end of the road.

Better still, she was going home on the same boat with her boss—Bill Cameron. A warming, pleasant feeling came over her as she thought of him—dear Bill. Not that she ever had addressed him in that fashion during the months she had been employed as his confidential secretary. Indeed not. Their relations were as strictly conventional as they should be between employer and employee. He always was Mr. Cameron to her, and if he ever thought of her as any one but Miss Dutton, she didn't know it. But there was no law against cherishing dreams, dreams she jealously guarded. There was nothing to prevent her thinking of him as dear Bill in her innermost thoughts, and mentally embracing the image of the man who, at the age of thirty-five, was one of the most important men in Washington.

His was work of a highly confidential nature; he served as a diplomatic liaison officer under the direct orders of the president. Officially, he had no standing. It had to be that way, but it was Cameron and several others like him who really were the brains of American diplomacy abroad. They were the ones who had secret meetings with the chancellors and premiers — gaining an advantage here, yielding a point there, until finally when it came time for the ambassadors to get together for drawing up formal agreements, all the preliminaries and undercover maneuverings had been taken care of.

To look at Cameron, you never would have suspected him of being what he was—a brilliant internationalist, a superdiplomat. In appearance, he was typical of New England at its cultural best, with a soft slurring accent which stamped him as clearly as a printed label with the Back Bay district of Boston.

Tall, rather slender, he had none of the appearance of an athlete, but Claire knew that he had been a letter man at Harvard. She had happened upon an old photograph of him in a track suit in a college year book she found in his library one day.

His hairline was receding a trifle, accentuating his ascetic, intellectual appearance to which his rather sharp nose and deep-set grey-blue eyes also contributed. Claire especially liked his mouth, which more often than not was twisted into an ingratiating grin, a disarming grin which often masked the seriousness of his purposes.

That those high in power appreciated his unusual qualities, the girl knew well, and the patronizing manner some of the lesser functionaries with high sounding titles adopted toward him, because officially they outranked him, amused her greatly.

If they knew, as she did, how often he was called in for quiet conferences with men whom the snobbish functionaries held in the greatest awe, they very soon would mend their manners. But that was part of Cameron's value—the almost complete anonymity of his services.

He spoke French, Italian and German with a trace of his Back Bay accent which was so firmly ingrained he never would entirely eliminate it. She knew he was proficient in the languages, because she was, too. That is, she spoke and read French and German like a native and knew enough Italian to recognize that Bill Cameron was a master of that tongue also. That was how she had happened to get her job with him. She had specialized in languages in college, and when the death of her widowed mother had left her alone in her senior year, she made use of her training and gifts to get a position in the consular service.

It was while she was completing an intensive course of training at Washington that Cameron suddenly sent for her. He questioned her searchingly in French and German, and she replied in the languages he used. He went into her background — her family, her friends—and finally offered her the position she now held as his confidential secretary. She had been afraid that it might be impossible to transfer from the consular service after so much time and effort had been spent training her, and mentioned her fears. Cameron had merely grinned, and said he thought it might be arranged.

The following day, an executive order made her transfer official and she knew that any one who could so easily cut official red tape must wield a powerful influence.

Claire was young—but not too young. Twenty-four, she had written on the questionnaire she filled out when she entered the consular service. She was not too tall, nor on the other hand too short either—about five feet four.

A breeze with a tang of sharpness was blowing as she stood looking down on the deck, searching the crowd for a sight of her employer, and she was glad that her heavy coat was with her bags in the small stateroom she had been fortunate to get, even though it was shared with two other women and a child. November would probably be pretty cold on the North Atlantic.

She tucked a vagrant lock of her curly brown hair back under her small brown sailor hat as she glanced at the watch on her wrist.

"I wonder where he is?" she asked herself. "It's getting late."

There was increasing activity on the dock. Porters were scurrying up the gangplank laden with bags of late arrivals, and a small crane creaked as it swung a huge cradle of interlaced rope piled high with trunks. All other loading had long since been completed. The St. Croix was about ready to put to sea.

A line of soldiers stood at ease beyond the gangplank. Claire noted their camouflaged helmets strapped to the packs on their backs, and the gas masks which swung from straps about their necks. Her own mask, which Cameron had bought for her, was at the Paris hotel where they had lived. She had left it when she took a taxi to catch the boat train, with instructions for the manager to turn it over to some one who might not be able to afford a good one. It had cost five dollars, and was guaranteed to be effective against all types of gas fumes. Some, she knew, that sold for lesser prices, guaranteed the wearer against only mustard and tear gas. If the enemy should drop chlorine or something equally lethal, the cheaper masks would be useless.

Again, Claire glanced nervously at her watch. Fifteen minutes! Not a sign of Cameron yet, and no word from him. Wild visions of what might have happened to him arose to confront her. The plane, in which an army officer was to fly him to La Havre, might have crashed Why hadn't he taken the train?

She knew the answer to that question before she asked it of herself. Cameron had explained as she was leaving, when he handed her both their tickets. A last minute conference, which might take as long as an hour, had been called. He must attend. The French government had put a fast plane at his disposal, so that he would reach the boat almost as soon as she.

"All ashore—all visitors ashore!" a boy in a brass-buttoned red coat and smartly creased blue trousers called as he rang a musical chime. It was almost a useless admonition, no one was on board who wasn't sailing. The porters were not permitted to come any further than the boat end of the gangplank where they turned their baggage burdens over to stewards. This was wartime and every one who came aboard was closely scrutinized and his baggage opened and examined before it was carried onto the ship. France was taking no chance of treachery. It had no desire to lose this tremendous ship built at a cost of nearly $50,000,000 through any lack of vigilance.

Claire's bag had not been opened, but they were the only ones not opened on all that vast ship. Hers bore diplomatic seals, affixed in Paris. She need not open them on the dock in New York either, unless she wished. Cameron had arranged this convenience as they expected to leave for Washington immediately on docking. An army plane would be waiting at Governor's Island, to whisk them to Anacosta an hour after they had set foot on American soil.

Aside from the dock hands, standing ready to cast off the huge hawsers, the strip adjoining the ship was now vacant. The soldiers had withdrawn to the gate, the only entrance to the dock, and were standing in a group there. Sailors were beginning to unlash the moorings of the gangplank, ready for the signal from the bridge to push it ashore.

Claire was almost frantic as she glanced once more toward shed thru' which Cameron would come hurrying if he were to catch the boat. She appealed to the ship officer standing at the head of the gangplank.

"Can't you delay a few minutes?" she pleaded. "Mr. Cameron should be here at any moment."

"I'm sorry, Mademoiselle," the officer replied, with a salute. "We must sail on the dot. Our convoy just radioed that it is waiting. We can't delay for any one."

"But . . ."

"I'm very sorry," the officer interrupted, and snapped out a sharp order to the deckhands to get ready to put off the gangplank.

"Wait!" Claire cried. "Wait for me!" She turned and ran down the deck and dashed down a flight of theirs to the deck below. In the corridor she met a steward and, shouting at him in French to follow, ran on to her stateroom.

"My bags!" she ordered as the astounded steward followed her inside. "Put them ashore, please"

"But, Mademoiselle!" he protested. "It is impossible! We are sailing in one minute!"

"That's why I have to get ashore! Quickly! Take my bags Those on the bed!"

With an expression on his face which clearly indicated that he thought the "mademoiselle" was crazy, the steward grabbed the bags and all but ran after Claire as she hurried back to the gangplank.

"Has Mr. Cameron come aboard while I was gone?" she demanded of the officer.

"No, Mademoiselle. No, I have not seen him."

"Then I'm going ashore. I can't sail without him."

"But . . ."

"I've made up my mind. Please have the steward put my bags on the dock."

With a shrug, the officer nodded permission to the steward to go ashore, and Claire, with one last longing look at the big comfortable deck, walked quickly down to the dock. She fished a ten-franc note from her purse and handed it to the steward, who clutched it eagerly and scrambled back aboard just as the crane overhead creaked and the gangplank swung away from the boat and settled slowly onto the cement floor of the pier.

The girl heard two sharp whistle blasts, and turning, saw the dock-hands casting off the mooring lines. Tugs belched smoke from their stubby stacks and cables tightened as they bent to the task of towing the huge liner away from the shore. Slowly, the St. Croix moved away, the strip of water between it and the dock gradually widening. Passengers, lining the decks, waved frantically to those on shore, shouting good-byes in English and French.

Tears were in Claire's eyes as she stood waving her handkerchief until the big boat, painted a muddy gray for camouflage purposes, melted into the horizon. She had counted so much on going home—on getting out of this country, torn by war, and here she was still in it. She was a fool! Cameron would say so when she saw him! She should have sailed. He would get home some way, perhaps on one of the Clippers which were still flying the Atlantic as far as Lisbon.

But regardless of what Cameron would say—regardless of who might call her a fool, Claire knew in her heart she could do nothing else. She could not go home without knowing what had happened to Cameron. That he was safe.

She called a porter to carry her bags and started into the great shed which covered the dock. She'd go back to the railroad station. She could phone from there. A cab wheeled up at her signal, and the porter started loading in the bags.

"Why, there's some mistake!" she exclaimed. "I have only four bags, and there are five here."

"That's what the steward brought ashore, Mademoiselle," the porter said. "I was watching him. All are marked the same—your initials, the seals. They must all be yours."

Claire insisted there was some mistake, but had to admit that the bags matched. Except now there were two overnight cases instead of one. Both were equally worn. Both had the same seals. She couldn't tell them apart; they seemed identical.

Rather than argue with the porter, she had him put them all into the cab and drove to the station. There, she phoned the hotel where she and Cameron had stayed in Paris.

No, Cameron was not there. He had checked out, and left for Le Havre to catch the St. Croix. No, they had heard nothing from him since he left.

She turned from the phone. There was nothing to do but return to Paris. Somehow, Cameron had been delayed. He wasn't on the St. Croix. He hadn't appeared at Le Havre. He must be in Paris. She walked to the window and bought a first class ticket. Fortunately, a train was leaving in five minutes. She should be back before dark.

In her compartment, she sat staring at the bags ranged on the seat across from her. She was alone, and suddenly she decided to solve the mystery. She opened one of the overnight bags. It was hers, all right. Her night things and toilet articles were there, just as she had carefully packed them this morning before she left the hotel.

Curiously, she unsnapped the catch on the identical bag and opened it up.

This was peculiar! It contained nothing but a cardboard carton which completely filled the inside of the case! What could it be?

She heard some one in the corridor outside, and quickly closed the bag. An army officer, carrying a small kit bag, entered and bowed.

"Do you mind, Maidemoiselle, if I sit in here?" he asked, politely. "The other compartments seem quite filled."

Expressing profuse thanks as though she had conferred a great favor, the officer seated himself by the door, and having disposed of his kit bag, promptly pulled a small book from his pocket and started to read.

He was an elderly man with a heavy white mustache and a small goatee. His cheeks were ruddy from much time spent in the open, and Claire decided that he probably was a retired officer who had been called from the comfort of his small country estate, back to the colors of the country he had served for many years. She wasn't certain of his rank because she never had mastered the mystery of French uniforms, but from the amount of gold braid on his sleeve and cap, she guessed he couldn't possibly be anything less than a colonel. Perhaps a general.

The officer showed no signs of being congenial, and was soon nodding over his book. Claire turned toward the window and as the beautiful countryside, brilliant in the colors of autumn, rushed by, puzzled over the extra bag and tried to think what Cameron would do in such a circumstance.

"There's something funny about it," she said to herself. "Some one is trying to put something over on me."

She decided that Cameron, in her place, would immediately take the case to some one who would solve the mystery and that's what she determined to do as soon as she reached Paris.

Consequently, when the train slid to a stop at the Gare St. Lazare, and a porter carried her baggage to the taxi stand, she directed her driver to take her to the American Embassy.

If M. Bornet was funny to look was fortunate in finding Welles Sanford, an attache she had met several times through her employer, and told him of her experience after she had first made inquiries about Cameron. He knew nothing of what might have happened to Cameron, but promised to investigate.

He inspected the bag containing the carton, whistled softly and telephone the Surete Generale. He briefly described what had happened and while they waited for a man from the secret service, he called the Ministry of War. He had difficulty finding the man he wanted because of the lateness of the hour, but finally got a minor official on the wire.

"No, Monsieur Sanford," the man said. "I do not know what has become of Monsieur Cameron. But I shall make enquiries. I know nothing of his plans, so I shall have to make several phone calls. I shall call you later."

Pierre Bornet of the Surete didn't look the least like a master detective, Claire thought as he bowed deeply when Sanford introduced him to her. He was very short, scarcely five feet, and was quite rotund. In fact, she wondered if he didn't measure almost as much around as he did up and down.

His head was almost completely bald, but as if to make up for this deficiency, nature had endowed him with a luxurious mustache which easily extended three inches on either side of his nose, with a slight upward tilt at the ends which, with his small, sharp bright blue eyes, gave him the general facial appearance of a fox.

If M. Bonet was funny to look at, he was anything but that in his professional capacity. He was efficiency itself as he snapped out questions with the rapidity of a machine gun.

He wanted to know just when she discovered the case. If she had seen it on the boat. Who had carried it off. Who had placed it in the taxi. A description of the steward and the porter, and the taxi driver, too. He asked about the diplomatic labels. Nodded sagely as she explained why Cameron had them affixed to her bags as well as his.

Finally, he got around to the case itself. He carefully compared the odd case with the one Claire knew positively to be hers. Point by point, he went over them, nodding to himself as he saw how cleverly the second bag had been made to look like her own.

With a flourish that would have done credit to a master showman, he at last opened the bag. He carefully removed the carton. He smelled it. Shook it gently, and at last took a penknife from his pocket and slit the cover.

Cautiously inserting one finger, he withdrew it and nodded brightly at the powder which adhered. He smelled that, sniffing like a dog at a rat hole. Finally, he barely touched the end of his tongue to it.

"Mademoiselle, you have done France a great service!" he exclaimed, finally. "You have defeated a dastardly plot—a plot which, if successful, would have utterly destroyed the grand paquebot—the St. Croix!"

"You mean . . ." Claire couldn't go on.

"I mean it is a highly inflammable powder—a powder which in several days would have set fire to its paper covering, burned through the case, and your cabin would have become a raging inferno. It would have spread so rapidly that it would have been impossible to control it once it caught hold. The St. Croix would have burned to the water's edge. It is one of the most terrible chemicals known!"

"But how could it have been done?" Sanford demanded.

"Spies, Monsieur. Spies. They knew Monsieur Cameron and Mademoiselle Dutton were leaving on the St. Croix. They knew about the diplomatic seals on their baggage. They imitated one of Maidemoiselle's bags and placed this powder in it. It was unlikely, they thought it would be noticed. All other baggage which went aboard the boat was carefully examined for just such things as this. They knew Mademoiselle's would not be. So!"

He shrugged his shoulders expressively.

CHAPTER 2

Claire's Discovery

Realization of the fate she had so narrowly escaped sent chills up and down Claire Dutton's spine as Pierre Bornet described the incendiary powder.

"There was enough to destroy even so large a ship as the St. Croix, once it got started," he explained. "It is the most terrible chemical now known, and if the enemy ever starts dropping quantities of it from planes over our cities—well—" He paused dramatically, and Claire and Sanford could easily envision the holocaust his words conjured up.

"It has been used before," the Surete detective continued. "In fact, it is strongly suspected that a small quantity of this powder caused the destruction of the American Clipper ship which vanished without a trace while on a path-finding expedition in the South Seas. Every one knows that establishment of the transpacific air line was bitterly opposed by certain powers. Sabotage of other sorts was attempted, so why not this?"

Claire realized it had been a mere accident that saved the St. Croix and possibly the lives of every one aboard.

"If Bill Cameron had arrived on schedule, whoever put the overnight case in my stateroom undoubtedly would have removed it and planted it somewhere on the ship, and it suddenly would have burst into flames and destroyed us all," she thought. She was thankful that Cameron had missed the boat.

But where was he? What had happened to him?

She turned to the two men and spoke the questions aloud.

"It was absolutely imperative that he reach New York as quickly as possible and go on to Washington," she told them. "He told me that. I know he would be aboard the St. Croix now unless something happened—something terrible."

"Suppose you leave M. Cameron's whereabouts to me?" suggested Bornet. "We of the Surete will find him if he is anywhere in France.

"If Mademoiselle will permit the suggestion, I would strongly urge her to leave France as quickly as possible. There is an American warship sailing from Bordeaux, I believe, in two days. You are in very grave danger here, that is certain. If certain persons know your movements well enough to exactly duplicate your baggage they may not hesitate to harm you once they learn their plan has been balked."

"There's nothing you can do here, Miss Dutton," he insisted. "The embassy will join with the Surete in making every effort to locate Mr. Cameron. You may depend upon that. It is much more important now that you safeguard your own life and leave while it is still possible. I can make the arrangements for you to get aboard the warship."

Claire's chin, ordinarily so round and soft, set determinedly.

"Thank you both, very much, but I'm staying in France until I find Mr. Cameron. He's my employer—he depends upon me. I cannot leave without him, regardless of any danger I may be in." Her brown eyes flashed as she faced them defiantly.

Bornet shrugged helplessly. Sanford started to renew his protests, and then broke off as the phone on his desk rang. It was the official at the Ministry of War who had promised to check on Mr. Cameron's movements.

"I finally located the officer who had M. Cameron's affairs in charge" the voice said over the phone. "I checked with Captain Rene Martin, the aviator who was to have flown the American gentleman to Le Havre. M. Cameron, he says, never appeared at St. Cyr where the captain was waiting with his plane. The captain waited until a few minutes ago, and then left the field to return to Paris. I expect he will check in here some time this evening."

Sanford thanked the official and asked to have Captain Martin get in touch with him.

"You know what Mr. Cameron's mission here has been, don't you?" Claire inquired.

"I must confess that I don't, Miss Dutton," the embassy attache answered. "So far as I know, he has no official status at all, although I do know my chief has had some dealings with him. My interest in him is simply that he is an American citizen and we are supposed to see that all Americans here who wish to return home are sent on the first available boats."

"The diplomatic seals?" Bornet suggested. "How does it happen that he has those? Surely you must know more about him, M. Sanford, than you have told me."

"How he arranged for them, I don't know—and I don't intend to guess," the young diplomat answered. "I know there are many things that occur about which I have no official knowledge."

Bornet nodded, wisely, twitching the ends of his mustache with his fingers.

"No doubt a highly secret mission," he remarked. "It would be too bad—in fact, quite embarrassing, perhaps—if anything has happened to M. Cameron."

"You don't think . . . ." Claire started, fearfully, half afraid to utter the thoughts that swarmed into her mind.

"Think what, Mademoiselle?"

"That—that anything really can have happened to him? That —that he may be hurt—injured?"

"Of course, I cannot say. It would be a guess and we of the Surete do not guess, Mademoiselle. We get our facts, and then we know."

Although the little man preened himself proudly, there was a serious note beneath the surface that stifled the laugh that half started in the girl's throat. This was no laughing matter. Cameron undoubtedly had disappeared. He had not communicated with the embassy or the Surete. There was no word at the hotel.

"What do you intend to do?"

"Since you have officially brought it to my attention, and since we know something of M. Cameron, I shall make it my duty to find him —if he is in Paris," Bornet answered, simply. "And believe me, Mademoiselle, if he is in Paris, we of the Surete will find him. And promptly."

"Thank you," Claire breathed. "I know I can count on you."

"And you, Mademoiselle — what do you intend to do?" Bornet asked.

"Go back to the hotel where we stayed. I am known there. I shall take a room and stay until I find where Mr. Cameron is— or until you learn something definite about what has happened to him. Perhaps I may get some clue."

"If you are determined then, I shall accompany you," the little detective said. "First, we shall go to headquarters where I shall report this matter of the incendiary powder and turn it over to our chemists to see if there is any trace of fingerprints, other than your own, on the box. Then they will destroy the powder before it begins to work. After that, I shall take you to your hotel. Perhaps the room M. Cameron occupied may offer us some inspiration. We shall see."

And so half an hour later Claire alighted from a cab on the Rue de Rivoli before the hotel she had left that morning for what she thought was the last time. Bornet stepped out with her, and followed the porter who carried her bags into the building.

Inquiry developed that the room vacated by Cameron still was unoccupied and a flash at the detective's credentials immediately paved the way for a search with the blessings of the manager.

After seeing her bags safely to her old room, Claire joined Bornet in the floor above where her employer had lived during their time in Paris. It was strange entering the small suite where she had spent so many hours in the salon, which had been converted into an office while Cameron was there. The furniture, so familiar, seemed somehow strange —as though something of the personality it had taken on from its latest resident had faded away with his departure. The table, the chairs, the writing desk where she had set up her typewriter and which had come to be so closely associated in her mind with Cameron, now seemed just like any other furniture.

It was Claire who discovered the paper while Bornet was searching around in the adjoining bedroom. It was merely a tiny edging of white she noticed first, protruding less than half an inch from under the small rug in front of the writing desk, but she saw it and stooped and eagerly picked it up. A clue, perhaps! Some hint as to what had happened!

It was merely a small strip of paper, a torn piece of hotel stationery. With trembling hands the girl opened it and read the writing on its surface.

Bornet, who had heard her exclaim at her discovery, ran in, peered over her shoulder as she looked at the paper, and then snorted in disgust.

"It is nothing," he said.

"Nothing?" Claire's voice echoed the wonder—the thrill in her heart. For on the sheet was written her name—Claire. Three times, it was written. Bill Cameron must have sat at his desk, pen in hand, and written her name, over and over. Her given name.

And he never had called her anything but Miss Dutton, to her face.

"Thank you both, very much, but I'm staying in France until I find Mr. Cameron. I cannot leave him regardless of any danger I may be in."

TOURIST VISITORS IN CANADA IN 1940

Tourist visitors in Canada should number more than in any other year to the present, it is confidently believed, owing to the hostilities in Europe, which will deter touring in the Old World.

United States residents will therefore have a fine opportunity to come in greatest numbers across the border and see the attractions of Canada. Americans have visited the Dominion by many thousands in past years and have enjoyed themselves and carried away happy memories of their stay, whether it was brief or long.

This year Canada is inviting tourists particularly from the neighboring republic. That there will be many other visitors from other republics of the New World is expected.

This is a grand opportunity to see Canada from coast to coast so that many visitors will probably see more of the Dominion than Canadians have seen.

It is a good time for Americans to visit across what the Prime Minister of Canada in his invitation to United States tourists called "the most peaceful international boundary in all the world."

Canadians are confident in the appeal of the attractions of their country in its cities, towns, villages and countryside, its lakes and resorts, its seashore, its prairie lands, its national parks, its appeal to sportsmen in fishing and in hunting as the invitation pointed out, in the fine facilities for travel whether by air, rail, road or water, in plentiful accommodations, in its historic centres and also in its fine climate.

The Canadian travel bureau is launching a campaign for visitors, from the United States, the people of which have heard President Roosevelt's proclamation of this as a travel year.

Visit of tourists while it brings in money, has the most important interest in the creation and maintenance of the happy relations of two peoples who, largely of the same origin and the same political ideals, have lived at peace for one hundred and twenty-six years. The two lands are true friends and the citizens individually are as they should be, friendly and like to fraternize with each other. In the friendships of individual United States and Dominion citizens lies one of the grounds of the kindly understanding which marks the relations of the nations on both sides of the international line.

NEW ZEALAND CELEBRATES

New Zealand, one of the Dominions of the British Empire, is marking a centennial for just one hundred years ago this week the first shipload of European settlers landed in the beautiful North Island. New Zealand was first discovered by the Maoris, who landed from some Pacific Islands, probably in the fourteenth or fifteenth century. It was rediscovered in 1642 by Tasman but little was known of it until the time of the visits of Cook. Missionaries made a first permanent settlement in 1815. New Zealand was erected to a colony in 1840 and in 1841 it was finally separated from New South Wales and placed under a governor.

The settlers caught a vision of a wonderfully beautiful land in the North Island. It had been a long voyage to their new home, four times the width of the Atlantic. There they paid the foundations of a democratic state. This is one of the marvels that a land so young in settlement should have grown so rapidly and have been able to influence other lands in their form of government.

Today in that far-away home of these British subjects, the people of New Zealand, which is a group of islands, take their full share of the burden of participation in the struggle which rages in Europe and on the sea. In the last war the New Zealanders gave a demonstration of their faith in democratic institutions and 17,000 of their citizens fell in action. New Zealand contributed a warship in the Great War and her soldiers seized German islands in the Pacific.

New Zealand is a Dominion whose only borders are the ocean and the air above. There she is free but freedom imposes the loyalty of service to the cause of freedom. She is developing a sea-going people, she has ships and trade, her seamen have fought in the present war on British ships against the Graf Spee, the scuttled German ship, and her airmen fought in the Kiel Canal raid in the first days of the war.

Canada hopes to see this island Dominion expand in influence and strength. It has the vast possibilities which lie in democracy. With democracy it is a bearer of good news to the world of men. As a democracy New Zealand is more than an island group. It is a home of liberty.

Farther than Canada from the strife of war she is in it as Canada is. As with the other Dominions there never was any doubt where the hearts of the New Zealanders lie.

PADEREWSKI LEADS THE POLES

Ignace Jan Paderewski, once leader of Poland, has now in his old age again assumed the office of President of his native land in exile. It was he who led her out of bondage to the Czars and it is he, who, it is hoped, will be the man to lead back the people victorious to their homes when the wreckers of the republic, Germany and Russia, have lost the fruits of their partition of the country and Poles can be Poles and dwell in their own land without Nazi and Communist interference.

Meanwhile Poles in their own country undergo untold hardships. That there must be great destitution is clear as the Germans undoubtedly have taken from the people practically everything they had; there has been destruction which must have played havoc with the possibilities of living a decent life in that war-cursed country. There must be intense agony of mind and spirit of the people who have lost so many friends in battle, and in executions which have been charged against the Germans who are accused of wholesale slaughter of the leaders of the people.

The Vatican report based on first-hand stories told by priests reveals conditions among the homeless people as appalling. The references are to conditions in the German-occupied provinces. It is said that there has been persistent and violent assault against elementary justice and decency in German-occupied Poland. Unofficial accounts tell of Polish workers conscripted in droves to work for the German war machine, of the endless processions of hobbling suffering, wandering humanity on the roads of Poland, and of the advance of disease and death in that afflicted land.

It has been charged that the Nazis have determined to exterminate a whole people and that they aim to fill up the country with Germans repatriated from Soviet-controlled states.

Painfully and manfully the Poles carry on under their task-makers, the Nazi Germans, seeing their places taken by imported Germans and themselves made to suffer as perhaps never a people has been called upon to suffer.

That as President Paderewski led his people out of great tribulation two decades ago he will lead them again to security which will save them from partitioners, is the prayer of a sympathizing world.

Xray Treatment in Acute Middle Ear Infection

From time to time and from different parts of the world, physicians have been reporting excellent results in the treatment of chronic catarrh and deafness by Xray treatments. The Xrays have been particularly helpful in old or chronic cases of catarrhal deafness. Failure to obtain results by Xrays as reported by some physicians is attributed to not giving the proper dosage at the right distance from sinuses and ears.

It is interesting to learn that in acute disease of the middle ear which so often follows or accompanies disease of childhood, treatment by Xrays is now being used successfully.

Dr. A. H. Dowdy, in Radiology, states that the use of Xrays in these acute middle ear cases does not bring about the cure so much by killing the organisms causing the infection, but because Xray treatment increases the number of white corpuscles in the blood. And it is these white corpuscles that fight and kill the harmful organisms, thus bringing about a cure.

Further, the sooner the Xray treatment is given, the sooner are the results obtained. One of the reasons for the pain and distress in middle ear infection is the great thickness of the pus. This thick pus pushes against the surrounding tissues, including the drum of the ear, and causes the intense pain. The Xray treatment has the effect of preventing the pus from becoming so thick, it becomes so thin that it can readily drain from the ear and thus relieve the pressure and pain. The little tube—eustachian—which carries air from back of throat up to inner side of ear drum is thus enabled to become more widely open and some of this thin pus drains out of middle ear into the eustachian tube to throat and can be coughed out.

Also, if pus is so thin and watery it can very readily drain out of ear drum through a small puncture or opening.

Dr. Dowdy's concluding statement is: "Roentgenotherapy (treatment by Xrays) has been of distinct value in cutting short acute catarrhal middle ear infection (otitis media); and in lessening the necessity for surgery in acute cases complicated by mastoid infection.

It is gratifying to know that Xray treatment may prevent an acute case from becoming chronic which so often is followed by deafness or hard of hearing.

Hitler's Nephew a Headache To Fuehrer, He Admits to Reporter

"Put me through to Hitler, please."

That request from a Montreal Star reporter brought a gasp of astonishment from the telephone operator at the Mount Royal Hotel. She was still incredulous when he repeated his request and finally ended by asking, "You wouldn't be kidding me?"

But the reporter was in earnest and he was finally put through to Hitler—not Adolph, but William Patrick Hitler, Liverpool-born nephew of the German Fuehrer.

The voice on the other end of the line, a clear-cut English voice, announced that it was "Hitler speaking" and readily assented to a request for an interview.

Up went the reporter and he was received courteously by a well built, blue-eyed young man with rosy cheeks and black hair and a faint black line across his upper lip. There was certainly very little resemblance between him and the published pictures of the man who has once more brought the blight of war to Europe.

"You are Mr. Hitler?" he was asked.

"I am," he replied. "In fact I am Adolph Hitler's nephew by his half-brother Alois."

Then Mr. Hitler explained the relationship. It was an involved one. Adolph's father, Alois, married three times. William Patrick's father, Alois II, was a son by the second marriage, and the mother died when Alois was quite young. His mother's cousin came to look after him, and finally was married to his father. Two children were born, Adolph and Paula, and the children were all brought up together.

Alois wanted to be an engineer, but Adolph's mother wanted Adolph to be the engineer, so Alois ran away to France, and later to Ireland. There he met and married Brigid E. Dowling.

"I am their son," continued Mr. Hitler, "and I was born in Liverpool in 1911."

Trained as a chartered accountant, Mr. Hitler could not get a job in England in the depression years. In 1933 he decided to go to Germany where his uncle had been in power about nine months. He took the precaution, however, of obtaining the papers showing his full relationship to the Fuehrer, from Austria first.

In the meantime his father had returned to Germany and bigamously married another woman, and both Adolph and his father tried to disown him.

"I outwitted them, however, by getting those papers," he said. Hitler grudgingly found him a job, "a poorly paid job in a bank," and tried to keep him in the background.

"Hitler is very reticent about his private affairs", continued his nephew, "and no one knew of the little family trouble. Everywhere I went people bowed and scraped before me because of my relationship to their 'beloved leader.' "

"I did not mind and decided to make as much out of it as I could. I was finally forced to leave Berlin last January, and since then I have heard that the Gestapo have had instructions to try and pick me up. I may not be a major headache to Hitler, but I am at least a minor one."

Uncle and nephew saw quite a bit of each other during William Patrick's stay in Germany, and there was not much love lost between them, according to the nephew.

According to William P., in answer to questions from reporters, there is a strange fascination about 5 feet 6½ inch Adolph, which accounts for his popularity with the German people, quite apart from the propaganda and ballyhoo which accompanied his rise to power. He is a hard man to make friends with because he holds himself so aloof.

He is a vegetarian, a teetotaller and does not smoke, but there is nothing mystic about him. That is just propaganda and ballyhoo, said his nephew.

His only hobby is music, his favorite composer, Wagner, and he often pictures himself as a Siegfried. He is a Catholic "but not a very good one," and he can trace his family back to the 15th century, through a long line of sturdy peasant folk. His father was born out of wedlock but was later legitimized when his parents married. The name Schichlgrueber, was the maiden name of Hitler's grandmother.

Adolph is bashful in company and has never become used to being surrounded by the high born people who hold office under him. He is not vain about anything except power.

"Adolph was born a revolutionary and will always remain one," was one of William P.'s closing remarks.

Albania Bulwark Of Italy's Plan

Rome.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini has made Albania the spearhead of Italian influence in the Balkans in the nine months since his troops took the country from King Zog.

In addition, Albania has become a definite cog in Italy's economic self-sufficiency program. The little country is rich in iron and chromium metals. Its chief value, at present, however, is its strategic position. Not only did Mussolini gain control of the mouth of the Adriatic in seizing Albania last April, but he made Italy a Balkan power.

The number of Italian troops in Albania is a military secret. Thirty thousand were sent there in the first expeditionary force of occupation.

Since Italian relations are excellent with Yugoslavia, as with Greece, it is assumed troops are being maintained in Albania to keep the Balkans peaceful by a display of force. If Mussolini felt himself called upon to police the Balkans against a Soviet Russian or other menace, Albania would provide a convenient starting point for the job.

The fascist administration has sought to win the sympathy of the people by doing what it says King Zog should have done with the Italian money which was lent to him.

Shiploads of wheat have been sent to Albania to feed the populace. Employment has been provided on public works, particularly the building of roads which should be useful in war as in peace. Public health services have been developed. In return, Italy intends to obtain riches for its industries.

Zenone Benini, undersecretary of state for Albanian affairs, estimated that Albania could yield 20,000,000 tons of iron ore which could be used in the manufacture of all types of steel. Mussolini has ordered the digging of mines to produce 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 tons a year and the erection of a steel mill in Albania to work the ore.

Wolfram Wolfed

Three British cruisers wolfed a cargo of wolfram ore from the steamship Selenga near Manila. The cruisers were on the job because the British censor at Shanghai got wind of a shipment of the ore, which is used in the manufacture of munitions.

The alert censor checked a cable from a German shipping firm in Shanghai saying that the Selenga would soon be due at Manila. Next day another cable from the German Consulate General at Shankhai referred to the Selenga. The censors followed up this information with the discovery that a German in Canton had obtained two passes from the Japanese to export wolfram ore.

Being wise in such matters the censors got in touch with the fleet. The cruisers caught up with the Selenga and took her to Honk Kong. The wolfram didn't go to Germany.

That's just another indication of the effective manner in which the British blockade is being pressed on all seas.—Windsor Star.

The Sale is Checked

There has of late been no more important, no more gratifying reaction of the Dominion government to the wholesome pressure of public opinion than that revealed by Ottawa's flat prohibition of the shipment of one million bushels of our wheat to Soviet Russia.

It might better, perhaps, be called public indignation, for protests from every part of the country swelled into national condemnation of a sale that—no matter how obscure the transactions—could only mean direct or indirect aid to the enemy which the Empire is engaged in fighting to a triumphant conclusion.

And it is the more pleasing to note that the federal government did not, as it has been inclined to do in the past, get entwined in a net of academic and political juggling. In this instance there was no room for it. The public, through its spokesmen and through the press, made clear its demand.

Ottawa took a wise and encouraging stand. It should be well aware now that public opinion, which has for so long in Canada been more direct and vigorous than the course of the present government would indicate, will not tolerate either apathy or negligence.—Hamilton Spectator.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to the weather said,—
"I hate your fickle ways,
There is no sense for all this cold,
It chills the young and makes the old
Desire much warmer days."

It matters not what clothes we wear,
This penetrating zero air
Just freezes through and through,
Why men should try to reach the pole,
Or make that windswept place their goal
I cannot tell, can you?

To frigid lands I'll never roam,
I'd rather freeze to death at home,
So folks could get the news;
No Arctic nights or ice-bound zones
Will ever claim my frozen bones
Unless I change my views.

Some days we freeze and sometimes thaw,
Some days we shake till we can't draw
A solitary breath.
If milder weather is in store
Why can't we have it just before
We close our eyes in death.

Canada's Troops Impress Writers of French Press

By Gladys M. Arnold

Canadian Press Correspondent

Paris—(CP)—Arrival of the first contingent of the Canadian Active Service Force in the United Kingdom was front page news in France. Many newspapers sent staff writers across the English Channel to report the arrival while all commented in glowing terms on Canada's loyal response to the call for men.

"They were all in the finest good humor in the world with complexions like the famous apples of their country and it was a great sight to see them debarking to the strains of 'O, Canada' " said Jean Oberle in Le Journal.

"Gaiety and good humor is the mark of these young men whose fathers fought in the First Great War and proved their mettle with exploits which showed them to be absolutely without a sense of fear. Today they sing with a marvellous optimism 'The Beer Barrel Polka'."

"It was truly a splendid day in England. We were informed that more than a tenth of the men in this contingent were men who actually fought in the years 1914 — 1918. Instinctively one searched them out and when one passed, a face more serious, gravity in the eyes, the cheers burst forth. And all those big fellows, sculptured in the forests and farms — trappers, fishermen, French-Canadians — yes, even a number of 'redskins' all wearing the Canadian Scottish bonnet.

(A Frenchman cannot imagine writing a story touching Canada without mentioning the trappers and the Indians — it's a sentimental complex of his youth and the stories of Fenimore Cooper.)

Prove Empire's Unity

"In a freezing fog we waited several hours, the arrival of the troops from the other side of the ocean who have come to prove once more on the battlefields of Europe that the British Commonwealth of Nations is truly a community of men under one King, with the same culture, the same ideals, the same aspirations and the same conceptions of human liberty and dignity."

The songs, but more especially the cries in unison of province, hometown or college surprised the French journalist. In France the custom of college yells in unknown.

Says Paul Gordeaux, in Paris-Soir: "Admirably equipped, comfortably costumed, like a group of sportsmen — skiers — each man carried his gun and a large individual sack in which to keep his personal belongings. On the exterior was written his name in large black letters. I searched for the name of a French-Canadian — — somebody from Montreal or Quebec perhaps.

" 'What,' I said impatiently, 'is there no one from French Canada?

"A fresh voice replied with a strong accent. 'There's me, for one. My name is Jean Eudes Marcus, 24, native of Quebec, house painter,' and he continued laughing. 'I hope to help my comrades with a little job over here—we've come to twist the neck of our dear brother Adolf.' "

"Who could imagine that when we saw them three years ago at Vimy that they would be back again so soon?" one says.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Rumania is on the spot because of her rich oil wells. Germany need Rumanian oil and reported to have told Rumania the delivery of substantial quantities is a matter of life and death for the Reich.

Many Rumanian oil producing companies are owned by British, French and American interests. Great Britain and France do not need Rumanian oil very badly but have a keen interest in keeping it away from Germany. They are ready and willing to take it all, just for that reason and object to having British and French companies selling oil to their enemies.

In an effort to hold the scales even King Carol and his government are establishing national control of the oil industry. In effect the government would give orders to the oil companies as to their volume of production, their sales policy and prices and conditions of sale.

Were it a simple issue between the government and the oil companies the British and French governments would probably make a protest as was done by the British and United States governments when Mexico expropriated oil properties owned by British and American companies and possibly resort to some trade retaliation. But when their vital interests in the war are involved they may do more, especially as Rumania is under certain obligations to the Allies by reason of their guarantees of her independence.

So long as Germany gets an appreciable quantity of Rumanian oil the Nazi regime has a sound reason for respecting Rumanian neutrality. By attacking the country the Germans, instead of obtaining more oil, might get none at all. Transportation facilities would be disrupted at least temporarily. The Rumanians might destroy their wells. With French and British assistance they might hold a German army in check.

On the other hand, should Great Britain and France compel Rumania to cut off oil supplies to Germany the Nazis would have nothing to lose on this score by waging war.

tlement and other development schemes by the railway this would not have been possible.

Assistance in taking back many to the farms who had moved away, information given to the farmer regarding livestock crops, soils, marketing and numerous other farm problems, is part of the development work now being carried by these departments.

Traffic offices scattered around the world impart information to potential traders. This information is in turn relayed to Canada and its manufacturers in the development of their export trade, the speaker said.

Keep Abreast of Times.

Lumbering and paper industries, fisheries and mines and other vast Canadian resources have been developed through the medium of the Resources Department of the road, Mr. Raymond stated. Employees of this department must keep constantly abreast of the times, and have a knowledge of resources available for development. Reviewing development of various resources the speaker pointed out that Canada's mineral production had increased from 65 millions in 1900 to 470 millions of dollars in 1939. Last year 91,000 employees were engaged in this industry with a payroll of 117 millions of dollars.

Export figures on newsprint in 1910 were $2,000,000. This had increased to $120,000,000 in 1938, he pointed out. "Today we are exporting to over 30 countries in the world and export more newsprint than all other producing countries."

Industry Location.

The economic study for the proper location of an industry was, what was termed by the speaker, a new development on the part of the Industrial Department of the company. Until a few years ago factories were built and operated without regard to the economics of a proper location. In this study, Mr. Raymond said, origin of raw materials and destination of the finished product, nature of the product, labor and initial cost of land, taxes, power, gas and water, play an important part.

Selection of the proper site is another part of the study of the department. Various industries require various sites according to the nature of the manufactured product. It is a great mistake for municipalities to seek and locate industries within their borders when such a location is not economically sound," he said.

"The moment this is done," he added, "you have in your midst an industry that is sick and constantly seeking favors such as lower taxes, reductions in power and water costs, and where they are compelled to pay low wages in order to compete with other manufacturers in marketing their products."

Quoting an excerpt from a speech given by His Majesty King George during the Royal visit to Canada last year, in which His Majesty said "there in the north is a field of enterprise for youth, which will take generations to exhaust." The speaker said that it was a most interesting statement especially when he reflected on evidence given before the senate committee in Ottawa, in which Mr. Hungerford said, "the Canadian National has far greater potentialities than any other railway in Canada because it is so well located in relation to the natural resources of the northern half of this continent".

"People will tell you," he said, "that we have a railway problem that is going to ruin us. The problem, to my mind, is with ourselves; are we going to be defeatists or take advantage of the opportunities that lie ahead of us, in the same manner our forefathers did."

Wrong Conception.

He was surprised, he said, at the number of people who have an absolutely wrong conception of our so-called railway deficit. "They think we lose money on every dollar we take in. Such is not the case. During the period 1923 when the C.N.R. came into being, to the end of last year, the operating revenues exceeded the operating expense by an average of around 22 millions of dollars to 23 millions per annum. The figures for last year will be reasonably close to that amount, but we have an object lesson in a comparison of 1938 and 1939 figures."

"Last year," he continued, "with an increase in gross revenue of 20 millions over the previous year, we increased our net revenue by 13 millions of dollars, or in other words there was 13 millions of dollars profit out of 20 millions more revenue, so you see the railway problem resolves itself into one of the further development of Canada, permitting us to handle more passengers and freight. The success of the Chamber of Commerce and other similar organizations will be the main factor in solving the so-called railway problem."

In conclusion Mr. Raymond quoted a case where Europeans came to Canada to invest their money and live with their children in safety. "If foreigners look to Canada as the land of hope and glory," he said, "let us be proud to live here and help build Canada for future generations. Let us all, gentlemen, look through a forward-vision mirror, rather than a rear vision one."

President I. G. Hefkey.

Prior to the guest speaker's address, newly elected president I. G. Hefkey of the Chamber of Commerce officially extended greetings and welcome to the assembled guests. "The railway has been a predominating factor in the City of Belleville for the past 75 years," he said. "It has meant the expenditure of thousands of dollars each year, while many other benefits have accrued through this, the largest industry in Belleville."

Referring to the host organization, President Hefkey pointed out that it had carried on in an efficient manner for the past twenty years, but this had only been possible through the good will and co-operation of its public-spirited citizens."

New Members.

At this point the customary introduction and taking into the organization of new members was carried out by Mr. Lyle Hunter. Following a few brief remarks in which he outlined the aims of the Chamber, he formally introduced Messrs. A. C. Reynolds, Robert Odendahl, Dr. F. R. Ross, Messrs. J. R. Grant, A. G. Stackhouse, J. Goodman, Ivan Scott, J. L. Irwin, Carl Sills, E. G. Rowsome, Yanover brothers, William Hughes, E. F. Kinnear and representatives of the Rawson Bus Line and the Wonder Bakery.

New Industrial Commission.

Introduction to the assembly of the newly-appointed Belleville Industrial Commission was made by Alderman McLean Haig following brief remarks in which he outlined the aims of the body. He paid tribute to Alderman Edson Logan in his efforts to form the body, adding that the purpose of these "ambassadors of prosperity" was to secure industries for the city. "They had been chosen," he said, "because of their various occupations, and advocations and extensive diversity of experience." The personnel of the new commission consisted of ex-officio, His Honor Mayor Glen E. Thompson, Chairman of Industries in city council, the president of the Chamber of Commerce, the manager of the Public Utilities Commission, and the Industrial Commissioner. Others included Messrs. J. A. McIntosh, Robert H. Martin, George A. Reid, P. H. Wills and Arthur Young.

Toast To C.N.R.

With the typical Dolan humor at its best, Mr. Charles Dolan in proposing the toast to the C.N.R. jocularly stated that a druggist proposing a toast to a railway was like the same druggist telling a bricklayer how to lay bricks. He, however, engaged the assemblage with a number of stories told as only he can tell them. In serious vein he said he knew the railway employees in Belleville had pride and confidence in their officials, as he knew the officials had the same regards toward the employees. "Belleville railwaymen are decent men," he said, 'splendid citizens, easy to deal with and who hold the respect of the remainder of the residents of the city."

Major F. L. C. Bond, vice-president and general manager of the railway in responding to the toast, reviewed the activities of the road since its early life. He pointed out the difficulties it faced at birth saying "it had been born insolvent with an angry public for a godfather".

The canal system bonus of 20 millions and costs of highways after revenues had been deducted, of 50 millions are large figures, he said. These operations tend to divert traffic from the railways. In other words we are competing against ourselves. We must not repeat the mistake of thirty years ago when enthusiasm went beyond the dictates of prudence, but there is a tendency toward it, he said. Reports revealed a chaotic condition, but also remedial advice. Today we are facing a situation when all efforts should be war efforts, and wasteful ones be suppressed.

Mr. J. P. Pringle, general superintendent, in a very brief address stated that there were business and sentimental attachments between Belleville and the railway. Eighty-five years together, he said, expressed sentiment while the business development in Belleville has been very beneficial to the railway.

Brief addresses of appreciation of the hospitality accorded them by the host organization were given by Messrs. A. Nelson, general freight agen; E. R. Battley, general superagent; E. R. Battley, general superintendent motive power; S. O. Martin, general superintendent express; H. P. Tilley, district passenger agent. Regrets at being unable to be present were received from R. E. Perry, asst. freight manager; B. Wheelwright, chief engineer; C. I. Warren, general chairman railway brotherhoods; Mr. Charles A. Cameron, K.C., M.P.; Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P.

Toast to Hastings County.

Complimenting the guest speaker on the excellence of his address, R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P. pointed out that the remarks regarding the gazing through a forward mirror instead of a rear one, were coincidental with those made by him to a service club months ago. "We had stopped instead of going ahead," he said, "and could not help but slip backwards."

He paid tribute to newly-elected Warden John L. Churcher of Dungannon Township, reviewing the success made over a period of years from a poor Scotch boy to his present proud position. "He has had twenty-one years in municipal life, was Reeve of his township for nine years, eight of which he received acclamations. He is a successful dairyman, and farmer, and is the man responsible for putting pasteurized milk in the village of Bancroft."

"In asking you to drink a toast to Hastings, considered the banner county of Ontario if not the Dominion, I ask you to drink to what I hope will be a united county under war conditions. Religious and political differences should be placed aside in the present struggle so we can present a united county, province and dominion," Mr. Arnott said.

Warden J. L. Churcher.

Responding to the toast, Warden Churcher told the assembly that Hastings, one of the largest counties in Ontario, stretched 100 miles to the northward. It has many diversities, he said, its southern part producing the finest bacon, cheese and grain, its central part devoted to mixed farming, while its north was a great tourist playground.

Hastings, he said, has meant much to the industrial life of Ontario. Its northern forests have furnished raw materials which have been shipped to the large industrial centres of which 2,850 tons were shipped via the C.N.R. last year. This has meant a great deal for business centres as well as revenue for the railway. He would like to visualize, with the railway, a county, a province and a dominion as a wonderful industrial area where not one mile of idle track would be in evidence.

He eulogized the tourist possibilities of the north of Hastings and urged a campaign of reforestation to replace rapidly depleting wooded areas.

Referring to mining possibilities, Warden Churcher stated that there were millions of tons of minerals in the northern part of the county. "The surface has not been scratched as yet," he said, "and the day will come when we will supply all the material that can be hauled out."

Confidence in the north, he said, was evidenced in the erection of a new branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in the village of Bancroft that would serve a town of 10,000 people. "If such an institution as the Bank of Nova Scotia has faith like that in the north," he said, "then there must be something there."

Happy associations had always been in evidence between the County of Hastings and the City of Belleville, he said in conclusion. "I know these pleasant relations will continue, and in the future we will go forward progressively and be a great help in the welfare and well-being of this grand old Ontario and Canada."

Mayor Extends Welcome.

Official welcome to the city was extended by His Worship Mayor Glen E. Thompson in a few brief remarks. He cordially voiced the wish that all would come again as he introduced the following guests to the assemblage: Squadron Leader A. Wood, R.C.A.F., who brought regrets of Wing Commander J. A. Sully, Officer Commanding the Trenton base, at his inability to appear; Mr. A. Cekota, Bata Shoe Company executive, Frankford; John Noakes, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen; Ed. T. Truman, agent, C.P.R.; John T. Nunn, chairman, Order of Railway Conductors; Francis W. Potter, chairman, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; John T. Clark, chairman, Brotherhood of Firemen and Engineers; and Harold Armstrong, chairman of Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, all of Belleville.

Interspersing the addresses and during the tasteful dinner the Belleville Male Quartette, Messrs. Harry Moorman, James Bankier, Alfred Evans and Harold Howard was heard in numerous melodic selections. They were called back and generously gave encores. The fine voice of Mr. Bankier was heard in a solo "The Star of Rabbie Burns" which drew well-merited acclaim. S. R. (Sandy) Burrows led the community singing while the reliable Leo Riggs provided musical accompaniment for all the numbers offered in his usual masterful manner.

Concluding a delightful evening, Mr. W. J. Morrison, O.S.D. superintendent, moved a general vote of thanks to all who took part. He paid tribute to members of the Chamber of Commerce for the hard work done in arranging the banquet, the entertaining artists, the various speakers, and complimented Mr. Raymond on his excellent address which he said "had been excellently prepared, and splendidly given".

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Love, the Miracle Worker

Do you really believe in love?

Are you convinced that it is a worker of miracles, that it can transform lives, that it can create happiness and health where otherwise there would be sickness and despair?

Whether you believe it or not, such is the truth. And if you have the faintest shred of skepticism, let me tell you the story of Miss Jessie Simpson, of Teaneck, N.J., who, since her wedding the other day—a church wedding, with veil, bridesmaids and all the charming items of a bridal spectacle—is Mrs. Jim Steward of Hackensack.

Mrs. Steward is an unusually pretty, attractive and capable young woman. Mr. Steward, a college graduate, is following a successful career as an advertising man. The two have known each other for several years and though I am not, of course, in their confidence, I should say that they must have been deeply in love from the beginning. There seemed every reason to believe that, at the end of their short engagement they would have a brilliantly happy married life.

Then came a tragic accident. Miss Simpson fell under a railroad train and was so badly injured that it was necessary to amputate both legs. Onlookers took it for granted that the lovely young girl's life was ruined, her romance shattered.

But the onlookers reckoned without love. And they forgot courage, too. And loyalty. And faith.

It would have been so easy for this girl to spend her life as a relatively helpless invalid. Love and marriage? How should these concern her now?

Gallant, stout-hearted a she has proved herself to be, she might never, alone, have been able to decide to lead the life of other women, to ignore the results of her accident completely. But she wasn't alone. Her bethrothed was very much on hand. His devotion greater than ever, his encouragement priceless.

So love, the love that these two had for each other, pulled Jessie Simpson out of the hospital, freed her from the danger of a negative, wheeled-chair existence, brought her back, miraculous as it may seem, to a complete, normal and thoroughly happy life.

Walk? Why, of course she can And dance, too, if you can believe me. And enjoys nothing more than a round of golf. Also, it goes without saying that she drives a car.

The accident happened in 1937.

Since then, fortified by her own courage and by the devotion of her fiance, Miss Simpson acquired the physical freedom I have indicated. No wheeled-chair for her, after the first month or two.

But even this didn't satisfy her energy and ambition. All about her were girls who had jobs and careers Surely she was as capable as they were. She would prove it. She started a beauty shop. From the beginning it was a success and a great joy to its proprietor. She is going to keep right on with it, now that she is Mrs. Steward.

Oh, she will desert her home, then, let her husband shift for himself? Not she.

She plans to do all her own housework, prepare all the meals. I'm sure she is an excellent cook. "I can do anything that anybody does," she says.

What do you think now of love as a miracle-worker?

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Use Words of Courtesy Spontaneously

"Thank you" and "Please", words of courtesy that recognize no rank, are an act of grace, to be used as spontaneously and generously to a person who serves us in any capacity as to a friend who is most important to us.

All day long, in our various contacts with life, people are doing and saying courteous things, some of casual importance to us, some of great importance. For every courtesy that is given us, in deed or word, we should give a "Thank you". For every service or courtesy we ask, great or small, we should preface a "Please" to our request.

Most of us are punctilious about saying our polite "Thank you" and "Please" to people whom we consider important or important to us, and for courtesies that we consider important or important to us. But we're too often apt to be indifferent about courtesies, especially small courtesies. Or, as is most often the case, we take courtesies for granted, especially "little acts" that we regard as not worthy of or at least not needing our polite recognition. Or, as borne out by my mail, we are uncertain if it is "correct" to thank a servant—a waiter in a restaurant, for example—for service that is more or less in the line of duty.

Perhaps we're the kind of person who is just plain stingy with a "Thank you" and "Please". We hoard these lovely words as if spending them were luxury or a crime. We budget them for special occasions.

Let's open our hearts and our lips and let's use these pleasant words abundantly, joyously. Let's believe in them; let's send them out on pilgrimages as our ambassadors of good will.

For the next week or two make it your pleasant habit to thank for little things that you have hitherto taken for granted. Thank the passenger who moves over to give you a seat. Thank the boy who delivers your groceries. Thank the girl who shampoos your hair or who gives you a manicure. Thank the waiter who serves you. Thank the saleswoman or salesman in a store. Thank the cashier who makes change for you or cashes your check. Thank the polite person who stands to let you pass to your seat in the movies. Thank your news-dealer dealer when he hands you your paper or magazine. Thank a stranger who gives you information or does you a favor. Thank a person who holds a door open for yu. Thank anyone, everyone, who does a courtesy for you, no matter how small or how seemingly insignificant or casual.

And "Thank you" and "Please" are good companions, excellent companions, to bring into your home. Mothers and fathers should thank each other for courtesies, for little attentions. Brothers should thank sisters, and sisters should thank brother. And—very important—always remember to thank a child for any courtesy, or for doing anything that you have asked him or her to do; for example, such a little thing as handing you a book.

See if it isn't true that, if you use these words cheerfully and unsparingly, as a natural impulse, everyone with whom you come in contact— everyone, servant or stranger or friend—will be liking you better. And you will be liking yourself better!

Courtesy Tip

Train yourself to attach names to faces. To remember names is an important social assest, adds to your graciousness and to your popularity.

Do College Planning Early

By Garry Cleveland Myers, M. D.

MANY boys and girls who hope to go to college next year have already done considerable thinking and talking with their parents about the matter. Since they entered the seventh or eighth grade they probably have, with the advice of their home room teacher, special adviser or principal (together with their parents, we trust), been shaping each semester's courses for college entrance.

Some students, alas, have given no thought to the subjects which will have to be covered and credits required for entering college. Some do not get wise guidance in this respect at school or home. Sad may be their disappointment and that of their parents when it is discovered that they have not enough credits in such subjects as methematics or foreign languages to enter a first class college. For some of these students it still might not be too late to earn, during the final semester, the required credits that are lacking.

If you hope to send to college your son or daughter who is now a senior in high school, you will want to check the facts with the youth and probably with the school also.

Talk to Adviser

Moreover, it might be very profitable to you and your child for you to sit in conference with him and a school adviser, to talk over this child's interests and the particular college or kind of college he desires to enter. This school expert usually has a great deal of wisdom of which parents and children should avail themselves.

Then there's the question of the quality of grades the prospective college student has earned in high school. In order to enter college he will have to rank in the upper third, as a rule, or pass college entrance examinations.

The matter of physical and mental health should be considered; the family purse may have to be.

Recently I visited a high grade junior college, covering the first two years of college with credits accepted by any other high grade college or university. In order to enter this junior college the student must be poor; at least he must be financially unable to enter the average liberal arts college. But he must rank in the upper third of his high school class and be willing to work two and one-half hours a day.

Tragic Situation

It has always seemed to me a tragedy that so many bright young men and women of high character should, for want of funds, be denied college when so many dull, unpromising rich sons and daughters are practically driven to college. Too often the wrong people go to college.

In choosing a college it is well for the youth to consider what he expects to get out of college; what he has to put into it by way of high school achievement, habits of mental work and qualities of character; and the kind of college which should best help him realize this expectation.

Be Kind to Your Kitchen

By ELEANOR ROSS

KITCHENWARE deserves the best of care, getting as much attention as your best china or silverware. The tools used for preparing and cooking food must be kept scrupulously clean and in perfect condition if the food is to be properly prepared. Half measures should not be tolerated in the kitchen, nor short cuts such as leaving for that mythical "next time" which with some folks never arrives.

The stove and the sink must be cleaned after use; the stove burners wiped off after each meal. There should be asbestos pads under the saucepans to prevent food from scorching, or boiling too fast and running over, as grease cooked into the stove is almost impossible to dislodge without hard scouring. If the stove surface is wiped well after each meal, the weekly cleaning chore will go quickly. It will then only be occasionally necessary to remove the burners and wash them in soda water.

Keeping It Smooth

Wipe out the sink with soap suds or a mild abrasive powder after each using. This will tend to keep the sink surface smooth and free from stains. Scouring powder must be used if the surface is already roughened. Black or reddish stains will yield to Javelle water applied with a brush and then well rinsed. Food from dishes should be scraped into a strainer, to prevent particles from clogging the drain pipe.

If the drain becomes slow, clear overnight with a lye solution. A strong solution of washing soda poured down the drain every night will help to keep it free. A small suction cup of rubber attached to a handle can be purchased at any hardware store and will be invaluable for use when pipes are slightly clogged.

The glass oven and flame utensils now in use are easily kept clean. Soaking helps to remove food particles and steel wool will remove any stubborn bits. Never allow grease to collect and adhere around the tops of these dishes, otherwise it will bake in and can never be removed. If the dish is stained, you won't want to use it at the table as a serving dish. Of course, after long service, earthenware dishes and glass cooking ware will show brown stains, but if the dishes are properly cared for, they will be very slow to form.

A Fresh Beginning

We have bid goodbye to the year that's past,
The dear, dead days that have been so fleeting,
Through sunshine and shadow they hurried fast,
The wonder of dawn and dusk repeating;
There were days of darkness and days of dream,
There were days of losing and days of winning,
But the golden dawn of a New Year's gleam
Gives us the chance of a fresh beginning.

The book of the old year is blotted o'er,
We gaze on its leaves with heartfelt sighing.
But we need to think of those days no more,
But turn to the days now before us lying—
The days of the New Year gleaming bright
Their lure of light and life are flinging,
Gladly we turn to the dawning light
To hail the joy of a fresh beginning..

Stylish Warmth

By ALICE ALDEN

THE COACHMAN'S coat came out of Paris and was warmly welcomed a couple of years ago. Now it's the strolling minstrel's coat, a new note from an American designer. In the order of importance, points in its favor are: simplicity, meaning it will be in style idenfinitely; warmth, the soft wool being fully lined, the lap generous; price, under that of any fur jacket one might name. After all, we can't all have luxurious stoles and white fox capes. Black with black satin revers is the most practical choice in this coat, which also comes in red wool with black dash, and white with black, the last a natural for cruisers. Not as chill-breaking but easy to wear is another evening pet recently introduced in California—the short Harris tweed coat of pastel, sequin-embroidered.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Is Your Mate a Pleasant Stranger?

A girl in her twenties, old beyond her years, was recently married to a promising young professional man. Writing to an intimate friend about her marriage and her prospects for a happy life, she said: "I look wonderingly at this pleasant stranger with whom I am living so intimately, whose life pattern in becoming my own. Our spirits have not touched and never will yet I shall not let him down. He is satisfied with what I give him and what he cannot give me I shall find in my family, my friends, my books and my writing."

Gentle readers, this may sound cold blooded to you at first glance, but it isn't. The young bride is applying common sense to her marriage game. She has learned in a few short months what many an older wife hasn't learned in a lifetime: That most men fudge a little on their bids to be good partners and the wives have to make adjustments to what is, regardless of what was promised. She has learned too that no matter how much a man may love his wife, she cannot look to him to furnish the full quota of her happiness. She must make her own life on the side, cultivate interests and friendships that keep her from being abjectly dependent upon her husband.

Every bride is shocked to find herself married to a stranger. Up to the altar his one thought has been to please her to do what she wants done, regardless of his personal preferences. The ceremony out of the way he begins to assert himself and reveal himself and the bride gets one shock after another. She assumed he would love her family as she loves them and enjoy having them around. But he doesn't. She was certain he would give up the friends she didn't fancy and take hers who were more attractive and more acceptable. But he won't.

The stranger with whom she is living so intimately is a big bundle of surprises. He is finicky about his food, cranky about the way his clothes are pressed and his shirts laundered. He has queer silent moods which she can't fathom and funny ideas about his wife, what she should do, say and wear. In spite of the fact that the minister has called them one, her husband is a separate individual whose spirit may or may not touch hers. She can't make him over. She can't change him but she can let him down.

She can let him down by being unhappy and giving him to understand that he has failed her. Joseph Newton says: "Life seldom lives up to its promises and we have to take a substitute. The question is how we take it and in what spirit. Husbands seldom live up to pre-marriage promises. Wives who expect to be happy have to take them as is without trying to make them over and with firm resolve not to let hem down.

Stomach-Ache

Stomache-ache is a particular ailment of childhood. Not that adults can't and don't suffer from it for ,of course, they do. But generally speaking, children have it most.

Usually, a stomache-ache can be taken as a sign that a child has been eating the wrong foods, or has not been eliminating properly, or hasn't been chewing his food as thoroughly as he should—he has been eating too fast. Nine times out of ten stomach-aches are caused either by constipation or indigestion, and all a parent needs to do to prevent these cases of stomach-ache is to watch for and correct faulty eating and elimination habits in the child.

In the tenth case, however, the stomach-ache may be a sign of something serious, and for this reason I advise parents that the only safe thing to do when your boy or girl has it, is to call your doctor and have him examine the child. It is a symptom of a score of disease. I know of many cases of stomach-ache that were neglected with unfortunate consequences. The parents treated Johnny's pain as a minor complaint, the result of indigestion or constipation. After home remedies had failed and Johnn's trouble had gone from bad to worse. I was called. Too often when I got there the child's condition was critical. Other doctors have told me of similar experiences.

Though, as I say, nine times out of ten a child's stomachache is merely a symptom of constipation and indigestion ,in no case should the parent take the ailment lightly. What may seem to be a simple stomach disorder, for which it would be a "waste of money" to call the doctor, could be appendicitis or some other serious abdominal ailment.

A child of ten is unable to describe what he feels accurately. A doctor who is called to see a child complaining only of stomach-ache, may immediately see other symptoms of something far more serious. I recall more than one case in my 30 years of practise in this country district ,of being called in to treat a child with stomach-ache and finding a condition that the parents had not suspected.

One case I particularly remember was that of a ten-year-old boy. In beginning the examination that is routine in all cases, my attention was arrested by the irregularity of the boy's pulse. I got out my stethoscope and went over his chest and back thoroughly, and it was immediately apparent that the child's heart was enlarged abnormally. I found he was suffering from a heart ailment that in all probability would have killed him suddenly and possibly without further warning one day when he happened to be engaged in a strenuous game or other activity.

His stomach-ache really saved his life. With the condition of his heart discovered in time, it was possible to give him a course of treatment that alleviated the condition and made his heart strong. Today he lives a normal life.

Glorifying Winter Menus

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

SPICED FRUIT PIE is a variation of a popular dish. It is a good winter dish for it substitutes dried fruits for fresh ones. Make it with two cups dried apricots or peaches, one and one-half cups water, one cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, teaspoon each cinnamon and butter, pastry for double crust (nine-inch pan). Rinse, dried fruit and put through food chopper. Combine with water, sugar, salt, tapioca and spice. Bring to a boil and continue boiling two to three minutes, stirring to prevent scorching. Pour into pastry-lined pie pan, dot with butter, cover with top crust and brush with milk. Bake in 450 F. oven for about 30 minutes. Six to eight portions.

Idea For Lent

Baked Tuna Fish with Brazil Nuts is a swell idea for Lent, as it is nourishing satisfying and tasty. Four tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, three-fourths teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, two cups milk, one cup ground Brazil nuts, two and one-half cups tuna fish, flaked in one-inch pieces, two pimentoes and six whole Brazil nuts will serve six. Melt butter in sauce pan, add flour and seasonings and stir until well blended. Add milk gradually and cook over low flame until thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Add nuts and flaked tuna fish. Cut six strips of pimento and reserve for garnish. Cut remaining pimento in small pieces and add to white sauce. Pour mixture into greased baking dish and arrange strips of pimento and whole Brazil nuts on top. Bake in 350 F. oven for 15 minutes.

Pinnan Haddie is always a good standby. For a tasty supper or luncheon snack, pour some boiling water over the haddie, remove and dry the fish, then flake it finely. Mix the fish flakes with a little butter and a dash of pepper, form into balls and dip them in beaten egg and breadcrumbs. Fry quickly in butter or in boiling fat. Serve very hot, garnished with fried parsbley.

A reader suggests that the stuffing be left out when roasting duck. Instead, rub the cavity with powdered sage or ginger. Stuffings in duck are usually too full of the bird's own fat to help over-worked digestive tracts.

Trim Ankles in Beauty Parade

By HELEN FOLLETT

NEAT, SLENDER ankles boost beauty morale, make a girl a pretty stepper. Large ankles and fatted calves make for slow movement and slow movement makes for more adipose tissue. Plump darlings feel sorry for themselves, as well they might, and other persons feel sorry for them. No fun dragging around excess weight.

The afflicted one can't be on her toes, have ginger in her heels. She must mind her groceries, cut down on fat-producing elements, starches, fats and sweets. Unless weight is caused by a glandular disturbance, as sometimes happens, food restrictions will take off two or three pounds a week, which are as many as she should lose. No candy, pastries, fat meats, very little butter and cream; use rye bread instead of white.

To slenderize ankles, stand on one foot, send the other one in wide circles with a jerking movement which awakens muscles that have gone sluggish. Massage helps; make a bracelet of both hands, swing 'round and 'round the ankle with heavy pressure. Sprinkle the palms with talcum powder before starting the treatment. Do that every night. Every morning sponge with cold water, rub briskly with a coarse towel, then friction with rub bing alcohol.

Coiffures are playing high-low and the game is exciting. One style evolves from another, and so the uppity rolls atop the forehead have developed into the old-fashioned pompadour. You keep it in place with tuck comb or, if you want to be piquant, you tie the tail ends of the hair with a ribbon bow.

Hair at the nape line is inclined to be a bit shorter, doing away with the scrambled effects of the long bob, which is naive and lovely when ringlets are in apple pie order. Smooth side effects are being shown, with curly ends massed at the back, extending from neckline to crown.

A Three-Minute Journey to:

SANTA FE,

City of Historic Charm

By TEMPLE MANNING

IF YOU are the traveler who looks for something more than just a change of pace and surroundings; if you seek color, foreign atmosphere, scenic wonders and strange sights, you can find them all within the broad confines of these United States. In our own country we have towns that in fifty years have progressed from hitching posts to parking meters, and towns that still retain much of the atmosphere of bygone days, towns that are living history.

We have in mind, Santa Fe—the City of Sacred Faith—at the end of the Santa Fe Trail. For a travel thrill that is all delight, linger awhile in Santa Fe. You will live again the vivid days of the Conquistadores and see for yourself the kingdom of the Indians. Nowhere in Europe have we found a city so full of mysterious wonder and ever-changing beauty. It is the gem of New Mexico, a state rich in color and scenic thrills.

One walks along the quaint, narrow streets of Santa Fe as if in a dream, following the seemingly still-echoing footsteps of the Conquistadores, the roistering soldiers, the quiet Friars who followed the flag of Spain, cross in hand, intent on bringing order out of bewildering chaos. Like a true Spanish city, Santa Fe is built around a plaza, with spreading trees shading old buildings, with benches that invite repose in this city redolent of the past. Roaming the streets at random, one comes across an interesting corner at every turn — quaint architecture, colorful Indians from nearby pueblos are everywhere.

Oldest Mission

In Santa Fe is the Church of San Miguel, oldest mission in America. The old Palace of the Governor, erected about 1610, before the Pilgrims landed, was the seat of the Government of New Spain as well as Territorial New Mexico. In the shadow of the Sangre de Cristos is the magnificent building that houses the amazing Museum of Anthropology. For creature comforts there are guest houses, simple inns and resort hotels.

Although filled with atmosphere of the past, Santa Fe is alive, pulsating and vigorous. Leading out in all directions from the city are roads that lead to lovely spots— places of unexcelled interest and scenic change. Fifteen miles southeast of the city is Glorieta Pass, famous during the Civil War; an hour's ride away is Chimayo, at the foot of the Sangre de Cristos. Here the colorful Chimayo rugs are woven by natives on age-old looms, a real page out of the book of the past. At Chimayo, too, is the gem-like chapel of the Sanctuario. Said to possess magic powers of healing, this church is the focal point of pilgrims throughout the Southwest.

Three miles southeast of Santa Fe, on the Las Vegas Highway, is Seton Village, the realization of a dream begun thirty years ago in the brain of the author, Ernest Thompson Seton. In a natural setting of rolling hills, studded with pinon trees, clumps of aspen and abounding in native flora and fauna, naturalists and students from all over the country congregate here to study nature's lore.

Style Goes Magic

By ALICE ALDEN N

A MAGICIAN couldn't do anything trickier than the designers of these new gloves. Each glove fits either hand, and what's more exciting, if one's lost it may be replaced at half the price of the pair. Possibly one of your first thoughts is that by the time you've worn the gloves a few months, the single you have in possession will appear shabby alongside the new. But it's for this very reason that sturdy leathers, difficult to wear down, have been used. Those shown come in English suede; others are in calf, mustang, goatskin and pigskin —and for both men and women. Just as many of us are wearing these handsome gloves for spectator sports as for driving.

Power of the Nerve Vitamin

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Synthetic vitamin B. is being widely used for a number of conditions. The publicity which has been given its use in the treatment of Lou Gehrig has brought a stack of inquiries to this desk.

Lou Gehrig's ailment, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, has been called in the public press. chronic infantile paralysis," which it is not. It has nothing whatever to do with infantile paralysis and is only superficially like it. If vitamin B: does Lou Gehrig's case any good, it will be a new thing in medicine' Here's hoping that it will.

In neuritis, that is to say, paralysis of the peripheral nerves, vitamin B:, or its concentrate, thiamine chloride, seems, however, to have a very definite good effect. Neuritis is a degeneration of the nerve fibers which may be due to a number of poisonings—vitamin deficiency, lead, alcohol, arsenic and other minerals. Whatever the cause, the effect on the nerves and the physiology and relief of the condition are very much the same, and vitamin B: will prevent the development of neuritis, as well as cure it.

Results in Nerve Ills

Only now has it been possible to take a long range view of the results of vitamin B: treatment of nervous disorders. I have before me a report of over 500 cases of neuritis treated by vitamin B:, which have been followed for over five years. Sixty-one per cent became symptom-free; 36 per cent were improved, and three per cent were un-improved.

The improvement begins within three weeks and the improvement reaches it maximum in nine weeks, according to this report.

If vitamin B: is then discontinued, recurrence of symptoms takes place. At the end of a year about half the patients are in as bad shape as they were at the beginning. At the end of five years, all of them are as bad as they were if no vitamin B: has been taken in the meantime. The readministration of vitamin B: in these recurrences is quite as effective as in the original cases.

Another condition in which vitamin B: has been found valuable is chronic alcoholism. Chronic alcoholics lose their appetites and fail to digest their food because of the deficiency of the vitamin. Besides that, the neuritis (alcoholic paralysis) which comes on is prevented by the administration of vitamin B.

It has been said that the real cause of cirrhosis of the liver and of delirium tremens is due not to alcohol but to vitamin deficiency. I do not believe there are any good grounds for this belief.

Issues Challenge

Egg white in water with sugar and salt is a fairly nutritious diet but contains no vitamins. When any research group can produce delirium tremens on a diet of albumin, water, sugar and salt, I will be ready to believe their contentions that alcohol plays no part in the etiology of the condition.

Questions and Answers

H.S.: "Will lemon juice, taken as you directed for lack of hydrochloric acid in the stomach, cause one to lose weight?"

Answer—Not necessarily. Lemon juice, of course, has not a high caloric value and it would take a good deal of lemon juice to make you gain weight. If, therefore, it is taken in such quantities that it spoils the appetite, there will be a weight reduction.

J. A. J.: "What is good to use for tender skin, which is easily irritated after shaving?"

Answer—Rose ointment, with a little menthol and camphor added.

Fashion Flashes

Note the V waistline, something new in sweaters. The skirt is a bright navy wool gathered onto a wide waistband.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, January 28

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a very interesting and eventful one, showing unusual if not drastic activities, mainly in the realm of the mental or spiritual faculties and forces. Much is to be gained by dealing with fraternal, political or other large issues, using finesse and tact rather than direct methods in dealings.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a very lively, enterprising and successful year. Important issues are at stake in connection with large corporations or diplomatic, political and fraternal organizations. Legal and literary matters should flourish, with the mind pitched to highly-constructive lines of a scientific trend. Much may be accomplished by correspondence.

A child born on this day may have an astute and versatile mentality, with its talents and ambitions trending to high achievements in a literary, scientific or academic field of action. It may have much creative ability.

For Monday, January 29

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a most auspicious and productive state of affairs, with the ambitions under high stimuli for achievement. Intellectual or creative writing of fine order may prove lucrative and bring much gratification if care is taken to avert disputes, strife and useless argument or bickering.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which promotion, preferment and much of a substantial nature may be gained from those in high places. The bent may be in journalistic, literary or other creative lines. It would be wise to curb an argumentative and wrangling nature, even though the temperament may be kindly and peaceful. However shun strife and litigation.

A child born on this day may have a keen, clever, ambitious and magnanimous disposition despite tendencies to disputes. It should enjoy the favor and support of superiors, elders and others in prestige and power.

AFTER HONOR — TROUBLE

There's a "want-to-make-anything-out-of-it?" look in the eagle eye of General Edmund Ironside, chief of Britain's Imperial general staff, as he is pictured leaving the war office in London on his return from France. The general, "Tiny" to his intimates, was decorated with the French grand cross of the Legion of honor by General Gamelin, but the honor brought trouble in the form of a row in the British House of Commons. Gen. Ironsides son, Edmund, Jr., had been taken to France to see the decorating ceremony. Certain M.P.'s want to know how come exception was made in his case.

All Farmers Should Increase Sheep Flocks During Time of War

High Prices for Wool and Better Demand for Lamb Given as Factors

Urging that every effort should be made to cut down the losses in sheep by marauding dogs, H. L. Fair agricultural representative for Hastings County, said last night that the total sheep population in 1930 of 42,260 had been reduced in eight years to 24,996. In 1939, he said, Hastings County townships had paid out $4,526.34 as compensation for sheep killed by dogs.

Dogs had been responsible to a very large degree for the alarming decrease in sheep population. After a flock has been worried by these animals its productivity is greatly reduced. In a great many cases the farmer sells his entire flock and will not keep sheep again. From this can be readily seen the damage to flocks by dogs cannot be accurately computed by money paid in compensation.

The depression following 1930 was also partly responsible for this decline, low prices for wool and lamb were discouraging and many flocks were sold.

Canada uses approximately 60 million pounds of wool a year, but produces only one third of this amount, or 20 million pounds. The set price on wool at the present time nets back to the farmer around 22 1-2 cents per pound, as compared with 10.3 cents average for 1930-38.

Sheep became a most important class of livestock during war time. There are no suitable substitutes for wool in the matter of equipping soldiers. As a conservative estimate, the wool from five or six fleeces are required for each soldier who enlists.

In the past Britain's supplies of bacon have come mainly from Denmark, Poland, Latvia, Lithuania and Holland, with Canada supplying about 20 per cent. Fortunately Canada is in a position to increase her exports and if it becomes necessary to ship large quantities of beef and bacon overseas, lamb might easily become one of Canada's main meats.

Hastings County is richly endowed with land suitable for sheep production. A gradual and steady expansion of the sheep industry would seem advisable as a wartime measure, every effort should be made to cut down on the losses caused by dogs.

Member of C.A.S.F. Finds Sister After 15 Years Separation

London, Jan. 27—(CP)—A private with the Canadian Active Service Force, Leslie Wilkinson, of Montreal, has found his sister after a separation which lasted 15 years. They were reunited in a London police station.

The woman, Mrs. Lillian Deacon telephoned a London newspaper which had published the story of Wilkinson's search asking to be put in touch with her brother.

But the newspaper had "lost" Wilkinson. He was "somewhere in London" looking for her, armed only with her Christian name and an old address as clues.

Groping through the fog, his search unsuccessful, he came at last to a police station in the suburb of St. John's Wood. He told the sergeant all about it.

A couple of telephone calls were made and an hour later brother and sister were embracing before the delighted "cop."

Lester Patrick Sitting Pretty With His New York Rangers Expected to Take All Prizes

Team is Well Out in Front and Have Not Had a Serious Casualty This Season

HAWKS, WINGS DRAW

Canadians Have Heavy Schedule Playing Toronto and Hawks Over Week-end

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

All the swift changes the National Hockey League is undergoing serve to swell the belief that this is New York Rangers' year to haul down all the prizes.

When Chicago played to a 1-1 tie with the Red Wings at Detroit last night, the Black Hawks had on their defence mountainous Jack Portland, who until a few hours before had belonged to Boston all through his professional career. Portland was traded to Chicago yesterday for another defenceman, Des Smith.

The trade bore out rumors of strife between manager Art Ross of the Bruins and the hard-hitting Portland, who used to be a high-jumping champion in his schooldays at Collingwood, Ont. Onlookers got the idea recently, though, that the trouble had eased off and Portland would remain.

With a well-knit lineup that he wouldn't think of changing, manager Lester Patrick is sitting pretty in the Rangers' camp. More and more, too, there is being brought to mind the hockey axiom that the team which misses extensive injuries is heading for the heights. The Rangers haven't had a serious casualty this season.

Ross Uneasy

Ross is uneasy at Boston. He has traded his great Eddie Shore to New York Americans for Eddie Wiseman. Now Shore's defence mate of the 1938-39 Bruin team—which Ross called "the greatest in 38 years"—has gone to Chicago. Injuries have hampered the second-place Bruins.

The Canadiens undertake this week end's heaviest program, playing at Toronto tonight and at Chicago tomorrow. They can rise from the cellar if things work properly.

The Rangers will meet the Americans in New York tomorrow, but Shore won't join the Americans until Tuesday. Meanwhile Wiseman will be playing with Boston at Detroit.

Bill Carse gave Chicago a 1-0 lead after 16 minutes of last night's game. In the second Detroit's youngsters turned on a furious attack and Connie Brown levelled the score with the aid of Joe Fisher and Butch McDonald.

The result left the fourth-place Hawks four points up on Detroit but pulled the Red Wings into sole possession of fifth position, a point up on the Americans.

THE DEAL IS OFF

"It's all off now," declared Manager Smythe of the Leafs as he announced that he had made an offer for Toe Blake of the Canadiens and been turned down. Smythe refused to make public just what the offer was that Canadiens refused for their star winger.

G. CUNNINGHAM HELD FAVORITE

Kansas Veteran Expected to Win Sixth K. of C. Mile Tonight

Boston, Jan. 27 —(AP)— Since one swallow doesn't make a summer, the Boston track addicts figure that one mile, even if Glenn Cunningham loses it, doesn't make an indoor season and the majority of them predict the Kansas veteran will gain his sixth consecutive K. of C. mile triumph tonight in the Prout memorial games at the Boston Garden.

Most of Glenn's well-wishers were among the 15,000-odd who saw him edged out by Gene Venzke here two weeks ago. But they have charged that upset against one of the few mistakes Cunningham, the world's fastest miler (4:04.4, indoors), has made during his long career on the boards. He failed to start his "kick" soon enough.

Zenzke, competing in tonight's conflicting Metropolitan A.A.U. championship meet in New York, will be about the only star miler missing when Cunningham lines up with his field. It includes his fellow Kansas, Archie San Romani, who Boston college's Jack Ryder predicts, is ripe for a 4:07 effort, John Munski of Missouri, Chuck Fenske of Wisconsin, Blaine Rideout of Denton, Texas, Lou Zamperini, California's outstanding miler, and possibly Indiana's Tommy Deckard.

PLAN PROPOSED BY JUDGE LANDIS

Chain-Gang Baseball Would Disappear if Plan Adopted

Chicago, Jan. 27—(AP)—Chain-gang baseball is as dead as last year's pennant race if the club owners take the advice of stern, unyielding Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

The big league and minor league magnates today studied Landis' involved and voluminous plan for setting up a new system of player transactions between baseball clubs. He asked the majors and minors to study it thoroughly and give him their reactions. Landis long has been an opponent of extensive farm systems in baseball, his views doubtlessly being formed after discovering many violations of baseball law in the operation of the chain-gangs.

The Landis plan provides for cooperation of the majors and minors in acquiring, developing and advancing players; the acquisition of players by no means except outright ownership, eliminating the practice of controlling of players on option; granting of subsidies yearly to Class B, C and D league teams; ruling all players in the minors not sold by a deadline eligible for the draft by higher classification clubs each year.

The Commissioner asserted that the best interests of club owners and players would be served by legislation establishing such a system of handling players. It has been Landis' contention that farm systems keep players in "cold storage" until the possessor club needs them and that they cover up players.

PORT COLBORNE TIED FOR SECOND BY ST. CATHARINES

St. Kitts Defeat Galt 10-2 While Goodyears Down Sailors 6-1

HAMILTON WINS

O'Flaherty Performs Hat Trick by Scoring Three Goals Against Sailors

By The Canadian Press

St. Catharines tied Port Colborne for second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" group standing last night defeating Galt 10-2 while Toronto increased its leadership margin to six points by scuttling the Ports 6-1. Hamilton downed Niagara Falls 9-6 in the other scheduled fixture.

Flaherty performed the hat-trick as the Toronto club turned back Port Colborne on the shores of Lake Erie. Imlach, King and Ezeard were the other successful Toronto marksman. Thompson received credit for the lone Port score. The victory gave Toronto 38 points against 32 for the Ports and St. Kitts.

Rudy Pilous gave the home fans at St. Catharines a scoring treat by belting the rubber into the Galt cage four times. Reynolds twice, Pinder, West, Boyd and Backor added to St. Kitt's total while Reilly got both Galt markers.

Hamilton scored six goals in the last 20 minutes to outpoint Niagara Falls who led 4-2 at the end of the first period on goals by Stirling, Zimmerman and Stuart. The latter getting a pair. Miocinivich and Conick got the Hamilton markers and Nichol added another in the second.

Conick and Barlow each scored twice in Hamilton's third frame rampage. Dunn and Robertson also banged home a goal apiece against a brace of Stuart for the Falls.

Galt's defeat was their 23rd straight. Defeat of Niagara Falls left the Cataracts with practically no chance to make the playoffs which involve the first four teams. Hamilton, the fourth team, has 24 points against 12 for Niagara.

USE GREENBERG IN THE OUTFIELD

This Will Give Rudy York Chance to Play Regularly at First Base

Detroit, Jan. 27—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers' three-year-old "Solomon's problem," anent keeping slugger Rudy York at steady work is up for solution in another manner, with slugger Hank Greenberg helping out.

In one more effort to capitalize to the fullest on the two powerful home-run manufacturers, the Tigers are moving Greenberg off first base, his post for seven years, and putting him in the outfield. York goes to first.

This strategy, latest in a long series of moves to insure the presence of York's lusty bat in every battle, was disclosed yesterday when Greenberg signed his 1940 contract.

"Club officials," he said, "feel that the club will be strengthened if I play one of the out-field positions."

York, ever since being brought up from the minors three years ago, has given the Tiger management grey hairs. He could swat the ball a country mile, but never found himself at home in the field.

Third base was bad for him and he failed to get the hang of outfielding. He served passably as a catcher—some experts held great hope for him—but that meant that George (Birdie) Tebbetts, a classy receiver, had to ride the bench.

Together, Greenberg and York smashed out 53 homers last year, Hank geeting 33. The 1938 season was the big one. Hank hit 58, missing Babe Ruth's record by two, and Rudy, playing in fewer games, got 33.

UPSETS SCORED IN QUEBEC LOOPS BY FOUR TEAMS

Verdun's Two Teams Beat Sherbrooke and Cornwall Flyers

THRILLING GAMES

Defeat of Sherbrooke Frst in Twelve Contests for That Team

Montreal, Jan. 27 (CP)—Four upsets in as many games marked the bill of fare in Quebec's Senior Hockey Leagues last night.

Verdun's two teams, the Bulldogs of the Provincial League and the Maple Leafs of the Quebec Senior League, set the pace in the reversals, the Bulldogs beating Sherbrooke Red Raiders 8-2 and the Maple Leafs trouncing Cornwall Flyers 6-3.

The other games both in the Provincial League, saw Quebec Beavers beat Lachine Rapides 2-1 and Shawinigan Falls edge out Boston Olympics by the same score.

Verdun's victory over Sherbrooke was the biggest surprise of the night for the Raiders, who led the circuit by five points, had gone unbeaten in the previous 12 games. They held off Verdun's attack for one period, but the Bulldogs drove in three goals in the second and four in the third for an easy triumph.

The Maple Leafs stepped into the Flyers in Cornwall and after building up a big lead protected it by right defensive tactics. Moe White scored three goals for the Montreal district team which gained a third place tie with Ottawa Senators by the victory.

Verdun outscored Cornwall 5-1 in the first period and added the sixth goal in the second. Flyers scored in each period.

At Boston, the seventh place Cataracts counted twice near the close of the second period to erase the lead the Olympics gained on Bob Jeremiah's goal earlier in the frame. A crowd of 13,665 watched the dull contest.

O. S. D. SKATERS WIN RELAY RACE

Defeat Queen Mary School in Run-Off for Final Honors

Ontario school for the Deaf primary school skaters won the primary school relay ice skating championship of Belleville and the Kiwanis trophy last night. This annual speed skating event was held at the Hume Arena and in connection with the V.O.N. Charity Ice Carnival, sponsored by the Y's Men's Club. It marked the third time in the history of the race, that the O.S.D. team has won the city primary school speed skating championship.

Six schools were represented in the race, Queen Alexandra, Queen Mary, Queen Victoria, St. Michael's Academy, O.S.D. and Albert College. Queen Mary school, last year's winners, won the initial heat, while the O.S.D. lads won the second heat. In the final heat between these two schools the lads from the "deaf school" easily out-distanced the field.

The Kiwanis trophy was presented to the winning team by Kiwanian Ted Hughes. J. E. Shortt, of the Y.M.C.A., was the official starter for the races.

The winning team was composed of Donald Moore, I. Steenburgh, B. Styles, G. Calder, while Queen Mary School team had the following racing: Allan Day, Douglas Day, William Greatrix, Douglas Burns.

TORONTO VARSITY BEATS TRICOLOR

Score 4-0 Shutout Over Queens and Lead Intercollegiate Hockey Loop

(By the Canadian Press)

University of Toronto, where intercollegiate hockey championships have been few and far between in the last decade, see brighter days ahead for the wearers of the Blue and White.

By beating Queen's University of Kingston, Ont., 4-0 last night, Toronto gained undisputed possession of first place in the international intercollegiate league. It was the fourth victory in as many starts for the Blues and the first loss in four games for the Tricolor.

Playing at Kingston, the Blues started slowly but at the halfway mark of the first period Muchy McIlquham gave them the lead on a solo rush. Jack Quigley's two goals in the second period salted away the game but Thor Stevenson added another counter in the third period for good measure.

The Tricolor battled with four and five man attacks in the late stages of the game but Toronto's strong defence and Paul Pentland's fine goal-tending held them scoreless.

McGill University Redmen now are the only team besides Toronto with an unbeaten record. The Redmen, champions since the league was formed, have played only two games.

New York, Jan. 27 — (AP) — They're off, boys! Auburn starts spring football practice Monday.. The Dempsey-Willard fight films are back in circulation now that Jack and Doc Kearns have been cut in for 40 per cent.

The White Sox have retired from the bidding for Bennie McCoy—couldn't talk the same $$$ language as the other clubs....Eddie Mead's new wife, the former Gloria Youngblood, has succeeded in making Eddie stop supporting the bookies and rates a manager's licence....Drew Middleton, the reformed sports writer, now on the AP's London war staff, is home on vacation.

Today's guest star: Dick Freeman, Houston Chronicle—"It's sad but true....a telephone call to the Rice Field house for Bus Brannon, basketball coach, brought this doleful response: 'He's gone over to the hospital to see his team.' "

Eddie Anderson was Knute Rockne's first football substitute and Jim Harris, now Anderson's assistant at Iowa, was Rockne's last.... Le Savolda has a cousin named Mayo singing in the Luther College Glee Club....The Central Y.M.C.A. of (you guessed it) Brooklyn, is running a contest for the best built man and the winner may be featured at one of the Dodgers' night games.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

With grace and ease the skaters from the Toronto Skating Club and the Minto Club of Ottawa saw to it that last night's annual V.O.N. Charity Ice Carnival was the huge success it enjoyed. Miss Shirley Halsted captured the capacity house with her execution of school figures and free skating performance, while the petit Choquette sisters of Ottawa, skated with grace and poise as doubles. Perfect co-ordination was seen in the mixed doubles with Margaret Wilson and Peter Killam, both of Toronto, but Dennis Ross, Minto Club and junior Canadian champion, showed over 2,500 persons just why he captured the Canadian skating championship in his performance last night. The visiting skaters gave a flawless performance, but our own "Mike" Ridley, who skated under the handicap of a cut foot sustained in practice, demonstrated that Belleville's sons are among the top-notchers. Incidentally when the orchids are being passed around for last night's show, give the whole bouquet to President Harold Vaughan, of the Y's Men's Club, who did practically all of the work, laborious and otherwise.

When the Petes downed the Redmen last night the odd victory placed the Liftlock City sextette two points in front of the Flyers. The Petes have played three games with the Redmen, winning all three, while they split with the Air Force in two games played, giving the Petes eight points in the group standing. The Flyers beat the Redmen twice, oddly enough both scores were 6-3 for the "Birdmen" and they trounced the Petes on the latter's last appearance here, giving the Helway-led squad six points in one less game played than the Petes. However, the Petes come to Belleville to meet the Flyers here on Monday night, when the "Birdmen" can climb back into a group leadership tie with the Petes by virtue of a win. An Air Force loss Monday would prove most drastic to the brightly clad Flyers, however.

Regarding the third and final Van Horne Memorial cup final game, in which Queens seniors beat the Air Force 2-1, the Kingston scribe had the following comment to make after the game: "For an intermediate club the Flyers put up a splendid performance against the senior students and the defence play of the Birdmen was probably as good as Queen's will have to contend with this year especially when the veteran Pop Irvin was popping out shoulder checks while Gibson gave a grand display of goal tending. Cameron played clever on the defence and Higgins also blocked well on the back division. McLeod was the best of the Trenton forwards."

With the annual meeting of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association scheduled for March 22nd this year, district softball desirous of presenting amendments or proposals to the parent body will have to hold their league annual conclaves much earlier in 1940, as all amendments or proposals must be in the hands of the parent body, at least one month prior to the annual meeting of the O.A.S.A. Secretary Harry Knott, of the Belleville Softball Association has acquainted the local clubs with the fact and knowing the delinquents in our softball set-up, Secretary Knott can be prepared to call at least two meetings before any business transpires. Team managers who nurse grudges and grievances should come prepared to place their "sore spots" before the annual meeting in order to have these differences ironed out before another season rolls around. Incidentally, while on the subject of softball we understand Frank "McGraw" Sedore, veteran softball mentor from Point Anne has joined the Hastings and Prince Edward Depot and will confine his future hurling aims at Hitler and Co. After all is said and done the local softball interests will miss the same fiery Frank another season.

Early next month a new crop of aspiring young baseball players will be heading south high in hopes of reaching the zenith of all young players' dreams — the Major Leagues. New names will crop up into the baseball news and many hopefuls will be beginning a career which may make them famous. Baseball has many famous names—Cobb, Wagner, Mathewson, Ruth, Vander Meer and others. They were "unknown" too but triumphed over many obstacles to climb to the top. In Monday's issue on our sports pages we will commence another series of articles to run daily entitled "Diamond Meteors," which will include flash-backs on the history of some of the greatest baseball players of all times. These "Diamond Meteors" should be of paramount interest to the old timers, who will enjoy reminiscing over them, while for the younger generation the articles will carry meaty and valuable information regarding the prowess of yesteryear's baseball greates. Don't miss the first and subsequent articles of "Diamond Meteors," which commence in this newspaper Monday.

We didn't think it was at all funny to have the Petes rub it into the Redmen to the tune of 19-5 last night. Coach Frank Buckland and his Peterboro' charges might have appreciated the fact that a few of the local players rounded up what material was available merely to assure the Petes of a home gate and had it not been for the willingness of these kids to help fill out the schedule, the Petes would have been minus at least one home gate and perhaps more. It looks like poor appreciation. On the other hand, however, it was regretable that some of the members of the Redmen failed to make the trip to Peterboro', some of the identical same players who only the week previous had signified their willingness to finish out the season, if the Redmen were placed under new management. Incidentally "Sandy" Burrows returned from an O.H.A. meeting yesterday to inform us there was absolutely no chance of Belleville being relegated to intermediate "B". As a matter of fact, another year the O.H.A. is going to clamp down on centres the size of Belleville, yes, and even Gananoque, importing players from a radius of 40 miles around, Mr. Burrows added.

SPORT SPICE — Coach Larry Goyer's Picton juniors booted another game out of the window and again blame the referee in charge . . . The Trenton kids beat the Picton juniors 3-2, Trenton scoring two goals in the last few minutes. .. .. .. Toots Day, former Air Force player, was in on every goal Camp Borden scored against Owen Sound last night. . . .. To show just how good the Queens Seniors are, Varsity beat 'em 4-0 right in Kingston last night.

Petes Climb Back to Top of League Standing by Victory

Peterborough, Jan. 27 (Special)—Taking a 19-5 victory over the Belleville Redmen here last night, the Petes climbed back to the top of their O.H.A. Intermediate "A" group. The Redmen were minus several regulars and out of the running, and the Petes ran wild to pile up the count in a fast, clean contest. It was 5-0 in the first and the Petes had an 11-2 margin going into the third. They fought back gamely, but were outclassed.

agile, ever-young guardian of Rangers' goal, who hasn't missed a game since he joined the team just after the start of the 1934 - 35 season, and who this year appears to be headed for possession of the Vezina trophy, for fewest goals against. Born at Toronto 30 years ago, Dave had a tough row to hoe to attain his present heights in the hockey world. His amateur days reached perfection with Montreal A.A.A. in the spring of 1930 when that team won the Allan cup. Dave accepted the terms of Maroons, but didn't fare so well, and spent the next couple of seasons commuting between them and the minors, first battling Normie Smith and then the great Aleck Connell for a place in the N.H.L. sun. When Andy Aitkenhead, now in the Pacific Coast league, cracked in Rangers' goal, Lester Patrick produced $10,000 that moved Dave into the spot he now occupies. Since then he has been consistently brilliant and for the past three seasons has been runner-up for the trophy he hopes to win at last this March. Exceptionally fast with both hands and feet, he provides one of the best shows in the league while handling his assignment. Favors a hot cup of tea just before game time, a mellow pipe when it's all over.

WM. WHITEHEAD IS ASPHYXIATED

Is Overcome by Coal Gas in Trent Road Residence and Succumbs in Belleville General Hospital

William Whitehead, 32, employed as caretaker at the home of Mr. Morse Robb, Trent Road, died in the Belleville General Hospital early Friday evening as the result of asphyxiation from coal gas. Mr. Whitehead was found in the basement of the Robb home by Mr. Robb early Friday afternoon and was immediately rushed to the hospital where futile efforts were made to revive him.

Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, after hearing evidence in the matter, declared no inquest would be necessary as the matter was apparently accidental. Provincial Constable W. E. Smith investigated the matter and found the chimney had become blocked, causing the coal gas fumes to back into the basement where Mr. Whitehead was working. Both Mr. and Mrs. Robb also suffered from the result of the gas fumes and were attended by the family physician.

The late William Whitehead, who was in his 33rd year, was born in Preston, England and came to Belleville to reside eighteen years ago. For some time he was employed by Patterson Construction Company and later the Robb Wave Organ Company. He attended the United Church and was well respected. Fraternally he was a member of Moira Court No. 33 of the Independent Order of Foresters.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Ethel E. Sager and his mother and three brothers who reside in England.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Paul Muni and Jane Bryan in the superb final love scene of "We Are Not Alone," the Warner Bros. film based on James Hilton's novel, the next attraction at the Capitol Theatre.

Russian Troops Pretty Ignorant

Stockholm, Jan. 27. (AP)—The Finnish radio broadcast an "Information Please" program with forty Russian prisoners from the destroyed 44th Soviet Division sitting in as the "experts".

Cigars were passed to those who answered their questions correctly, but only eleven of the forty did any smoking.

All were stumped by these questions:

Who was Rasputin?

What are the Olympic Games?

Who were Jesus? Napoleon? Nurmi?

One said the Scandinavian countries were Sweden, Finland and Turkey. Another thought Stalin was President of Russia. He'd never heard of the Soviet President, Michael Kalinin.

Still another missed a cigar by a mile when he said Berlin was the capital of France.

AT THE CAPITOL

"WE ARE NOT ALONE"

It seems that Paul Muni has stolen a character from James Hilton. Or to put it in another way, has calmly absorbed it, usurped its place, stepped into its boots, picked up its pipe and dropped into its favorite arm chair.

The author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and other successful films and novels is not complaining, however. He mentions it merely as a phenomenon worth noting in passing. In his considerable experience, it has not happened to him before.

Paul Muni

Muni is portraying Hilton's brain child, his favorite in fact, in Warner Bros. film "We Are Not Alone", the next attraction at the Capitol. As Muni is playing "Dr. David Newcome," the character is a great deal like that Hilton visualized in writing the novel. So much so, in fact, that now the author thinks of his character as Muni! Gone is the original vision of him in Hilton's mind. The minute differences in outward appearance between character and actor they were brushed aside by the latter's powerful and keenly understanding interpretation of the simple-souled English doctor, according to Hilton.

"I think of him as Muni is playing him, and wonder if unconsciously I had Muni in mind when I was first sketching the doctor," Hilton remarks. "Certainly I didn't consciously do so. The doctor was like the English town in which he lived, a composite. But I have a suspicion that once Mr. Muni takes a character, he makes that character h's own, and there isn't much that an author can do about it. Even should he want to do something about it, which I consider most unlikely."

AT THE McCARTHY

"A Girl Must Live"

Leading candidate for the funniest picture of 1940 "A Girl Must Live" with three of the outstanding stars of "Lady Vanishes" in the leading top roles, Margaret Lockwood, Nauton Wayne and Mary Clare, opens next at the McCarthy Theatre, at the same time it starts a fifth week at the Eglinton Theatre, Toronto.

The following is what Roly Young says about "A Girl Must Live" A five star hit—never a dull moment—you'll probably want to see the movie twice because you laughed so hard the first time you missed half the fun.

Helen Allen, Toronto Evening Telegram. "A Girl Must Live" is the funniest thing England has exported, and funnier than anything out of Hollywood excepting "Ninotchka." Most people will want to see it at least twice.

Jack Karr, Toronto Star—"A Girl Must Live" "Should not be missed."

The coming engagement of this great comedy hit at the McCarthy Theatre is its first presentation outside of Toronto and the second theatre in North America to be privileged to bring it to the screen. An excellent select program of short subjects precedes the feature presentation at each complete performance.

"Last Showing"

"Blondie Brings Up Baby" featuring Baby Dumpling, Dagwood, Blondie and Daisy the pooch, in addition to "Western Caravans" with Belleville's favorite cowboy star, Charles Starrett, is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre for the last time and for entertainment to please the entire family it's a swell show from start to final fade-out.

AT THE BELLE

"BALALAIKA"

The long-heralded debut of Ilona Massey as Hollywood's newest and most alluring singing star becomes a reality with the opening of "Balalaika", in which the beautiful Hungarian is now appearing opposite Nelson Eddy at the Belle Theatre. A colorful romantic operetta, set in a background of Old Russia, was chosen as a fitting medium in which to present the new singing team. Based on the London musical stage success by Eric Maschwitz, it is the story of a romance between a Colonel of Cossacks and the daughter of a revolutionist leader whose very positions made them mortal enemies in those revolutionary times fraught with peril.

Nine Song Numbers

Musically "Balalaika", has been gauged to meet the approbation of everyone regardless of their musical tastes. The score of the picture, arranged by Herbert Stothart, ranges from light comedy songs to an operatic interpretation of Rimsky-Korsakoff's dance suite. "Scheherezade." There are nine numbers sung by Nelson Eddy and Miss Massey individually and as duets. One of the most dramatic of these is a renactment of an incident in the World War when Russian and Austrian soldiers faced each other across No Man's Land on Christmas Eve and sang "Holy Night." Eddy's rendition of the hymn with a male chorus of one hundred voices is said to be one of the most effective things he has done on the screen.

Russian Folk Tunes

Stothart has drawn upon several Russian folk melodies for numbers as well as songs written by Franz Lehar, George Posford and Gus Kahn.

Eddy and Miss Massey are given the benefit of an excellent supporting cast in this spectacular musical. Among the featured players are Charlie Ruggles, Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwill, C. Aubrey Smith, Joyce Compton, Walter Woolf King, Dalies Frantz, and from the operatic world, Sigurd Nilssen, Irra Petina, Douglass Beattie and David Laughlin.

The latest overseas and Canadian News as illustrated in the Paramount British Newsreel, and "Peace On Earth", considered January's best color cartoon will be exhibited on the same program.

Fan Mail

By THAYER WALDO

Sylvia had heard of it before, but this was her first indulgence. She set about the thing quite blithely and quite without misgiving. For a young actress who wished to get ahead without paying the usual fee, writing fan letters to oneself was a good old Hollywood custom.

She dashed off a couple of short ones—changing ink, paper and handwriting for each, of course—and then let herself really go on the last. Fervor she gave it and imaginative scope. Indeed, when the four pages were done and she read them aloud, Sylvia was genuinely moved. This, she admitted without false modesty, had a real thump to it.

The problem of a name, though, stumped her a brief while. Obviously, just any old moniker wouldn't do here. After a few moments' fruitless cogitation she reached for the telephone directory, flipped it open at random and found herself among the Ws. Sylvia began to scan the list.

Three from the bottom on the second page she found it; Werrenrath, Franz E. The syllables intrigued her; conjured a picture of blond, broad-shouldered six feet. She gave her pen its boldest stroke and signed Franz Werrenrath to the missive which told of impassioned admiration and implored a meeting.

The maid stamped that letter and put it in the post box with others at twenty past eight next morning. Sylvia reached the studio a little after ten. At exactly one-thirty two men wearing black hats and grim faces came up to where she was waiting for camera call on the "Tantalizing Tillie" set.

"Miss Sylvia Lynne, ain't'tcha?" growled the one with his hat over his left eye. She affirmed it and he said: "We're from headquarters an' we got some things to astcha.. Come on in Fiberg's office."

The producer, looking weighty, was pacing his inner sanctum.

"Hello, leetle lady," he greeted; "now dun't vorry. Dese boys is jost needink your help. Tell her, boys."

"Well, you got a mash note today," said the one whose derby rode his neck, "from a guy we been wantin' to get the goods on for three years. But he's slippery, see? —slickest forger west of Chi, an' he never leaves a trail. We ain't even got his pitcher."

"What," queried Sylvia, in a smaller voice than she'd intended: "what is his name?"

"Franz Eric Werrenrath—an' he don't bother with no aliases. But listen: he says in this letter he's dyin' to meetcha. All right; so you invite him out an' talk like you knew all about his game. We'll be listenin' but outa sight, an' prob'ly he'll spill somethin' hot. Get the idea?"

Sylvia did and it rattled her rather badly. "I won't do it!" he cried. "It's—it's unfair!"

"He's a menace t' society," said Stetson-on-the-eye. "It's civic dooty t' help catch him."

Fiberg and the other officer seconded it. Arguments hummed about Sylvia like a swarm of hornets. Before she could collect herself, a telephone was thrust in her hand with the urge: "There's his number, go ahead."

Hesitatingly she put receiver to ear and spoke a weak hello. The man on the other end spoke with a servant's measured accents. Relieved, Cylvia gave the invitation:" ....and ask Mr. Werrenrath if he will do me the honor of calling at eight o'clock this evening."

It was acknowledged and she hung up. The policeman nodded and sauntered toward the door.

"Okay," said the derby-balancer; "we'll be at your place by ha' past seven. So long."....

They walked in at twenty-six after. With them was a dark and intense looking young man who gave the impression of never having smiled. He crossed to Sylvia where she stood by the fireplace and presented a card. She read some words and saw some seals and signatures which told that here was one Roger Dale, private detective.

"He's been tailin' Warrenrath for a client," explained one of the headquarters men. "Had the phone wires tapped an' heard your call today. Thought he'd like to come along. Where can we all hide?"

She disposed of them in closets, then spent an hour and a half that was first expectant, next dull and finally acutely boring. At last the officers flung out into the room again disgustedly.

"Aw, he ain't gonna show up," said one. "Either he smelled a trap or else he didn't care as much about comin' here as—"; he broke off glancing half-guiltily at Sylvia and added: "Anyhow, we might as well scram."

The girl turned her back on them and stood gazing into the flames. Disappointment over the outcome of this was deeper than she cared to admit. There came a numbled series of good nights; she didn't bother to respond or look around. The door clicked shut. Silence. Then a step behind her and Sylvia, startled, spun around. The dark young man was there looking at her fixedly and tearing some papers into scraps. She glanced down, saw what they were and exclaimed:

"Your credentials! Why—why are you doing that?"

His smile was surprising and pleasantly bland.

"Because," he replied, "I probably shan't need them again, and if I do, it'll be better to make out new ones. A man has to keep in practice, you know."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Jan. 27—(CP)—The Toronto Stock Market wound up the week in dull trading and barely firm prices. Wirebound Box advanced a point to a new high for a year or more and in the Gold group Powell Rouyn registered a further recovery to close around 1.28, up 5 cents net. A top morning price of 1.31 was posted. Only about 150,000 shares changed hands in the two-hour session.

Foods, Steels and Utility issues were mainly firm. Fleet Aircraft displayed further weakness, dropping back 1-4 to 8 3-4. Cub held steady at 3 3-8.

Several medium-priced Golds moved up with Powell Rouyn. Teck Hughes advanced 10 cents to 4.10 and gains of about 5 cents were boarded by Pickle Crow, Wright-Hargreaves and Aunor. Most Penny Golds, including Broulan, Malartic Gold Fields, Central Porcupine and Sullivan, held firm.

Base metal shares again presented a drab display, moving in decidedly light volume. Smelters was slightly higher and Waite-Amulet and Mandy lower. Eldorado held around $1.

WALL STREET

New York, Jan. 27 (AP) —Aside from quiet strength in aircrafts and specialties, price variations were meaningless on the stock exchange today. Transfers approximated 300,000 shares for the two-hour session.

Bonds and commodities were sluggish and slightly uneven.

Among stocks, Commonwealth and Southern and United Corp. turned over in blocks of 10,000 and 12,600 shares at 1⅛ and 2¼ respectively. Continental Motors started with a trade of 10,000 shares at 4⅛, up ⅛.

Dow Chemical, Loft and Trans-Continental and Western Air touched new 1939-40 highs. Supported also were Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Lockheed, Bendix, Sherry, Bethlehem Steel, and N.Y. Central.

McIntyre and Distillers Seagram gained fractions on the Canadian list and International Nickel dipped slightly as Canada 4s, in the bond market, held unchanged.

Clauses in New Bacon Agreement

There are certain phases of the new bacon agreements with the British Ministry of Food that have not been presented to the public. This was due to the fact that the details of the agreements required much time to make them workable.

The contract price is $20.18 per one hundred and twelve pounds, the equivalent of $18.01 per one hundred pounds F.O.B. port of export for grade A Wiltshire and relative prices for grade B and the various cuts as provided for in the schedule of prices included in the agreement.

The first duty of the board was to draw up a schedule of prices and advise the packers that commencing on January 20 the following prices would be paid for bacon delivered at seaboard:

		Light under 55 lbs.	Sizeable 55-65 lbs.	Heavy 65 lbs. up
A1	..	$17.50	$17.70	$17.30
A2	..	17.10	17.30	16.90
A3	..	16.70	16.90	16.50
B1	..	17.10	17.30	16.90
B2	..	16.30	16.50	16.10
B3	..	15.50	15.70	15.30

It is the desire of the bacon board to maintain the quality of Canadian bacon so the price schedule drawn is in strict accordance with the pre-war trade. It was estimated that the schedule of graded prices as established would work out at an average price of $17.29 with each lot however paid for at a price as shown in the schedule in accodance with weight, grade and selection. This estimated price leaves a margin of 72 cents per hundred pounds. This margin will enable the board to accumulate a fund from which to advance the price of hogs later in the season and to pay storage charges on bacon supplies held to augment the short hog runs in midsummer.

Egg Quotations Somewhat Easier

Toronto, Jan. 27—Quiet trading was general in all produce lines on the Toronto open market yesterday, with nominal prices quoted for butter. Another downward revision occurred in egg quotations.

Helping to depress the egg market here were shipments from Western Ontario dealers, who hoped to obtain better prices on this market than by offering on a weaker Montreal market, to which point their eggs are usually shipped. With dealings slow and inspected shipments to Northern points light, dealers reduced prices in order to move the heavier supplies. Buyers, however, displayed a little more interest in proceedings yesterday afternoon. The graded section closed at 21c for grade A-large, 19c for medium and 18c for pullets, while grade A-large, in the retail division, fell to 25c, mediums to 23c, and pullets and B's dropped to 22c per dozen.

Absence of demand was responsible for an easier trend on the butter market. Offerings continued light, but sales were lacking. Ontario solids were quoted in the nominal range of 27 1-4 to 27 1-2 for No. 1 grades.

Montreal Produce

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 23c; A-medium, 21c; A-pullets, 20c; B-large and C unquoted. Receipts, 572 boxes.

ditional action against the Tokyo government, such as the embargoes proposed by Senators Key Pittman of Nevada and Lewis B. Schwellenbach of Washington against shipment to Japan of raw materials useful in the conduct of hostilities against the Chinese.

United States officials are inclined, however, to 'sit tight" for the time being and let Japan make the first move.

Will Never Yield to Threats

Tokyo, Jan. 27 —(AP)—Determination that Japan "never will yield to threats" from abroad appeared today as the first reaction to termination by the United States of the 1911 treaty governing trade between the two countries.

This semi-official expression was embodied in a resolution by the Social Mass Party, one of Japan's lesser political groups.

On this first day of the non-treaty status, the stock market and other economic barometers remained normal, while the press and public appeared more concerned over the shipping controversy with Great Britain.

The Social Mass resolution said in part:—

"Japanese, understanding the true objective of the China incident, are determined to overcome all difficulties and never will yield to threats of interference by third powers.

"If the American government fails rightly to understand this determination and continues to threaten Japan, relations between the two countries necessarily will be aggravated."

It was indicated in high quarters that Japan would make no particular efforts for a new agreement immediately, but would try to prevent incidents in China involving Americans.

(Nevertheless, in Tientsin, China, Japanese military authorities officially informed the public that effective Sunday the barbed wire barricades surrounding the foreign concessions would be electrically charged again, as they previously had been since the start of the blockade of the concessions last June.

(In Shanghai, Japanese army officers took the position that after 2 1-2 years of fighting, Japan was too deeply concerned in China to yield territorial or economic gains to placate the United States.)

DANGEROUS

The authorities say the prisoners fall into five general classes. The first is that of German nationals resident in Canada and known to be members of the Nazi party. The German National Socialist party in Canada is a part of the Auslands organization of the party in Germany and its members subscribe to the same undertakings. It is a compact and rigidly disciplined body.

True Followers of Fuehrer

The second class consists of male members of the Deutsche Arbeits front a closely knit affiliate of the National Socialist party. Its members describe themselves as "true followers of the Fuehrer" in their applications for membership. Most members are relatively recent immigrants to Canada and nearly all of military age and so liable for service in the German army.

In the third group the party or the Arbeits front but who, from their political and social associations, business and industrial connections and other opportunities for espionage are believed to be dangerous in time of war.

The fourth class consists of a number of naturalized Canadian citizens of German origin or birth who have so identified themselves with Nazi activities that they cannot be regarded as loyal citizens. They are all influential in their own communities and have been under investigation for some time.

It is felt that by arresting these leaders of the Deutscher Bund (Canadian Society for German Culture) who have been seeking to undermine the loyalties of Canadians of German origin the position of the loyal majority of German Canadians can be safeguarded.

In the fifth class are enemy aliens resident in Canada who either refused to give an undertaking to abstain from acts of hostility or who, in the opinion of local registrars of enemy aliens in different parts of the country, cannot safely be allowed freedom.

Sabotage Lessened By Detention.

Information from police files indicates a number of the prisoners planned to sabotage Canadian industrial plants. The fact that there has been no serious sabotage so far may be due to their detention.

Shades of political opinion among the prisoners are known to exist but play no part in the administration of the internment camp. The officers and men engaged in guarding the camp never discuss politics with the prisoners, discuss nothing with them except their own immediate affairs.

Trades and professions represented among the prisoners are many. There is a diver who busies himself in the camp as a saw setter. A ladies' hair dresser can find nothing in the strictly masculine prison to recall or replace his former occupation but three barbers keep themselves busy cutting hair for their fellow prisoners and their guards.

Different Categories.

Others in confinement include eight carpenters, twelve designers and painters, three manufacturers' agents, three electricians, a sales executive, a mechanical engineer, five tool makers, a commercial traveller, three butchers, four bakers, one economic research expert, a druggist, two farmers, a university student, a teacher of languages, the managing director of a sizeable corporation, a sculptor, a millwright, a commercial artist, a brewery supervisor, a musician, an advertising manager, a cabinet maker, a chemical engineer, a textile chemist, several night watchmen.

In age the prisoners range from 19 to 59. Some of the older men are undergoing their second confinement as prisoners of war. They were prisoners in the first great war in England, France or Russia.

ONTARIO MAY ACT

"I may have a statement to make on Monday," he said.

An expectant legislature waited yesterday for the premier to say something about his arch-foe, Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Ears were cocked every time the premier rose to his feet. But never a word of what everybody wanted to hear escaped him.

Careful Study Urged

The Premier urged careful study of the new succession duty legislation when Attorney-General Gordon Conant introduced it. Mr. Conant presented the new measure yesterday in the form of a 15-page bill amending the Succession Duty Act—an act which was also revised at a special session called for that specific purpose last September.

Main purpose of the bill before the House is to make applicable to any estate the law in force at the time of testator's death in determining the amount of succession duty, interest and penalties due the province.

Another amendment proposed is that gifts to the immediate members of testator's family must have been made more than 20 years before death if they are not to be included in the total of the estate for taxation. The present statue provides a 10-year period.

Second reading was given to a bill of Dr. A. S. Duncan, (Lib. London) to make it an offence to leave the ignition key in an unattended, unlocked motor vehicle on any street in an urban municipality. Dr. Duncan said the bill would remove temptation from the path of many youths. Penalties of $1 to $10 are provided.

Quacks May Be Exempt

Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon looked with favor on the bill and it was passed on to Municipal Bills Committee. There it is likely to be amended to exempt delivery trucks from its provisions, it being argued that it would be impractical to require a delivery truck to be locked every time the driver left it.

Also scheduled for debate in committee is an amendment to the Highway Traffic Act to permit motor buses with a maximum overall length of 35 feet to use Ontario highways. Present permitted maximum is 29 feet. Notes to the bill said the change would legalize operation of the most modern type of buses.

Leopold Macaulay, (Con. York South) said any change should be toward shortening the permitted length.

WIRE-HAIRED TERRIER TO DIE MONDAY UNLESS AN OWNER IS FOUND

A wire-haired terrier, with collar around its neck is now awaiting an owner at the City Pound. Discovered running at large on Howard Street last night the little fellow was picked up by City Poundkeeper Thomas Thorne, who announced today that the dog will have until Monday to be claimed, or meet the fate of such unclaimed animals.

DOUBTS ABILITY

Mr. Churchill said Prime Minister Chamberlain led the country into the war "like one great body into a struggle against aggression and oppression, against wrongdoing, faithlessness and cruelty, from which there could be no turning back."

The war was not decided or undertaken by a government, a class or a party.

"It is impossible to foresee how the war will develop but the government is persuaded that in the end right will win, that freedom will not be crumpled down, that truer progress will appear and that a broader justice will reign."

The British people must bear in mind, he said, "that we shall have to pay a relentless toll for mastery of the seas."

There was no doubt that mines present a grave menace, and that the victory over them would be dearly won. But Great Britain had resources in scientific material superior to those of the enemy, and in the end the mine danger would disappear.

Probably Saving Up

Remarking that many people are astonished that Britain has not yet been attacked by enemy aviation, Mr. Churchill said that he had asked himself this question. "I also wonder," he said, "whether the enemy are saving up for some orgy of frightfulness which will soon come upon us, or whether it is because so far they have not dared. Is it because they dread the superior quality of our fighting aircraft?" In any event he was convinced that the enemy was not refraining for humanitarian reasons.

"Ought we," he asked, "instead of demonstrating the power of our air force by dropping leaflets all over Germany, to have dropped bombs? There I am quite clear that our policy has been right."

Time gained by the Allies was used for important preparations which brought "enormous" progress in means of protecting the civilian population and in means of counter-attack.

Compares Strength

On the question of comparative strength of Germany today and 25 years ago, Mr. Churchill said:—

"The haggard, hard-driven party regime which the Nazis have raised and reared from defeat and hatred may function for a while with terrible precision, but whether it has the same solidity or power to endure reverses' which was shown by the Kaiser's Germany has yet to be proved. We must put it to the proof."

Mr. Churchill expressed a deep conviction that the British Empire and the French Republic, once they have completed the process of getting into action; will show themselves much stronger physically and morally than the Germany of Hitler.

"Come, then," he concluded, "Let us do our task in the battle and the toil, each to our part, each to our station Fill the armies, rule the air, put out the munitions, strangle the U-boats, sweep the mines, plough the land, build ships, guard streets, succor the wounded, uplift the downcast and honor the brave —let us go forward together in all parts of the Empire and in all parts of the island. There is not a week nor a day nor an hour to be lost."

Mr. Churchill made a typically aggressive speech in the packed Free Trade Hall where two years ago he proposed that the League of Nations be made all powerful so as to control any aggression.

Victory Predicted

The First Lord of the Admiralty predicted victory for the Allies and a peace of "truer progress" and "broader justice." Half of Germany's U-boats had been destroyed and new building had "fallen far short of what we originally estimated."

The menace of mines was being controlled and German imports decisively curtailed and exports virtually cut off. On the other hand Britain's exports and imports were increasing steadily.

There have been losses, Churchill said, and losses will continue, since so many war vessels are scattered over the seas, protecting British shipping.

Must Pay Unrelenting Toll

"We shall have to pay an unrelenting toll for the maintenance of the mastery of the sea. Very many homes in our dockyard cities have been darkened by tragedy, but I am sure the sympathies of our people go out to our loyal seamen as thy toil by day and by night upon the dangerous stormy waters, doing their duty with unrivalled skill and courage so that we may eat our daily bread."

Mr. Churchill, speaking on the "progress of the war," said that when the war started in September everybody expected air bombings immediately.

"There never was such a war that seemed so likely to carry its terrors into every home," he said, "and there never was a war when the people were so united."

No Turning Back

The government, he went on, has not failed to rise to the fight against "aggression, oppression and wrongdoing" from which there can be no turning back.

"We cannot tell into what regions the struggle will carry or how long it will last . . . but we can be sure that in the end righteousness and freedom will win and justice will reign. We are sure of this and we are determined to play our part . . . faithfully and to the end."

The war in the west so far had fallen almost entirely upon the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force.

"The naval war opened at full pitch from the first moment and the most intense efforts were made by the enemy to destroy the commerce by which we live and to starve us into submission. No considerations of humanity, no respect for the conventions of war, even those to which Germany recently has proclaimed her adherence . . . none of these have deterred Herr Hitler and his accomplices from wreaking their malice upon us to the full extent of their power."

Humble Fishermen Attacked

"Even humble fishing boats have been attacked with incendiary bomb and their crews left to drown or subjected to the fire of machine guns. Our navy had to cope with all these various forms of attack.

"I have been taught by hard experience and I am always careful not to give way to jubilation or optimism . . . but I think you will agree that up to date the navy has not failed the nation.

"Out of nearly 7500 ships convoyed to and from this island only 15 have been lost. Our convoy system is becoming more refined and rapid as the weeks go by, and our imports are steadily rising again, and the ships we have captured and the ships we have built have almost made good the losses we have suffered."

No Fear of Starvation

Churchill turned next to the system of rationing. There was no fear of starvation but "we wish to save every ton of import in order to increase our output of munitions and to extend and increase our export trade so that we can get credit to buy more munitions and war supplies.

"It is no time for ease and comfort. It is a time to dare and endure. That is why we are rationing ourselves even while our resources are increasing. That is why we intend to regulate every ton carried across the seas and to make sure that it is carried only for the purposes of victory."

Far Ahead of Last War

Mr. Churchill said he felt "I was right as I said in one of my earlier broadcasts that if we reached the spring without any serious offensive on sea or land I think we shall have gained the opening campaign of the war."

"I am thankful that this country has got into its war stride. It will be said that the other side too has expanded its army and increased and improved its air force, but we must remember that Germany has been going for three years at full wartime strength and it may be possible she has no reserves of manpower and supplies so that she could make an additional spurt."

Britain had not yet taken up its slack. There were many unemployed in the country.

"Yet I think these extra months of preparation have been a Godsend to us and if we do not relax Herr Hitler has lost his last chance."

The government, he continued, can not yet place in the field the vast army it has formed and is still forming, and munition factories must yet be brought to full production. "But we are far ahead of where we were at this time in the other war."

All Resources Brought Into Play

All British and French resources, he said, would be brought to bear "upon that evil thing whose wickedness has so shocked the world."

He referred to the German conquest of Czechoslovakia, the shooting of Czech students, the closing of the Czech universities and the destruction of the works of their national writers, as well as the suppression of newspapers and the opening of new concentration camps.

"But I can assure you that everything that has happened to the Czechs cannot compare with the atrocities worked upon the poor Poles," he said, adding that individuals, picked at random, were shot in every town.

"It is estimated that upwards of 15,000 intellectuals have been shot. In one place 300 are lined up against a wall. In another place a group of drunken German officers shot 70. In still another place boys between 12 and 13 were butchered," Mr. Churchill said.

Can Judge Our Own Fate

From Germany's "shameful records we can judge what our own fate would be, should we fall into her clutches."

"Without expansion of labor," Mr. Churchill said, "and without allowing the women of Great Britain to enter the struggle, we should fail utterly to bear our share of the burden which France and Great Britain jointly assumed.

Mr. Churchill expressed his admiration for the way British taxpayers had accepted "a burden so fierce and heavy that it has altered decisively the way of living of all income taxpayers of the country." In the financial field "the Chancellor of the Exchequer is building up a veritable Maginot line of financial strength and confidence."

Vancouver, Jan. 27—(CP Trans-Canada Airlines' east-bound passenger trip was cancelled here last night by adverse weather conditions, officials reported.

The plane took off on schedule but returned to the airport half an hour later because of squalls and rain.

AN ERROR IN FIGURING

Colorado Springs, Colo., Jan. 27 —(AP)— Richard McKnight, Colorado College student, showed a police judge a sheaf of equation-covered papers to prove he wasn't speeding. The figuring, a five-hour job, was all right except that traffic officer, Albert Peterson, testified McKnight made a four-block error in computing distance of the chase. The answer—$12.50 fine.

BRITISH PAPERS

"If an election reveals its shortcomings at this point or that, so much the better, but the general result can hardly be other than to strengthen its hand."

Said the Times:

"In the forthcoming general election the issue will simply be which party can be trusted to show the greater energy and greater efficiency in the conduct of the war. It will be a competition of those qualities, not in any sense a conflict about the essential righteousness of the war itself."

The allies "can expect to see added resolution whatever the result of the election" in Canada, the Daily Express said.

"Canadian politics appear confused but one thing is certain. As magnificent as Canada's war effort has been until now, we can expect to see added resolution whatever the result of the election.

"We in the British Commonwealth who have seen Canada's soldiers, do not doubt the calibre of her statesmen."

The result of the elections "will certainly be an impressive demonstration of Canada's loyalty to the British commonwealth and to the cause she is helping us to defend in the war," the Yorkshire Post predicted.

Yacht Club Rink Popular Rendezvous For Outdoor Skaters

With upwards of six hundred skating enthusiasts, the majority of whom were children, establishing an attendance record last night, the free skating rink on the harbor near the property of the Belleville Yacht Club, and sponsored by that organization, is rapidly gaining a high peak of popularity.

Officials of the club have generously given of their time and labor to provide this free diversion and every afternoon and evening see large crowds of children and grown ups avail themselves of the opportunity to indulge in open-air skating. Warm, well-appointed rooms are available in which the skaters can get ready for their fun. At night bright lights gleam down on an ice surface that measures 300 x 100 feet, an ideal area for this phase of winter athletics.

No charge is made for any of the services. Maurice Callaghan, chairman of the committee in charge, said today that the rink was originally provided for children unable to skate in other places. However so popular has the rink become that the "bars" were let down and adults permitted to use the ice. "But," he added, "there are certain restrictions. Adults cannot use the rink for hockey or any other purpose than pleasure skating. The interests of the children come first."

Every afternoon and evening, weather permitting, the rink is the mecca for numbers of children and adults from all parts of the city.

'A Girl Must Live' Picture Enjoying 5th Week Run in Toronto

Heralded as one of the outstanding British motion picture productions of the year, "A Girl Must Live," a brilliant saucy comedy, that comes to the McCarthy Theatre next week, is now enjoying the fifth week of its run at the Eglinton Theatre, Toronto.

Featured in the cast are Margaret Lockwood, Naunton Wayne and Mary Clare, three stars of "The Lady Vanishes." Also appearing in the production and who will be remembered by war veterans of the district is that grand old star of "The Byng Boys are Here," George Robie.

RUSSIANS SUFFER

The Finns said the Russian troops at Aittojoki were the remnants of forces scattered in battles at Algajaervi and Tolvajaervi. Another Soviet division was reported battering vainly at the Finnish lines at Kollaanjoki in attempts to relieve comrades in two other divisions caught too far from their base in the region of Kitela, on the north shore of Lake Ladoga.

Reports Lacking

The Finns said lack of reports of fighting at Kitela might mean these stranded units already were beyond help.

The Finnish command reported the Soviet dead were "counted in the hundreds" after a week-long Russian assault on Finnish fortifications on the eastern shores of Lake Ladoga. The Finns said their fronts were "everywhere retained".

CAMOUFLAGE FOOLS CALF

Taloga, Okla., Jan. 27—(AP)—Gerald Livingston's Hereford calf was prejudiced against a red-faced cow supplied as a foster mother. The calf would nurse from a white-faced cow, but whiteface was busy with her own calf. Gerald tied a white towl around the red-faced cow's head and the calf dropped all protests.

BULLET STRIKES BOY IN FOREHEAD CAUSING DEATH

Brother is Cleaning Rifle When Bullet is Accidentally Discharged

Stratford, Ont., Jan. 27 (CP).—Struck between the eyes by a bullet accidentally fired from a .22-calibre high velocity automatic rifle in the hands of his brother, 14-year-old Andrew Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson of St. Mary's, R.R. 7, was fatally injured last night. He died in Stratford General Hospital, two hours after the shooting.

Andrew and his 17-year-old brother, Roy, were cleaning rifles and guns in their home. After the .22-calibre rifle had been oiled and cleaned the older brother shoved the magazine part way into place, he told Provincial Officer John M. Douglas of Stratford.

Officer Douglas quoted the youth as saying that he thought the magazine was not in place and that the rifle would not fire. He pointed the rifle at his brother's head and pulled the trigger.

The bullet entered the boy's head between the eyes. He was about five feet from the rifle when it was fired.

Coroner Dr. J. G. Grieve said he had not decided whether an inquest would be necessary.

City of Flint Ends Wartime Adventure

Baltimore, Jan. 27 (AP)—Only the formalities of quarantine inspection stood today between the freighter City of Flint and the end of a wartime adventure on the high seas.

While her 40-man crew chartered short leave and the first pay day since October 3 when the ship sailed from New York for Europe with a miscellaneous cargo, the vessel faced an uncertain future.

Her owners said no further operations were planned immediately, but declined to comment on reports that she would be scrapped. She was built at Hog Island shortly after the United States entered the last war, and served as a supply ship throughout the conflict.

For the crew that aided in the rescue of 223 survivors of the sinking of the passenger liner Athenia and took them to Halifax, N.S., then a few weeks later faced the bristling guns of the German pocket battleship Deutschland, today was a big day. A half-dozen celebrations were arranged.

Six days after discharging the last of the Athenia survivors, the City of Flint was overhauled by the German pocket battleship Deutschland, manned by the prize crew and then, disguised as Danish, sailed to Tromsoe, Norway.

Murmansk, Russia, was the next stop. Six days later, she was steered down the Norwegian coast in what was presumed to be an effort to reach a German port. Instead, however, she was taken finally into Haugesund, Norway, where a Norwegian court held she had been improperly seized, and turned the command back to her captain, J. A. Gainard.

Fascist Hecklers Ejected From Hall

Manchester, England, Jan. 27 (CP)—A couple of hecklers broke into Winston Churchill's speech at Free Trade Hall today shouting "we want Mosley"—obviously referring to Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of a group of Fascists in England before the war. Little has been heard of the movement since the war started.

Mr. Churchill paused until silence was restored, turning to ask "what does he say?" at one point. Then he continued without comment.

One man shouting "we want Mosley and peace", was ejected from the hall.

SOLDIERS UNDER TWENTY-ONE MAY VOTE IN ELECTION

Precedent for This Action Established in 1917 Election During Last War

VOTE IN ENGLAND

Ottawa, Jan. 27—(CP)— Soldiers in the First and Second Divisions of the Canadian Active Service Force under the age of 21 may be permitted to vote at the coming general election, according to reports circulating here today. Precedent for this was established in the 1917 election during the last war.

Arrangements for the taking of soldiers' votes will be made by Order-in-Council under the War Measures Act. In effect it will involve an amendment of the General Election Law in order to meet the special circumstances of war.

As yet no figures have been compiled on the number of men under 21 in the army, although a record is kept of every man's age. The minimum age for enlistment is 18 but no men under 18 were sent overseas with the First Division.

Vote in England

The votes of men in the First Division will be taken at Aldershot Camp in England where they are training under the command of Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton. Second Division men will vote in Canada.

Nomination dates for the election will probably be fixed more in advance of voting day than usual in order to make it possible to get ballots printed and in the hands of those charged with recording the soldiers' votes.

The overseas vote will be taken in advance of the vote in Canada and the men will vote for the candidates in the constituencies in which they resided before enlistment, not for parties.

During the first Great War at the 1917 election every person enlisted in the armed forces regardless of age was given the right to vote. This applied even to persons who were not citizens of Canada or British subjects. Thus American citizens and citizens of Newfoundland, among others, had the vote.

No Party Limitations Says Hon. Dr. Manion

Ottawa, Jan. 27—(CP)—Conservative Leader Manion indicated today that he does not place party limitations on the "truly National Government" he plans to form if his party wins the Federal election.

"What I said was, that the very best brains obtainable among our people would be drafted to serve in the cabinet," he said in a press statement. "Naturally, it would be ridiculous for me to suggest that all the best brains in Canada belong to one party, and I certainly did not mean to place party limitations on what I called 'a truly National Government.'"

Special Steeplechase For Red Cross Won by Jack Chaucer

Leopardstown, Eire, Jan. 27—(CP—Cable)—H. L. Egan's Jack Chaucer today won the special steeplechase run for the benefit of the Red Cross in countries where Irish Hospital Sweepstake tickets were sold.

Jack Chaucer, a brown gelding by Jackdaw of Reheims out of Miss Chaucer, won the four miles and 250-yards event by two lengths over Sir Alexander Maguire's Sterling Duke.

Miss B. Kearns Knockadroleen was third, eight lengths behind Sterling Duke. The event was an open handicap for five-year-olds and up. Twenty-two horses started.

The winner paid four to one, Sterling Duke 12 to 1 and Knockadroleen 20 to 1.

The War This Week

By H. M. PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The 21st week of the war opened with a fighting speech by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who urged neutrals to join the Allies against Germany and closed with a dramatic dissolution of the 18th Canadian parliament.

At sea Britain lost two destroyers, H.M.S. Grenville and H.M.S. Exmouth, both with heavy loss of life. Several small freighters, the majority of them neutral, were sunk by mine or torpedo. A German statement that her submarine production had attained a tempo of one completed each day was doubted in Allied capitals.

Western Front Inactive

The Western Front remained inactive. The Finns continued to beat back Russian attacks in Karelia and northwest of Lake Ladoga but punishing Russian air raids on Finnish communications and manufacturing points were maintained. The growing Finnish air force struck back with raids on Russian bases, including Kronstadt.

Reports that German troops are policing the Galician-Rumanian frontier, taking over control of territory awarded to Soviet Russia in the fourth partition of Poland, alarmed Rumania. The reports came at a time when German envoys were emphasizing in Bucharest that the Reich must have increased quantities of Rumanian oil, and the Allies were insisting that British and French owned companies must not be forced to ship oil to Germany.

The King spent Wednesday with his Canadian soldiers at Aldershot, formally reviewing the Royal Canadian artillery, the Royal Canadian Engineers and the Royal 22nd regiment, and passing through the various other units of the First Division.

Keen Interest Aroused

Word that Prime Mackenzie King had decided to submit his government's war record to the people in March flashed all over the world from Ottawa. Keen interest was aroused everywhere.

On Friday came word that the first batch of Canadian volunteers for the Finnish forces is in training in northern Finland.

Glancing back 25 years: A British patrol squadron frustrated German raid off the east coast in the week of Jan. 21 27, 1915, sinking the cruiser Bluecher. More than 500 German seamen were lost. Two enemy battle cruisers and the British cruiser Lion were damaged. On land, the Allies held the attacking Germans on all sections of the Western Front.

FRONT LIN E FASHIONS

A heavy coat of reindeer fur keeps this Finnish sentry warm as he stands guard outside the sleeping quarters of his fellow fighters in the Salla sector. Protection against the elements has given the Finns a decided edge in morale.

PUTTING THE "OUCH" IN HOCKEY

When the two New York hockey teams get together in a garden match a scene such as this one is not beyond the realm of possibility sometime during the evening. In this case it all started when Lorne Carr of the Americans, RIGHT, exchanged blows with Babe Pratt, of the Rangers. Pratt is the gentleman on the left fringe of this mob scene who seems to be getting a blow from a hockey stick across his ear, jus as the camera clicked. Although the fight was a draw, the Rangers won the game 5-3.

Income of Death Valley Scotty Derived by Borrowing From Partner

Los Angeles, Jan. 27—(AP)—In-

Los Anglese, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Investigation by Income Tax authorities as to taxability, source and amount of Death Valley Scotty's income, discloses a relationship between Scotty and his banker, as Scotty calls his partner, that is unique and unparalleled in business and mining traditions.

The mystery desert rat signed the following statement for government records:

"U.S. Collector of Internal Revenue,

"California Income Tax Supervisor,

"And to all others whom it may concern:

"About 30 years ago I found gold ore and buried some in caches or deposits in the mountains. The gold ore is very rich.

"To the best of my recollection, I have had no income for about 30 years except money borrowed from my partner, A. M. Johnson, who has furnished me with all the supplies and mules that I have used in the mountains.

"I have not converted the caches or deposits in the mountains into cash. There are many hazards in the mountains. Trails and landmarks are buried by cloudbursts.

"I have not lost any of my caches or deposits. I've had many accidents. The rugged mountains are never safe, at best, unless you are ready to fight your way through.

"Death Valley Scotty,
"Walter Scott."

This official breaking of a silence of over 30 years, by the man whose name has, since the beginning of this century, become legendary for adventure and romance and hidden wealth, not only fails to solve but intensifies the mystery that has always surrounded Scotty.

Old desert rats in times past have told strange tales of meeting Scotty on lonesome trails with pack mules loaded with high grade ore of such richness that it was almost pure gold.

Rumors arise from time to time that some day not too far away, Scotty is going to lift his caches and open up and mine his prospects from which they came.

Johnson says:

"If, and when, he does, a new chapter in the wild gold rushes and bonanza fortunes of the west will be written in the desert mountains by one of the greatest stampedes this country has ever seen."

GERMAN PLANE ATTACKS FRENCH COLUMN OF TRUCKS

Paris, Jan. 27 (AP)—A German plane attacked a column of French trlucks with machine-gun fire today for the first time in the war, military reports said, adding that no damage was done. Three Royal Air Force planes attempted to engage the raider, which banked into the clouds and escaped.

Intermittent fire was reported west of the Moselle River, east of the Vosges Mountains, and along the Rhine.

These articles were all made from remnants.

WAR BRIEFS

London, Jan. 27 (CP)—Authorised sources today denied a German assertion that two British steamships in convoy were sunk Thursday.

They said the records showed no British ships were sunk that day, although an unidentified French craft was sunk off Porto, Portugal.

Helsingfors, Jan. 27 (C.P.-Havas)—The first class of Finnish territorials, men born in 1898, were called up for army service today by white placards throughout the country. Men of this class were ordered to appear at recruiting centres Feb. 1.

London, Jan. 27 —(CP—Cable)—The first conscripts called for service in Great Britain are now serving with the British Expeditionary Force in France, it was learned today.

The conscripts who have crossed the Channel are men of the Gloucester regiment who only a few months ago were active in civil occupations like mining and dairying. A few individual conscripts had gone to France previously to fill technical posts, but the new arrivals are the first of the regular units.

Berne, Switzerland, Jan. 27 —(AP)—A retired Swiss army colonel, A. Fonjallaz, and a man of undisclosed nationality were arrested by Swiss counter-espionage agents today on charges of spying for Germany. Since the rank of colonel is the highest a Swiss officer can attain in peacetime, the news caused a sensation in Switzerland.

Helsingfors, Jan. 27 (AP)—Finnish officials expressed the belief today that a recent letup in air raids indicated the Russians were experiencing difficulties in transporting bombs and gasoline to their Estonian naval bases. An official statement yesterday said such activity was "relatively weak" and limited to northern Finland, where about 140 bombs were dropped on eight communities. One person was killed and three wounded, the Finns reported.

London, Jan. 27 (CP)—The Admiralty announced today that the number lost in the sinking of the destroyer Exmouth was 188—15 officers and 173 men. The destroyer flotilla leader sank with all hands within 24 hours of the destroyer Grenville with 76 dead.

Announcement that the Exmouth had been sunk—either by a torpedo or mine—was made last Wednesday.

Stockholm, Jan. 27 (CP-Havas)—The Swedish government today decided to name a commission to Study ways and means of executing 300,000 persons from cities and districts believed most exposed to aerial bombardments.

London, Jan. 27 (CP)—Reuters News Agency reported from Helsingfors today that Finnish forces had captured 100 Soviet Russian tanks in fighting on the Lake Ladoga front.

Rome, Jan. 27 —(AP)— German sources indicated today Dr. Karl Clodius, German financial expert, was discussing with Italians the possibility of increasing German coal shipments to Italy.

Before the war, Italy was largely dependent on Germany and Great Britain for coal. Sea shipments from both countries, particularly Germany, were understood to have slumped because of the blockade and other difficulties. High freight rates and obtaining sufficent freight cars are problems in getting German coal overland.

London, Jan. 26—(CP)—The bacon ration is being doubled, from next Monday, because "bacon supplies are again coming in well from Denmark and in increasing quantities from Canada." The Daily Mail said today. The newspaper saw this as "proof of the navy's ability to keep the sea routes open."

Southerners Cheered By Promise of Slowly Moderating Weather

New Orleans, Jan. 27 (AP)—Shivering southerners were cheered today by promises of slowly moderating weather in a cotton country unaccustomed and unprepared for severe cold waves.

Hampered further by ice-glazed streets and highways, the sun-loving southern states struggled back toward normal temperatures with losses running into millions of dollars.

The rest of the country, whipped by frigid blasts from the Rockies to the Atlantic Coast, counted its two-week death toll at 366, including 105 this week, as attributable to the weather.

Sub-zero and freezing weather continued deep in the southland, keeping many thousands of school children at home.

Forecasts were slightly warmer weather tomorrow. Traffic was hazardous and many rural sections were isolated. Housewives left home only for necessities, slowing retail business to a walk. Construction was virtually suspended.

Florida citrus growers, fearing heavy damage, fired smudge pots. Texas, Florida and Gulf Coast farmers could not estimate the millions believed lost in their citrus and vegetable crops. Livestock suffered.

The Red Cross and regular relief agencies carried fuel and food to thousands of homes.

BITTER CAMPAIGN EXPECTED AS PARLIAMENT DISSOLVED

MACKENZIE KING R. J. MANION J. S. WOODSWORTH

History was made in Ottawa when the sixth session of the eighteenth parliament of Canada was dissolved four hours after its opening, and the political parties of the Dominion are preparing for what may be one of the bitterest election campaigns in the history of Canada. Although Premier King announced that he proposed to call an immediate election before the end of March, the immediate order of dissolution came as a distinct shock to the capital. Conservative Leader Manion and C.C.F. Leader Woodsworth bitterly assailed the premier for his decision of calling an immediate election. Dr. Manion charged Mr. King with engineering "a political trick that is just a disgraceful sneering at the traditions of Canada and the British Empire."

Production at Brockville Plant At a Standstill

Brockville, Ont., Jan. 27 (CP).—T. W. Brackinreid, president of the Phillips Electrical Works Limited, stated this morning that everything was "very quiet" at the plant where approximately 200 members of the Brockville Local No. 510, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America went on strike yesterday, seeking an amendment to their current agreement with the company calling for improved conditions, questions of seniority and increased wages.

Mr. Brackinreid stated that the plant operated throughout the first day of the strike with approximately 100 men and women at their work, in addition to the office staff. Production was at a standstill this morning as the company decided late Friday there was no use opening the plant for the customary half day Saturday operation.

Since the strike was decided upon by a majority vote of the union employees of the company at a meeting Thursday night there has been no meeting between the company heads and representatives of the union.

ACTED TOO HURRIEDLY

Dubois, Pa., Jan. 27 —(CP)—Police Chief Russell Love parked his car hurriedly to attend a meeting. On coming out, he discovered an automobile parked illegally. He was writing out a tag before he found it was his own car. He paid the $1 fine.

STUDENTS SAVED BY QUICK ANSWER

Griswold, Ia., Jan. 27.—(AP) — Five high school students took a self-declared holiday to hunt rabbits.

A game warden read of the affair and asked them:

"Where are your hunting licences?"

The boys didn't have licences, but they had a quick answer:—

"We ran down the rabbits," they asserted. "We caught nine."

The baffled game warden has not pressed charges.

CALGARY TEMPERATURE SKYROCKETS

Calgary, Jan. 27 (CP)—Calgary's unpredictable temperature sky rocketed upwards to set a record yesterday. From a low of 13 below in the morning the mercury climbed 51 degrees to a high of 38 above at 9.30 p.m.

Throw a Dollar out of the window

There's a certain amount of pleasure in throwing a dollar bill out of the window (we suppose—we've never tried it) . . watching it float through the air . . . guessing where it's going to land . . ' seeing it finally settle on a curbstone . . . and perhaps seeing some surprised individual pick it up.

At least, it's certainly more fun than throwing away a dollar bill by paying one hundred cents extra for something you're buying. Yet every year we all part with a goodly sum of hard-earned cash that we might otherwise save — IF WE KNEW HOW TO BUY!

The quickest, easiest, simplest way to learn how to buy is to read the advertisements in this newspaper. Know values. Know prices. Know quality. Start now to STOP throwing dollar bills away!

Anti-Aircraft Guns Open Fire in Tyne District as Residents Take to Air Raid Shelters

London, Jan. 29—(CP)—German bombers were reported to have attacked British shipping along 400 miles of the east coast today in the most widespread raids on shipping yet attempted.

Anti-aircraft guns went into action in the Tyneside area. Air raid warnings sounded in a number of northeast coast districts. Why The Weather?

Snow and ice color! Absolutely pure water is colorless; as seen in other forms, as cloud, fog and snow, it is white. If pure sunlight is reflected completely from any substance, the color of the substance is white, because that is the color of sunlight although it is composed of many colors. A single cloud or fog particle or a single snow crystal transmits a good deal of light and therefore appears colorless. But when seen in masses, cloud and snow are white because the sunlight is reflected a little from so many surfaces that the total effect is that of almost complete reflecpears white, just as a piece of clear ice is white when ground up.

80 Return to Work At Brockville Plant

Brockville, Ont., Jan. 29 (CP) — Officials of the Phillips Electrical Works, Ltd., announced today that approximately 80 members of the production staff of 300 were at work and that the remainder had failed to accept an invitation to return to their jobs pending a mediation meeting. A union committee will confer with company heads later today.

The strike began last Friday when 200 employees walked from the plant. The strikers are members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America and they seek higher wages, improved working conditions and seniority rights.

NEW U-BOAT WAVE IS REPORTED BEGUN

French Observers Say One Third of German Submarines Believed in Foray on Shipping

Paris, Jan. 29 (AP). — A "new wave" of German submarines is reported to have taken to the seas to war on merchant shipping.

The submarine foray was reported yesterday by the French high command, and observers estimated the submarine force was about one-third of the 75 to 80 submarines Germany is believed to have in commission.

Beyond saying that depth mines had produced results against the undersea raiders, the high command gave no details of the anti-submarine campaign.

Observers said the new submarine force put to sea about a week ago and would rove shipping lanes two weeks before returning to bases.

Two Freighters Torpedoed.

The torpedoing of two French freighters in one convoy, the 2,769-ton Tourny and the 3,810-ton Alsacien, was reported yesterday when 28 of the Tourny's 36 crewmen were landed at Vigo, Spain.

The Tourny's survivors did not know what happened to the 25 to 30 men aboard the Alsacien.

Survivors of the Alsacien landed at a southwestern port bringing the bodies of two seamen killed by the torpedo blast. Two survivors were seriously injured. The number who reached port was not made public.

(Germany reported Saturday a submarine had torpedoed two British merchantmen off the coast of Spain.)

The opening of a recruiting office for Britons in France was announced by the British Embassy here. Britons exempt from compulsory service were urged to register whether or not they intended to volunteer.

Rifle Fire Exchanges.

Rifle fire exchanges between the Casemates of the Maginot Line and the westwall shattered the quiet of the Rhine sector of the western front today as the French reported allied forces in advanced posts were fighting off increased German patrol activity.

The heaviest action was reported in the sector just west of the Vosges Mountains where a strong German patrol was said to have been repulsed.

Warmer weather accompanied by rains put soldiers on both sides to work bailing out trenches and dugouts.

ELECTION MARCH 26

Royal Commission Report on Dominion - Provincial Relations Available Next Session

Ottawa, Jan. 29—(CP)—Political parties hurriedly started to re-organize their election machinery today for a strange, wartime campaign for votes in the general election next March 26.

The national offices of the major parties practically folded up when war was declared and a political truce tacitly agreed upon. But the fireworks set off by the calling of the election and the hectic, four-hour parliamentary session have resulted in a rejuvenation of political life in the capital.

Headquarters of the Liberal and Conservative parties are active again laying plans for the campaign and the national executive of the co-operative commonwealth federation completed a lengthy meeting during the week-end.

ALL SHIPS UNDER WATCHFUL GUNS OF EASTERN PORT

When "All's Well" Given Anti-Submarine Net is Opened and Ship Passes Through DEFENCES TOURED

(By E. L. Williams, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

An Eastern Canadian port, Jan. 29—(CP)—From the moment she appears on the horizon until officials aboard the examination boat are satisfied with her, every ship that sails into this busy port—fishing craft or majestic liner—is under watchful guns.

It may be a coastal craft that appears thrice weekly or an unknown tramp from the far side of the world. Each receives the same careful scrutiny.

Then, if satisfied, the examination boat signals an "all's well" to a fort. The fort passes the word along to vessels guarding the anti-submarine net and the "gate" in the net is opened. The guns then swing seaward again to cover the next arrival.

Retired Town Clerk Charged With Theft

Ottawa, Jan. 29—(CP)—Charged with theft of between $7,000 and $8,000 from the town of Arnprior, Ont., G. Harry Moles, 60-year-old retired clerk-treasurer of the eastern Ontario town, was arrested here Saturday and later released on $7,000 bail.

Moles was served with a warrant for arrest in Ottawa civic hospital where he is a patient suffering from a nervous condition. The warrant was served by Constable L. T. Keeler of Renfrew on information sworn by Police Chief J. S. Rodgers of Arnprior

25 Per Cent. of Proposals Made in Cars, 23% in Homes

Los Angeles, Jan. 29—(AP)—By far the most marriage proposals are now made outside the girl's home, probably in some automobile, the Institute of Family Relations deduces from a study of 1,181 proposals.

Dr. Paul Popenoe, general director of the institute concluded:

"Modern homes are small or lack privacy. The automobile gives the couple a chance to be alone. Hence 25 per cent of the proposals were made in the car and only 23 per cent in the girl's home."

Besides the automobile proposals were listed these others outside the home:

20 per cent in streets, parks, campuses, restaurants or other public places.

13 per cent on vacation or while travelling.

10 per cent at parties, dances, dinners.

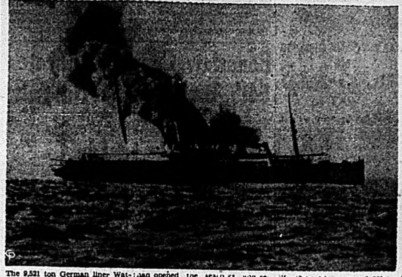
6 per cent by letter or wire.

3 per cent miscellaneous.

Dr. Popenoe contended the average man's proposal technique is disgraceful:

"A common performance, it appears, is for the young couple to be looking into a furniture store window when the man inquires, 'How about you and me fixing up a little love nest, huh?' "

ANOTHER GERMAN SUICIDE



The 9,521 ton German liner Watussi is shown burning off Cape Point, South Africa, after the captain, following Nazi sea tradition, had opened the seacocks and set the ship ablaze when sighted by a British patrol plane. All members of the crew were reported rescued, but the ship went to the bottom in the same manner as did the German luxury liner Columbus, when scuttled off the coast of the United States.

PLANS TO RECESS LEGISLATURE NOW ABANDONED

Premier Hepburn Cannot Forecast Date of the Budget Speech

CHALLIES ALARMED

Toronto, Jan. 29—(CP)—While Canada and the United States are negotiating an agreement on the St. Lawrence Seaway, questions are being asked about it in the Ontario Legislature. Ontario, through its interest in power development, will be an indirect party to the international agreement.

George Challies (Con. Grenville-Dundas) expressed alarm in the House last week over the reported agreement on a single-stage development which would, he said, require the flooding of 20,000 more acres in Eastern Ontario than would the originally-projected two-stage development.

Questions on Order Paper

Premier Mitchell Hepburn said he could not answer questions concerning the engineering aspects of the problem. But on the order paper the House today appeared the following resolutions in Mr. Challies' name:

That there be laid before the House a return showing all surveys and minutes of meeting of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission relative to or involved in the proposed development of the international section of the St. Lawrence river since Oct. 1, 1937.

That there be laid before this House a return showing all letters, memoranda, communications and reports relative to the development of the international section of the St. Lawrence River for Hydro power since Oct. 1, 1937, of or in possession of:—

DOUBLE RATIONS HAM AND BACON GIVEN BRITONS

Plans Are Laid by Food Ministry to Increase Butter Allowances

PRICE QUESTION

London, Jan. 29—(CP)—Britons received double rations of bacon and ham today and the government was reported planning to increase butter allowances.

The Food Ministry's announcement that the bacon and ham allowance would be increased to one-half pound a week per person said food supplies were more plentiful despite submarine warfare and mine menace.

The Daily Herald, however, declared high prices brought the relaxation. The newspaper predicted the butter ration would be increased from four to six ounces weekly for the same reason.

"There is only one other way to straighten the bacon, butter muddle," the newspaper said, "and that is to bring down the price."

Increase in Prices

Since the war, bacon has increased by the equivalent of about 10c a pound and butter about 8c.

With British workers fearful that living costs may outstrip wage increases, the Labor party has placed a motion on record with parliament for establishment of a ministry of economic coordination.

Debate on the motion will begin Thursday in the House of Commons giving Prime Minister Chamberlain and Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, an opportunity to report on progress in the field of economic coordination since the outbreak of war.

Proponents of the move for a new ministry are found in all parties.

JAPAN PREPARES SECOND PROTEST TO GREAT BRITAIN

Asama Maru Case Approaches Proportions of International Issue

ANSWER INADEQUATE

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (AP)—Japan prepared a second protest to Great Britain today on the seizure of 21 German seamen from the Japanese liner Asama Maru as the case approached the proportions of a major political and international issue.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the new protest might demand formally that the Germans be returned. The Japanese interpretation of international law in such cases holds that only persons active in fighting services are liable to seizure from neutral ships. The Germans were all seamen of military age.

The unpublished British reply to the first note over the incident, Jan. 21 when a British warship fired a warning shot across the Asama Maru's bow 35 miles off Yokohama, stopped her and took off the Germans, was called "inadequate."

Dissatisfaction with the British stand was widespread and there were indications that rightists might make capital of the case during the session of parliament which opens Thursday. They may demand that Premier Mitsumasa Yonai's government obtain satisfactory redress or resign.

CABLE RATE REDUCED

Toronto, Jan. 29 (CP)—A press cable rate of 4 1-2 cents a word between all cable and telegraph offices in Canada and those in Great Britain and Ireland was announced today to be effective Feb. 1.

The reduction amounts to one-half cent a word and brings the Canada-Great Britain rate into line with that prevailing between Britain and the other Dominions.

Tie-up by Cold On British Rails, Roads Greatest in History

(By Fred Backhouse Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Jan. 29 (CP Cable) — Britain's biggest road and rail tie-up in history continued today as the War Office announced home leaves for the British Expeditionary Force has been temporarily postponed owing to "intensely severe weather conditions."

Food, freight and mail trains were delayed anything from 11 to 24 hours, and many trains in the north of England and Scotland were completely "lost." In London there was general chaos, the confusion extending even to the underground system.

Nearly 400 passengers in two express trains stranded near Chorley, Lancashire, spent the night in the compartments or made their way to a nearby school.

Struggle to Get Services Going

Transport officials struggled to get the services going. To millions of Londoners late for work this morning they cautiously announced it was "hoped service would be running normally" by the time of the evening rush through the blackout. Thousands who walked to work prepared to journey home the same way.

Any Londoner who reached his office on time today must have lived just around the corner.

But despite the big slow-up on land, there was no slackening in the air, with the R.A.F. ready and alert for action—as was proved when enemy aircraft approached the northeast coast this morning.

With services heavily curtailed, thousands of London workers walked to work. Many offices and stores opened late because their clerks were delayed in suburban train tie-ups. Mails were undelivered in many parts of the country.

Train Service Curtailed

The Passenger Transport Board Office announced that tram service in the outer districts of London was severely curtailed. Thousands of office workers were late as a result of difficulties in road and rail traffic. Many shops were unable to open.

In trains that ran compartments designed for ten persons often carried as many as twenty-two.

Trains were not running between Carlisle and Edinburgh, Naywick and St. Margaret's Glendouglas

Blizzard Forgotten as 'Bea' Lillie Entertains Canadians at Aldershot

(By Edwin Johnson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, Jan. 29—(CP-Cable)—While a raging blizzard, Canadian style, blew through Aldershot, Sunday, Beatrice Lillie, Toronto-born comedienne, sang to the Canadian boys the sophisticated songs that have made her the toast of Piccadilly and Broadway.

She came to Aldershot through driving wind and biting cold in a blizzard that was described as about the worst to hit this country in living memory.

But in the war theatre, war and Adolf Hitler were forgotten as "Bea" gave the troops medley of her old favorites and added a new hit number, written for her by Noel Coward, entitled "I'm Madly Keen to Entertain the Troops."

There were encores and more encores and "Bea" gave up only when sheer physical fatigue made it impossible for her to do more.

She brought with her the entire cast of her successful London musical revue, "All Clear," and an orchestra of 12 to give the boys a "bit of real fun," as she put it. And she gave it to them, in crammed afternoon and evening performances.

It was fun for her too. "It's been a glorious day and I have enjoyed it immensely," she said. "I'll be back to give them more at the first opportunity."

Miss Lillie's visit to Aldershot marked the first professional theatrical venture staged for the troops by Captain Mert Plunkett of the Canadian Legion War Service, originator and producer of the famous "Dumbells."

Another star of the program was Fred Emney, who for four years starred with the old "Dumbells," as the "silly ass" at the piano. He sang a number of songs which he introduced to Canadian audiences years ago.

Captain Plunkett is planning to put on an all-star soldier show within a fortnight and ultimately hopes to build up another touring troupe of entertainers similar to his Dumbells of another era.

The English comedianss Leslie Henson and Jack Buchanan are also bringing companies to camp shortly to entertain the Canadians.

Eden Has Talk With Canadian

London, Jan. 29 (CP)—Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden paid an informal visit to the Victoria League Club for servicemen from overseas Saturday and chatted with Private James Simpson of Winnipeg, a former accountant.

When the Canadian soldier recalled listening at Winnipeg to a speech on Democracy Mr. Eden broadcast from New York in 1936, the Dominions Secretary said, "I never felt so nervous in my life as when I entered the hall and faced all those people."

When Mr. Eden entered the building he was surrounded by Canadian soldiers and Australian airmen who clamored for his autograph.

Two young Canadians went up to him and asked to be excused for hurrying away as they were "just off to meet two charming English ladies, Sir."

The Minister laughed, shook hands with them and remarked: "You are well fixed up."

Farmer Shoots Man Who Aims Gun At Head of His Son

Paulding, O., Jan. 29 (AP) — A modern "William Tell", 47-year-old Oscar Ball, was summoned to a coroner's inquest today to describe the slaying with a well-aimed rifle shot of a man holding a loaded pistol near the head of Ball's 19-year-old son.

Ball, a farmer, told authorities that Louis Strake, 33, struck in the forehead with a .22 calibre rifle bullet fired 200 feet, menaced Ball's own son, Richard, in an effort to collect "blackmail" money, Police Chief Frank Wallar said.

Strake squeezed the trigger of his pistol as he slumped to the ground. The shot was ineffective.

Young Ball said Strake and an unidentified man came to the Ball farm home near Oakwood Saturday while his parents were on a shopping trip, the pair forcing him to go to Defiance, fifteen miles north of Oakwood.

Strake left his companion in Defiance and returned the boy to his home, threatening en route to "kill your father".

Standing beside the automobile in a barnyard near the house, Strake called to Oscar Ball to "come out".

The father stepped onto the porch, but receiving a warning from his son, dashed to an upstairs window from which he shot Strake while the assailant pointed his gun at the boy and threatened to shoot him unless Ball paid "plenty of money".

Strake, a farm laborer of nearby Ney, had attempted several times to extort money from Ball, police said.

Invaders Driven Back All Along the Line Northeast of Lake Ladoga—Heavy Artillery Used

ATTACK FALTERING

Artillery Attacks on the Isthmus Line Seen as Possible Attempt to Draw Finnish Troops From Ladoga Area

Helsingfors, Jan. 29 —(AP)—The Finnish high command reported today that its troops had killed more than 1,250 Russians in two battles in which the invaders were driven back on the eastern front.

"About 800" Russian troops were killed and 160 taken prisoner northeast of Lake Ladoga, the army reported, and in the Aittojoki sector to the south "the enemy left over 450 dead on the field."

The fighting northeast of Lake Ladoga "became very fierce in character," the army communique said. "Our troops repulsed all the enemy's attacks and captured a few enemy strong points."

Russian field guns were reported today to be pumping thousands of shells into Finland's Karelian Isthmus defences, apparently to relieve the hard-pressed fragments of four Red divisions on the Lake Ladoga front.

On the basis of Finnish advices from the wilderness of snow and ice north of Lake Ladoga, the Russian offensive aimed at Finland's main defences on the Isthmus' Mannerheim line appeared to be faltering and shaping into a retreat with extremely heavy losses.

Attacks Grow Weaker

The Finnish headquarters communique last night said Russian attacks in the Ladoga region were "weaker" Saturday although "the enemy's losses in killed mounted in the course of the day to some hundreds."

Military quarters interpreted the Russian attacks as rearguard action to permit reorganization of forces in the hope of making a stronger stand with arrival of supplies and reinforcements.

Heavy artillery attacks on the Isthmus line were seen as a possible attempt to draw Finnish forces from the Ladoga front to bolster the Isthmus defenders.

One large group of Russian troops was reported unofficially to be surrounded near Kitela on Ladoga's northern shore, virtually without food, depending for salvation on another unit trying to reach Kitela from the northeast.

But the relief unit itself was said by Finns to be blocked 20 miles from its destination. Railway communication there had been cut.

A reliable source said an officer captured when a Russian plane made a forced landing near Kitela disclosed that the plane had been sent to rescue the commander of Russian units in that sector.

THREE INJURED OVER WEEKEND

Bob-Sleigh Crashes Into Tree and Youth Suffers Ruptured Kidney

Trenton, Jan. 29 (Special)—Friday and Saturday were unlucky days for at least three Trenton residents. One woman was hurt in her home, while two boys were victims at play.

Crushed when the bob-sleigh on which he was riding smashed into a tree Billy Spencer, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Spencer, Spring Street, Trenton suffered a ruptured kidney, but is expected to recover completely. Young Spencer and a party of several children were sliding down the mountain, when the speeding bobs left the runway and crashed. All members of the party were jarred heavily, but young Spencer was the only one seriously injured. A late report indicated that the youth passed a quiet day, but is not entirely out of danger. His father Mr. George Spencer is the principal of the Trenton High School.

Little Ronnie Smith seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith, Bay Street, Trenton fractured his right shoulder when he fell heavily on the rink at College Public School. The injured lad was treated at the Belleville hospital after first aid was administered here. The unfortunate youth was hurt two weeks ago when he fell down and gashed his right knee.

Catching her hand in the wringer of a washing machine Mrs. Marion Deline, Stanley Street, Trenton suffered a painful injury Saturday and an examination revealed, that the thumb had been broken and two fingers badly mangled. Fortunately for Mrs. Deline the machine was stopped before her arm became entangled. Dr. A. C. Drisooll treated Mrs. Deline.

Recently he was transferred to the pastorate of one of the United Churches in Sarnia, and Mrs. Manuel was looking forward to his arrival in Toronto and to going with him to take up residence in Sarnia.

Bonarlaw Couple Celebrate 54th Anniversary of Nuptials

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Barlow Born and Lived in Same Community All Their Lives

50 AT CELEBRATION

Hale and hearty with eyes gleaming in faces that show scarcely the marks of time, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Barlow, life-long residents of Bonarlaw, celebrated the 54th anniversary of their nuptials at the home of their daughter, Mrs. James Barber, Ameliasburg, on Saturday.

Surrounded by upwards of fifty members of their families, the elderly couple who are 75 and 74 years of age respectively were the recipients of many congratulations on the attainment of their anniversary. The "celebration" was held all day with a number of friends dropping in to offer felicitations.

"Never had a sick day in my life, and feel just as good as I did a half-century ago," the 54-year bridegroom smiled as he executed a little jig in the kitchen of the Barber home. Mrs. Barlow likewise is a picture of health, does all her own housework and finds time for activities other than those of her own.

Born In Bonarlaw.

Both born in the village of Bonarlaw, they have not as Mr. Barlow puts it, been "a mile and a half away from the place during their entire lives". They first saw the light of day within a few yards of each other, toddled along village streets together, became schoolday sweethearts and later married. They settled down together in their native village and dwelt there all their lives.

They have six children, two sons, J. M. Barlow who now resides on the old Frost homestead where his parents lived for thirty years and William J. Barlow, general merchant of Bonarlaw. The four daughters are Mrs. Fred Phillips, Wallbridge, Mrs. George Mumby, Ameliasburg, Mrs. George Lough, Mountain View, and Mrs. James Barber, Ameliasburg. Twenty-four grandchildren and four great grandchildren complete the family picture.

From Old County Families.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Barlow are scions of distinguished old Hastings County families. The blood of stalwart pioneer forebears runs through their veins and they hold their heads high with justifiable pride when Hastings County and pioneers are mentioned. Mrs. Barlow was the former Mary Frost. They were married on Jan. 27, 1886 in Marmora by the Rev. C. M. Harris, rector of St. Paul's Church.

Time has been kind to this splendid couple. Their eyes gleam with the light of contentment that comes from physical fitness, and love and happiness that comes from a lifetime of mutual close associations. They were on Saturday as young in spirit as the youngest of their large family. They moved among their friends with an agility that belied their three-quarters of a century and their gay laughter mingled with that of the company when witticisms were passed.

Mr. Barlow Quite Active.

Mrs. Barlow's hair is whitening, but in the dark eyes that gleam with merriment when she is laughing, or light with a sudden sympathy when speaking of a friend, there still remains the spirit of youth.

Mr. Barlow, despite his three score and fifteen years is as lively as he was fifty years ago. In fact he laughingly admits it, and says he would be willing to "start all over again". He paid a beautiful tribute to his helpmate of 54 years, when he said, "she is the same today as she was when I first met her, and that is a long, long time ago."

He does his chores around the house when at home in Bonarlaw, but for the most of his time he can be seen helping around the store of his son, William.

Finland is United in War, Finnish Vice-Consul States

Collection of $60 Taken Up at Bridge Street United Church for Finnish Red Cross on Sunday Evening at Close of Mr. Sven Stadius' Address on History and Modern Social and Economic Progress of Northern Democratic Nation—'Finland Will Not be Conquered,' He Tells Large Congregation

Finland is engaged in a struggle for the defence of the principles of western civilization, for the very same civilization for which Canada is fighting and sending her soldiers overseas.

Finland looks to the west. There are no ties binding her to the East.

The Soviet army has destroyed a great deal but they will never conquer Finland. The day will come when the sun will shine on Finland and the free nations of the world.

So spoke Sven Stadius Vice Consul of Finland, resident at Toronto, in an illustrated address at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening. He indicated how politically and socially Finland was the very essence of democracy and indicated her progressiveness in every phase of life. One of the oldest countries in Europe, it is modern in its outlook and development, with a historic past.

"For the last quarter of a century we have lived in a very troubled and rather as I think, revolutionary world, things moving in a very bewildering manner. There has been a great deal of tension with problems more tremendous and baffling than ever before," said the Vice-Consul, who was welcomed to the church by Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor, who praised the people of Finland for their progressive spirit and their valiant defence of liberty.

Finland's Appeal

"We find one spot that demands the attention of the whole world. There in Finland is everything that appeals to the sense of justice, and everything that appeals as man to man among the nations." declared Mr. Stadius.

"Finland is a democracy like Canada," he told the congregation. "We have never made any territorial demands on any nation. There is one thing we ask, to be left alone and to put our own house in order and to live at peace with the neighbors around us. But the neighbor to the east which has preached brotherhood abroad, has apparently not been able to achieve what Finland has achieved.

"I don't think anyone would call Finland an inferior country, so our neighbor could not attack us for that reason.

Finland United

"Finland stands today united. There has never been anything like this before. In peace times there are local disputes. But now they have all disappeared and the nation is one."

Mr. Stadius did not refer to details of the war side of the story of Finland, but devoted his attention to telling about its history and developments. "I want to show you Finland as she really is."

Six thousand years before the birth of Christ, Finland was inhabited by some nomadic people, but it is not known who they were. The Finns were pagans until the twelfth century when the Swedes sent a cruisade against them and through a Scotch bishop made the first converts to Christianity. This bishop was murdered, but in time he became the patron saint of Finland. Today ninety-six per cent of the people are Lutheran, and three per cent members of other Protestant denominations.

Finland and Sweden fought side by side for hundreds of years and equal rights were granted both languages.

Russia went into Finland in 1908 and the Finns were conquered and the country became a grand duchy in Russia, Russia allowing many laws and educational methods to be retained. It was later that Russian overlords had it enacted that Russian became the official language. Russia removed some of the more objectionable conditions after the Finns resisted. Then came the revolution of 1917 and Finland saw her chance to declare herself free. Out of the war came the freedom of Finland. Communist Finns were driven out. Finland barred Reds in 1918 forever. Communism in Finland means treason to home. That is the only restriction in Finland.

Education Standard High

Educational standards in Finland are very high, the vice Consul stated. Since 1918 the country has gone ahead. 99.1 per cent of the people can read and write. Some old backwoodsmen cannot, but some day Finland expects to have a perfect score in literacy of its people.

Finland has the largest bookstore in Europe with 12 miles of shelves. This year's Nobel prize winner is a Finn. Jan Sibelius, the noted composer is a type of the Finn in art. Finland pensioned him so that he might devote all his time to music.

"Where there is a man or woman who has shown to be outstanding the Government has given pensions to help them develop their art and so avoid the loss of time in struggling for years for recognition. Finland has eliminated that worry. She has great architects and painters and other leaders in art. One of her architects now in the United States has influenced the style of construction of skyscrapers in the United States. Finland gave the world modernistic furniture. She has been prominent in science.

Finland has granted equality of rights to man and woman. All activities are open to women. There are 40 women members in the Parliament of 200. Only the ministry of the church is barred to woman.

"Women have made very good use of this liberty, Mr. Stadius said. "There are women barbers, stationmasters, street car conductors, managers of industrial concerns. Even today in the present struggle women are practically fighting at the front with the men. Three women have been reported killed in action on the Karelian front."

System of Government

The leading party in Finland is the Social Democrats but the Prime Minister of the Finnish Parliament is a member of a small group, the Liberals who have only seven seats. All that is required is that the Prime Minister have the confidence of the House.

Finland has advanced social legislation, old age pensions, mother's allowance, workmen's compensation. Everyone over 18 years of age who becomes incapacitated is taken care of by the Government. Large employers must not dismiss old employees. They must find some work for them to do. They are not compelled to pay the same wages as for an active man but the government makes up the difference.

Military service is compulsory at seventeen and over. Men are called at 21, though they may enter the service earlier. They do 350 days' service. Most Finn men belong to a territorial force. Military training has come in very handy today when it is so necessary to know military tactics.

Women perform such duties as cooking for the army and caring for the sick. Today all outposts are manned by women who warn the troops of air raids and approaching troops of the enemy. Women tip off military posts from these outposts of any unusual developments.

General Mannerheim.

General Mannerheim, after whom the Finnish defence line is named, was a major-general in the Czar's army and was in Czar Nicolas' bodyguard. He led the Finns to freedom and is again at the head of the forces. He has a thorough knowledge of the Russian people and the Russian soldier. Today the Russians are bewildered. They talk of "Finnish ghosts". Mannerheim knows how to put the fear of the lord into the Russians, you might say," remarked Mr. Stadius.

Finland has cheap rail transportation, one could travel 1,000 miles for $6.50. The railways are state-owned and show profits every year in spite of cheap fares. Food and clothes are cheap. Americans have thought Finland was enjoying a perpetual bargain day in peace time. Public health is far advanced. Hospitalization is cheap. An appendix operation and hospitalization costs would cost equivalent of eleven dollars in Canadian money.

Finland is a land of sport and athletics.

There was no slump in Finland or other parts of Scandinavia.

The cooperative movement is popular, there are cooperative banks and associations. Cooperatives, the speaker said, had definitely raised the standard of living of farmers who are getting 85 per cent of the sale price of their products. This is unequalled in the world.

The national debt has gone down, the external debt being only 24 per cent of the debt. If she sold her railways she would be out of debt.

Main exports are agricultural, timber, wood, paper, pulp, textiles, glass and pottery. Over fifty per cent of fibre comes from Finland. Finland buys from Canada twenty times as much as Canada buys from Finland.

There are 60,000 Finns in Canada, most of them in the north in lumbering and mining. Many of the women are in domestic service.

"This is the country that has been invaded by the barbarian hordes from the east," the Vice-Consul said. This is the country which is accused of imperialism and having designs on her neighbors. No one really thinks that a land of four million people wants to attack a land of 170,000,000.

"The Finnish people all over Canada organized at the entry of Canada in the war to make socks and help in every way the defence of their new homeland, Canada, little thinking that in a few weeks their own homeland would be invaded.

"I assure you the Finns in Canada are loyal. Today most of us Finns in Canada have our hearts in Finland."

He told of Finns putting a whole month's wages on the plate for the support of Finland.

Views showing the beauty of the "Land of Lakes" which is Finland, its historic buildings, its modern cities and industries, its hospitals, its apartment houses which are numerous in the cities for nearly everyone lives in apartments. Southern Finland, he said, was warmer than southern Ontario.

Finnish music was played by the organist, Mr. Alec Gordon. Sibelius' "Finlandia" was the prelude to the service.

Mr. Stadius presented a copy of "Sketches of Finland", edited by the Finnish section of the New York World's Fair to the library of Bridge Street United Church.

Building Progress in Belleville Noted in New York Paper

'While Canadian Cities in General Recorded Decline in Private Building Last Year, Belleville Had Active Year,' Says Commercial and Financial Chronicle

(Special to The Ontario-Intelligencer)

New York, Jan. 29—Although Canadian cities in general recorded a decline in private building during the past year, Belleville had an active year, according to a survey of 410 Canadian and United States cities, just completed by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle here.

Permits were issued for building in Belleville, exclusive of engineering construction and public works, to the extent of $251,396, compared with $119,340 in 1938. This increase, 110.66 per cent. contrasts with an average decline of 2.66 per cent in the Canadian cities. The United States cities had an increase of 12.89 per cent.

The halt in construction in Canada near the end of the year was occasioned entirely by war, the Chronicle states. "If the uncertainties of war could be set aside," it adds, "it is probable that a considerable degree of progress could be made in building activities. The need for fresh construction is enormous, not only because of the lag in recent years, but also because of the steady increase in population."

Why Not Find Out?

Your life insurance is "money for future delivery".

But have you ever thought of just how it will be delivered?

It's well worth thinking about. And it's well worth asking the advice of a Canada Life representative. For he will explain to you how the "delivery" of your life insurance can be arranged on an income basis. How the effectiveness of your present life insurance can be substantially increased at no additional cost whatsoever.

Too good to be true? Not at all. It's being done every day. A Canada Life representative will cite you actual instances where as much as twenty-five to thirty per cent has been added to the settlement value of life insurance—with not a penny added to the premium.

He will tell you other things too.

. . . How you can place upon the life insurance companies the responsibility of paying your wife an income as long as she lives if anything should happen to you.

. . . How much monthly income from your life insurance you can expect when you reach retirement age.

He has done it for others. He will be glad to do it for you.

Canada Life representatives who would particularly welcome an opportunity to discuss these matters with you at your convenience are

FOOD SHORTAGE IN CONCESSIONS

Provisions at Doubled Prices Gobbled Up by Housewives and Servants

Tientsin, China, Jan. 29 (AP) — Only the barest food supplies were on hand in the British and French concessions today as housewives and servants crowded markets to buy up provisions at doubled prices amid fear of the worst shortage in more than seven months of Japanese blockade.

Import af all food for the foreign-controlled areas was banned as the Japanese again electrified the blockade barriers and retightened other measures which first went into effect June 14, but gradually had been relaxed.

Although the blockade was newly clamped down following British seizure of 21 German seamen from a Japanese liner, Japanese said it was due to "activities of anti-Japanese elements within the concession."

To help meet the situation, the British council rescinded a regulation fixing the price of flour. Holders of flour had refused to sell at the fixed prices because their stock replacements would have cost double.

As a result, flour again was available, but British and French concession authorities were fearful supplies of other foodstuffs, already selling at 100 per cent price increases, might be exhausted.

200 BURNED AS TRAIN DERAILED

Two-Car Suburban Train in Japan Rams String of Gasoline Tank Cars

Tokyo, Jan. 29—(AP)—Between 170 and 200 factory workers were burned to death today when a two-car suburban train was derailed and burst into flames on the outskirts of Osaka. About 100 others were injured.

The chief of the Osaka railway bureau said an investigation had failed to show the cause of the accident. Earlier reports had said the train rammed a string of gasoline tank cars.

The screams of the men, tight-packed inside the wrecked coaches, could be heard over the roar of the fire. Rescuers were thwarted by the intense heat and successive explosions of the fuel tanks.

CROP IS RUINED BY COLD WEATHER

Citrus and Vegetable Growers Facing Multi-Million Dollar Loss

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 — (AP)—Florida's coldest weather in a quarter of a century left the state's citrus and vegetable growers facing a multi-million dollar loss today as sunshine lifted winter's bitter 10-day siege across the United States southland and middle west.

Early reports indicated an almost complete loss of truck crops in deep south Florida, and many growers made ready for replanting. The citrus crop was damaged heavily and fear was held for the state's sugar cane crop.

Vegetable crop losses around Miami were estimated at between $7,000,000 and $10,000,000 while in Broward County planters said their damage might reach $5,000,000.

A cold wave was climaxed Sunday when temperatures ranged from 10 above zero at Deland, 17 degrees in cultivated portions of the Everglades, to 42 degrees at Key West.

Florida contributed at least six deaths to the country's toll of 158 attributed to the current cold wave. Weather-connected deaths neared the 400 mark for the past three weeks.

JAPAN PREPARES

Japan has taken the view that the seizure was a "serious unfriendly act" and an Admiralty spokesman said last week her navy was "making preparations to prevent such incidents in the near future." This source held that Japan would refuse to debate legal questions, declaring "national feelings are more important than questions of law."

CAR SIDESWIPES STANDING TRUCK

Considerable damage resulted to an automobile driven by Eugene J. Donovan, McDonald Avenue, when his motor car sideswiped a parked truck on Station Street early Saturday evening. Donovan told police authorities he was proceeding easterly at the time and failed to observe the truck parked on the south side of the street. The truck, which was operated by George Greatrix, Belleville, was stationary. When Mr. Donovan saw the truck loom before his view, he promptly swerved towards the centre of the street, but the right door and side of his automobile struck the projecting platform of the truck, causing damage only to Mr. Donovan's car. No injuries were sustained, police were assured.

May Increase Pressure

The newspaper Kokumin saw the possibility that the United States might increase economic pressure on Japan if Japan failed to obtain complete satisfaction from Britain.

Hundreds of menacing letters, meanwhile, reached Captain Yoshisada Watanabe, dismissed from command of the Asama Maru on charges of mis-conduct in connection with the halting of his ship. Many of the threats accused him of being an accessory to a national insult.

His children have stayed away from school and the family has remained indoors to avoid street incidents.

CABINET MEMBERS

No Husting's Fight

It won't be a husting's fight for the government but rather the cabinet will endeavor to play the administration's case before the electorate through the newspapers and over the radio.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told newsmen at a Press conference Saturday that the election will be held March 26, the earliest possible date under the present electoral law, but he and his colleagues will make few election trips out of Ottawa.

"The present administration has to carry on until April, doing all it can to further Canada's war effort and prepare to meet parliament if returned," he said.

"I cannot conceive how, with the great responsibility resting upon myself and my colleagues, we can carry on a campaign as we would in other days. Myself and most of my colleagues must spend the greater part of our time right here."

The Prime Minister said he had been ready to give parliament an opportunity to review the war record of the government but the censure of the Ontario legislature and the tone of speeches made by Conservative Leader Manion and J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader in the Commons following the throne speech convinced him such a course would be useless.

Meet in May

So parliament was dissolved and probably will meet again early in May and continue into the summer. The Royal Commission report on Dominion-Provincial relations will not be made public until the next session and will not be available to any party during the campaign.

The Prime Minister also outlined the procedure to be followed in taking the soldiers' vote. The troops overseas will vote from March 14 to 23 and troops in Canada from March 16 to 23 inclusive.

For the military vote there will be four divisions of territory—the Maritime provinces with headquarters at Halifax, Ontario; Quebec and Manitoba with headquarters at Ottawa; Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and the Yukon with headquarters at London. Col. John Thompson of Ottawa, former Dominion Franchise Commissioner, has been appointed supervisor of the soldiers' vote overseas.

Passed by the British censor, this picture shows Royal Air Force mechanics loading a chain of machine gun bullets into the guns of a Spitfire pursuit plane, just prior to the Spitfire taking off on a regular patrol of the British coast. These speedy planes have proved more than a match for Germany's highly touted Messerschmidts. This picture was transmitted from New York by Phonephoto.

SOUVENIR OF ROYAL WELCOME TO FIRST DIVISION

Everyone treasures a memento. And soldiers are no exception.

Soldiers of Canada's First Division are to receive one of the most treasured of souvenirs, a copy of the address of His Majesty King George on the day the contingent landed in Britain. This is to be a printed copy of the royal welcome read on His Majesty's behalf to the arriving troops. The speech is to be printed on Royal letterhead bearing the red household crest and the facsimile of the Monarch's signature.

The message reads:—

"On behalf of this country I extend the warmest welcome to the first contingent of Canadian forces to reach these shores. The British Army will be proud to have as comrades-in-arms the successors of those who came from Canada in the Great War and fought with a heroism that has never been forgotten."

Canadians will honor that day in late December when they landed in the Old Land to be given a welcome which only the Motherland can give to Dominion soldiers.

His Majesty's deep interest in the troops has been shown on many an occasion as it was so recently when he visited the Canadian Corps at Aldershot and spent a great part of the day with the soldiers.

SOUTHLAND GETS NORTHERN WINTER

While many in Canada will not forget January of 1940 because of its severity of cold, it is the Southland not far from the Gulf of Mexico where the memories will linger longest. The temperature there, which dropped to something like the temperature of the north in mild winter days, is now moderating after the most severe winter in generations. Down in the far south in Atlanta, famed in the history of the Confederacy, ten and a third inches of snow fell. Children played in the streets. For many thousands it was the first snow they had ever seen. In Florida citrus growers started fires to ward off possibility of damage to their crops.

But the intense cold and the snowfall were not all just novelty. They meant untold suffering to the poor people especially and suffering even to those "better off," particularly in those usually warm parts of the south where the construction of houses differs materially from that in the north where the basements, cellars and foundations are substantially protected. Some months ago Florida was very chilly and citizens had to resort to unusual means of warming their chilly residences, by the use of oil stoves and such equipment.

In the South the cold resulted in many traffic accidents. There has been no thaw during the spell in the north but it is easy to realize what snow falling in the warmer portions of the Southland meant. It meant icy streets which sent many a motor car into a crash.

Down in Tennessee the temperatures went below zero. It was thirteen below at Nashville, Tennessee, while at New Orleans there was ten degrees of frost. Florida readings went as low as the 20s', 30's and 40's.

Hundreds are dead in the south as a direct or indirect result of the prolonged cold wave.

Fuel ran out. In the rural districts of the hilly regions of Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky there was bitter hardship among the settlers isolated by the tens of thousands of families. Relief in fuel and food had to be taken in by the Red Cross. Fires through overheating were very numerous.

The south is not prepared for sudden and prolonged descents of temperature. In the north the people are prepared, they have warm homes, they have fuel, for they expect severe weather. They have implements for clearing the roads.

The cold wave came out of the Rocky Mountains, it is said, and it swept the continent. This part of Ontario has had the prolonged spell and the weather was severe but the hardships have been little or no more than might be expected, though perhaps the demand on fuel has been heavier.

BRITAIN BUYS CANADA'S TIMBER

Canadian forests will supply timber to Great Britain as the Baltic areas are practically inaccessible on account of the war. Britain is now seeking pit props in Canada and Newfoundland. British Dominions have orders to supply between $75,000,000 and $80,000,000 in timber, it has been revealed.

Due to heavy consumption, timber for home use in Britain is looked upon as a luxury.

British Columbia timber will be hauled by the two railways to the east and thence taken by boat to Britain, according to an announcement at London by A. J. Harris, British timber controller.

CUPID'S WAY

A Polish girl and a Belgian soldier were married the other day but the marriage did not take place in either France or Belgium. But love will always find a way. The mayor of Hondschote, France, performed the ceremony with the bride sitting at a table in French territory and the groom by her side in Belgian territory. That satisfied the law, Cupid and his couple.

The little love-god has a way of his own. He rarely fails. Circumstances do not daunt him. He crosses international and racial barriers.

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed

"I'd swear I heard someone say 'Bid six No-Trump'!"

A Toronto Major Abuses the Press

One of the most amusing editorials which we have read in a long time appeared in The Ottawa Journal last week, states the Kingston Whig Standard in Editorial comment on the Journal's article. It dealt with an address delivered before the Ottawa Kiwanis Club by Major Baxter, vice-president of the A. McKim Advertising Agency, Toronto. Mr. Baxter has made his living for years placing advertising for national clients in the newspapers of Canada. He is now branching out and at Ottawa undertook to tell the newspapermen of Canada how to edit their newspapers.

x x x

Abusing the press seems at the moment to be a popular sport with service club speakers, and it is rather surprising that these speakers always receive a cordial vote of thanks for so doing. Recently, Col. Ralph Webb of Winnipeg (now Chief Inspector of Catering and Messing for the troops) addressed the Kingston Kiwanis Club and accused the newspapermen of Canada of pretty nearly everything except high treason and armed robbery. He was thanked. We have wondered since if he would have been thanked as heartily if he had heaped the same amount of abuse on some of the businesses or professions prominently represented at the luncheon that day. However, that water has long since passed under the bridge, and nobody was drowned in the flood.

Major J. M. Baxter had his speech carefully prepared and The Ottawa Journal dealt with it editorially page by page, as the gallant major progressed. One page "teased" his listeners, another "disappointed" them, and The Journal eventually came to the conclusion that the major was only "spoofing." Major Baxter may have been spoofing. We do not know. He is an advertising agent. He places advertising for clients in newspapers and gets a commission from the newspapers for so doing.

He has been in various agencies. Just now he is vice-president of A. McKim Limited, the oldest advertising agency in Canada and one held in high regard by all newspaper publishers. We do not know Major Baxter, the v.-p., very well. But Charlie Pearce, the president, is one of the very best, so we must conclude that last Friday was Major Baxter's off-day.

The trouble with the newspapers of Canada is that they try to be too fair to these people who run around abusing the press before service clubs. If the press did not publicize their rhetorical abuse and misrepresentations, their audiences would be so limited that anything they said would be ineffectual. But let us quote from Major Baxter at Ottawa:

"....I am alarmed when I see the press of Canada expressing a too-ready compliance with the propaganda of government. The basis of a free press is the same as that of democracy—criticism, honest, constructive criticism.

"The members of the Fourth Estate in this Canada of ours in this year of grace, 1940, are worthy of the best traditions of the free press of England, of the United States. But where is their voice? Why is it so still? Does all go well with Canada? Are we so perfect that change is prohibitive?

"The press of Canada has one primary function—the publication of news, unbiased, authoritative news. More important still, the press molds public opinion."

Major Baxter recalled the history of Canadian journalism with its champions of great causes.

"It seems only yesterday Dafoe wrote with inspired pen in the Winnipeg Free Press; today Floyd Chalmers, with great courage, writes with devastating frankness in the Financial Post, and two women journalists with rare fortitude write freely of their own views in the Toronto Globe and Mail."

We wonder how many Canadian newspapers Major Baxter reads every day. Does he read any except the Toronto papers? There are ninety-seven daily newspapers in Canada and over 800 weeklies. Does Major Baxter read carefully every day nine dailies, or one-tenth of the daily press? Does he read each week ten country weeklies, or about one-eighth of the weekly press of Canada? "What should they know of England who only England know?" wrote Kipling. What do they know of Canada who read only the Toronto press, excellent though it may be.

Nearly fifty newspapers come into this office every day and the editorial pages are carefully perused. We cannot subscribe to Major Baxter's complaint that these pages lack criticism. We are free to admit that no newspaper that we are aware of, except Major Baxter's heroic Financial Post, is carrying on a personal and political feud against one particular Cabinet minister all the time, nor do we find many espousing the cause of National Government, reputedly so dear to the heart of Major Baxter. Nevertheless, most newspapers try to be fair and honest in their criticisms and, so far as we can judge, wear no man's collar. We could remind Major Baxter, too, that it does not take "rare fortitude" to be abusive in a newspaper column. A different phrase might be more accurate.

x x x

But let us quote again from Major Baxter as reprinted in The Ottawa Journal:

"Where do we find men of the Fourth Estate in the proud Dominion writing the truth? The public 'smells a smell.' How long will the press hold its own nose?"

Revenue from advertising was still the bulwark of the independence of the press, which enabled it to stand upon its own feet without relying on subsidies from governments or politicians. Advertisers were businessmen, and knew that permanent circulation could only be secured by honest news and honest opinion. Apathy by the press towards its public led to a corresponding attitude of the advertiser to the press.

Might we suggest humbly to Major Baxter that he read again, carefully the first four verses of the seventh chapter of the Gospel according to St. Matthew. It deals succinctly and devastatingly with a fault from which, unfortunately, most of us suffer. It speaks of "judging" and has something to say about "motes."

Major Baxter talks about the public "smelling a smell" and asks "How long will the press hold its nose?" Might we respectfully remind Major Baxter that when it comes to propaganda and the publication of unbiased news, the worst foe of the newspaper that wants to be free and untrammeled is the "free publicity department" of the advertising agencies. The advertising manager of every daily newspaper in Canada "smells a smell" and "holds his nose" nearly every day when he opens his mail and faces demand after demand from the advertising agencies for the publication of free propaganda for this product or that cause, to be run in the news columns without distinguishing marks. If the newspapers are to be fair in dealing with government news, should they not be allowed to be fair with their readers with regard to advertised products?

Revenue from advertising is not the bulwark of the independence of the press, as Major Baxter suggests. The bulwark of the independence of the press is the confidence of its readers and it is that confidence which every editor values highly and tries to keep intact, which makes the columns of his newspaper valuable to advertisers. If the newspapers "fall for" government propaganda, how much of the blame must be laid at the door of the very industry of which Major Baxter is such a prominent member? And what is the difference between propaganda for the fetish of a few people—national government—and for a government elected by the will of the people?

Abusing the press is an easy pastime and usually brings applause. We would remind Major Baxter, however, that all the honesty, all the decency, and all the desire for fair and upright dealing, is not confined to the advertising agency business. Editors today are just as desirous of serving the public as they ever were. If Major Baxter will take the trouble to peruse the press of Canada from one end to the other, we believe he will agree with us. Furthermore we would remind Major Baxter that people who earn their living through dealing with newspapers should be chary of undermining the confidence of the public of Canada in its free press. This country is at war today, very largely, because the peoples of two large and powerful European countries are the victims of a controlled press.

The residents of Frankford desire to be incorporated as a village. The population is now close to 900. The matter which was presented before the County Council by Dr. J. N. Simmons, was referred to the proper committee for consideration.

The barn owned by Mr. G. A. B. Gay, situated on his farm in the second concession of Sidney Township, was destroyed by fire early this morning, together with 39 head of cattle, 6 horses, a pig and a number of hens. The barn, which was a fine structure, measured 110 feet in length and 66 feet in width. The silos filled with ensilage were also destroyed.

Torpedoed in the Atlantic

Some time ago I was a passenger on board a large freighter bound for Belfast from Montreal with a cargo of grain; there were nine passengers altogether. The first part of the voyage passed uneventfully, so writes K. E. Halnan in the London Listener. Then one morning, as I was sitting in the saloon after breakfast, I heard somebody running to his cabin and there was a continuous ringing of the ship's bells. The Captain had sighted a submarine about five miles away on the starboard bow, approaching us at full speed.

I rushed to my cabin, put on my mackintosh and lifebelt, stuffed a few of my most treasured possessions in my pockets, and went on deck. There I found the other passengers assembled near the lifeboats. The ship had altered course and the submarine was dead astern visible as a black speck surrounded by large white bow-waves and with dense black smoke pouring from it—evidently German engines as well as British were being driven to their utmost capacity.

With her superior speed the submarine gradually but surely overhauled us and after an hour-and-a-half's chase, the Captain decided to abandon ship. While the boats were being made ready for lowering the bos'n suddenly shouted "He's going to fire," and everyone took cover as we heard the noise of the shell. The shell passed clear of the ship and we resumed our preparations for departure.

During all this time the wireless operator had been at his post, sending out an S.O.S., had got in touch with an American ship, and had been informed that she had altered course and was coming to our rescue. In addition, although we did not know it at the time, the Navy had also got our S.O.S.

The boats were launched and we all got into them. Everyone took at least one extra blanket, as it gets cold at night in open boats and we didn't expect the American ship to reach us for at least 20 hours. After we had rowed a short distance from the ship the submarine came alongside the boat I was in and the Commander spoke to our Captain. The submarine was a modern type, painted a dirty yellowish green except for the conning tower which was dark green, with an armament consisting of a machine gun similar to the Bren gun, and a small gun firing shells weighing a few pounds which we had already seen and heard in action. There were some men on deck and some in the conning tower. All of them were bearded and unshaven, but they looked ordinary decent Germans just carrying out orders.

The Commander ordered us to row alongside, and asked us in perfect English what our cargo was, appeared somewhat disappointed when he found it was grain, told us an American steamer was coming to pick us up, and then gave us a tow to our No. 2 lifeboat which was about 400 yards away. He then cast off our painter and told us he was going off to sink the ship, after which he would come back and give us a tow.

We made fast our No. 2 lifeboat, threw overboard a sea anchor, and stood by to watch events. The submarine partially submerged and went toward the ship, standing off for a little while before finally going alongside, where it remained some considerable time. At the time we abandoned ship, our lunch was practically ready and the saloon laid for lunch, so it wasn't difficult to guess what the submarine's crew were doing all that time.

Meanwhile the lifeboats were rocking about badly in the swell and more and more of the passengers and crew were becoming seasick. After waiting monotonously for some time, we suddenly got the surprise of our lives. In the distance beyond the ship we heard a low hum and saw a dark speck that resolved itself into an airplane. At first we thought it was a trans-Atlantic flying boat, but as it rapidly approached we saw that it was a monoplane of the Fleet Air Arm fully loaded with bombs.

As soon as it came near the ship it dived on to the submarine and released four bombs, which to our hopeful and optimistic eyes appeared to hit the submarine. The submarine crash-dived and the monoplane turned, released three more bombs and then disappeared behind the ship. About 10 minutes later another 'plane of the same type flew over the boats and flashed us a message by signal lamp, help coming.

By this time we were all excited and seasickness was forgotten. Then, just as we had decided that the submarine must have been sunk, she reappeared and again approached our ship. Soon after this the monoplane reappeared and dived towards the submarine. This time the submarine made no attempt to submerge and we heard a crackle of fire as though heavy machine guns were operating.

Soon afterwards six biplanes appeared in sight and circled over the area as if searching for the submarine which had again submerged. Suddenly a tremendous vertical explosion occurred on the starboard side of our ship and immediately the six 'planes swooped down on an area of the sea about half a mile from the ship— swooped down just like a lot of hungry gulls after bread — and dropped many bombs. We could easily see the explosions. Evidently the submarine had torpedoed the ship and the track of the torpedo had given the submarine's position away to the hunting aircraft.

Having completed their task the airplanes flew over the lifeboats, and were wildly cheered by all of us, then went off. Meanwhile our late ship, badly hit by the explosion, began slowly to break up. First the masts slowly canted towards each other, then the funnel gradually sank in the water, then the two boilers exploded one after the other, the bow and stern slowly rose in the water and finally disappeared from view almost touching each other as the ship finally sank from view.

We now saw a slight smoke haze on the horizon and soon we could distinguish the masts of two destroyers approaching us. While the first destroyer that reached us circled round, evidently still seeking the enemy, the second by clever manoeuvring, came to a standstill near enough for us to row alongside and to make fast to lines thrown to us from her deck. We all managed to clamber up the rope ladders without any casualty and once aboard our troubles were over.

Two days later we were landed at a fishing village in the North of Scotland.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

When the school report shows that the majority of school children have some physical defects, parents may be alarmed until they see that 90 percent of these defects are decayed teeth. As there are a number of children who have defects of the teeth, it would be interesting to know how they have preserved their teeth from decay.

Drs. H. G. Miller and D. M. R. Crombie, in The Lancet, London, tell of their endeavor to trace some of the grosser factors causing tooth decay. They examined twenty-five children from 10 to 14 years of age with no decayed teeth, and no history of decay in their permanent teeth, and compared them with an equal number of children showing severe or gross decay of teeth, but similar in other respects.

They found that certain factors seemed to go with freedom from decayed teeth: (a) good family dental history (not so important as good general hygience and diet), (2) careful infant feeding, especially breast feeding and (3) probably above all—absence of severe illness and early appearance of infectious diseases.

There was no difference as far as wealth or income was concerned between the two groups, but a point of importance appeared to be that children with bad teeth were often the younger members of the family, whereas those with good teeth were frequently the first or oldest children.

First, that while it was helpful to have parents who had good teeth, this was not as important as the proper diet and proper health habits of the youngsters themselves. Thus fruits and leafy vegetables and all dairy foods—milk, cream, butter, the protective foods, are of great importance in preventing decay of teeth. Other good health habits affecting the teeth are outdoor play, and proper rest.

Second, that other things being equal, breast feeding is better than artificial feeding.

Third, the absence of severe illness and not having the infectious ailments of children too early, also helped preserve the teeth.

Another important point discovered was that while brushing and cleansing the teeth is and always will be helpful in preserving the teeth, the "protective" diet, plenty of sleep and plenty of the outdoors, is even more important.

A NEW YEAR'S WISH

What shall be my New Year's wish to you?
But a lilting song and a courage true,
With health to pursue the daily task,
In the light of love to live and bask,
To take out of life the best of cheer,
To stand the test with trials near;
To work and play, to love and lift,
And not with the tide to idly drift,
With God to guide the whole year through
Oh! this is my New Year's wish to you.

Prisoner on Graf Spee Tells Experience During Sea Battle

Sydney, N.S., Jan. 29 —(CP)—A prisoner in the brig of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee told in a letter to a friend of the bottle with three British cruisers off Montevideo last month.

The writer was Neil G. MacDonald, wireless operator on the freighter Streonshalh which was sunk Dec. 7, 1939 by the Graf Spee. With the rest of the crew he was taken prisoner.

MacDonald said in his letter to Mrs. E. S. Harrington, "We were thankful to escape with our lives" when he described the engagement with the cruisers.

"It was a terrifying experience," he wrote, it wasn't so much the fear of sudden death as the horror of drowning like rats should she (the Graf Spee) have been sunk, which bothered us most.

"The fight went on from early morning at intervals until approximately 11 p.m., and several big shells smashed through compartments on both sides of us, but we were not harmed."

MacDonald said there were sixty-one men locked up between the Graf Spee's decks. "One shell burst the ship's water supply tank directly over us," he wrote, "and water started to rush into our room through ventilators."

He told how one of their guards was killed by a shell and another wounded. MacDonald formerly visited Sydney as a wirelessman on a Dominion Steel and Corporation Collier.

Tactful, Frugal Greek Dictator Slaves at Post

Athens (CP)—War in Europe, an international situation requiring a strong hand and concerted public opinion have etched in clearer outline John Metaxas, Prime Minister, Foreign Minister, Minister of War, Marines, Air and Education—dictator of Greece.

And yet the 68-year-old Metaxas is unique among European dictators. He is not a popular hero, in the ordinary sense of the word. He has no outwardly dynamic quality. He does not look like a dictator, and in a crowd you would never notice him. He has no interest in public spectacle; makes no impassioned speeches.

A military genius, he never wears a military uniform. He is hard-headed, practical, frugal; an organizer, a patriot, with determination to see his ideas carried through.

Since Aug. 4, 1936, when he directed the coup d'etat that gave Greece an authoritarian regime, there has been no disputing the position of General Metaxas in Greece.

He has the backing of a highly efficient secret police, and the support of the Greek army.

The last show of open opposition against Metaxas died in February, 1938, when a number of party leaders were banished.

Metaxas is carrying out a wide program of social legislation, public works, and national discipline, and he slaves at it. There has been land reclamation, new roads, greater industrial activity, higher wages, and a better standard of living.

On the other hand, higher taxation and higher costs of living must be considered, while rearmament, social legislation and a heavily increased police force have cut deep into the national revenue.

Foreign Relations

As regards Greek foreign relations, Metaxas has achieved notable successes. He set out to improve Greek-Turkish relations and succeeded. Through vigorous defence measures, Greece is in a much better position militarily. Relations with Italy are improving and the British guarantee did much to soothe the fears of the Greeks.

General Metaxas was in the past regarded "pro-German." He has repudiated any such sympathies, pointing out that Greece, with Germany her most important market for tobacco, hardly can afford to ignore the Third Reich. And there is no question but what Greek public opinion is strongly pro-British.

With the present war in Europe there are new problems for Greece, not the least the threatening problems of national economy with the disruption of the German market and trade.

His pictures appear everywhere side by side with that of King George, but one can detect no trace of personal vanity in the man, who at a reception, can usually be found in a quiet corner talking about his plans.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Only a few of the many tricks for which the air forces of the warring nations are trained have been displayed in the war so far.

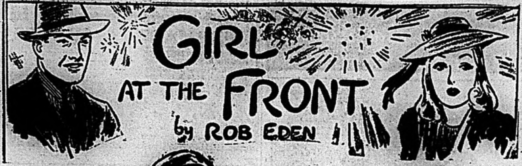
Saturday a German plane attacked a column of French trucks with machine gun fire. This is one of the jobs the army co-operation squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force is being trained to perform.

Almost daily for the past week the pilots and gunners of the squadron have been practising their aims by firing at targets on the ice of Lake Deschenes, just west of Ottawa.

Aircraft as a weapon against ground troops, particularly their supply columns, became a factor of some importance toward the end of the First Great War. The Germans used their air force with effect in this way during the Polish campaign.

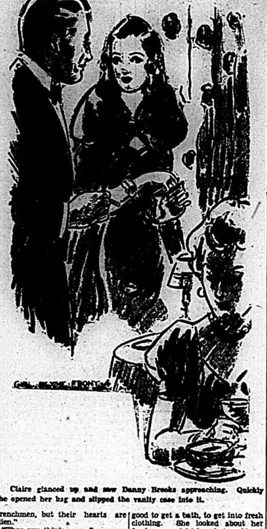
The fact that Saturday's attack is the first of its kind reported on the western front is just another indication of the defensive character of the war being waged there. When and if an offensive starts both sides will use their aircraft extensively in this kind of fighting. It is one of the prime functions of army co-operation squadrons.

No damage was done by the lone German plane and it escaped three British planes which rose to attack it. But aircraft attacking columns of trucks in this war will be engaging in a risky business. Mobile anti-aircraft units will travel with the columns and in order to make their fire effective the airmen will have to come down within range of the anti-aircraft guns, mounted on trucks in the column and manned by skilled marksmen.



GIRL AT THE FRONT

by ROB EDEN



Claire glanced up and saw Danny Brooks approaching. Quickly she opened her bag and slipped the vanity case into it.

CHAPTER THREE

Another Disappearance

Claire was aroused from the rosy dreams of romance only after Pierre Bornet had spoken to her twice. The second time a bit sharply.

"Did you say something?"

"Did I say something!" the little Frenchman spluttered. "I all but shouted. I asked you to give me that paper—I shall examine it for prints, for fingerprints, for some clue that may perhaps lead us to M. Cameron."

"I doubt if you'll find anything," the girl said still clinging to the paper. "It is Bill's—Mr. Cameron's handwriting. I can swear to that. I've seen his writing so much, I would recognize it anywhere."

"Then it is meaningless," Bornet shrugged, his hands waving expressively.

"Meaningless to you, perhaps," Claire thought to herself. "But it means everything to me. Claire, he wrote. Not Miss Dutton, as tho' he had started a note of instruction about something."

Aloud she said, "then I may keep the paper?"

"Keep it? Of course, if you wish. It is of no value since you have identified it as your employer's handwriting. I shall look further. Perhaps the maid, when she cleared, overlooked something that may give us a real clue."

Claire was curious.

"Just what do you expect to find, Mr. Bornet?" she asked.

"I don't know. I was hoping there might be something here — that he might have had some intimation of being spied upon. That he might have left a message of some sort to give us a hint as to where he has gone. But I'm afraid it is a vain hope."

"Then you believe he may be in danger?"

"I see no other explanation. Surely, if there had been anything that came up to change his plans, he would have sent word to you. He would have telegraphed to you at the boat. He would have notified the Ministry of War, which was providing a plane to transport him to the harbor. He would have done that, wouldn't he?"

"Yes, I'm sure he would if he had the chance. He is always very considerate. If he knew some one were waiting for him and he were delayed, he would find some means of letting them know, if it were humanly possible."

"I thought so. I'm afraid then, Mademoiselle, that there is little hope for M. Cameron. We may learn what has happened to him, but I doubt it."

"What do you mean? What can have happened? He can't have vanished from Paris without leaving some trace? We must keep on searching! I know he's alive, somewhere. I feel it!"

Bornet rubber his small nose nervously.

"You must understand, Mademoiselle that many things might have happened. This is wartime. Paris is a hotbed of espionage, although we are working as fast as we can to stamp it out. Already, thousands of spies have been put under arrest. Placed in detention camps, under heavy guard so that it will be impossible for them to communicate with friends. But there are still many at large, I'm afraid."

"But the French people are so distinctive," Claire protested. "I should think it would be almost impossible for a German to masquerade as French. They have none of the French mannerisms, characteristics."

"You forget the border lands, Mademoiselle. Thousands in those provinces for generations have been raised as French people, but at bottom they are of other sympathies. They speak the language perfectly. They have taken on all our national characteristics. It is impossible to detect them, unless we manage to catch them red-handed, or unless some one denounces them to us."

Bornet sighed, and then went on. "In the last war, they did incalculable damage to France. Many of them were ferreted out, but many never were caught, even after more than four years of the closest counter-espionage. They are clever — devilishly clever. They think like Frenchmen, but their hearts are alien."

"Then you think . . . "

"I think that your M. Cameron has been engaged in a very delicate mission of some sort," Bornet interrupted. "It may very possibly have an important bearing upon the attitude of your country toward the war. It is quite possible that his mission was discovered. There are spies, you know, even in the inner circles. We have them, too. We rely quite heavily upon them at times. What I think is that M. Cameron's mission was discovered. Somehow, he was trapped as he left the hotel here. Kidnapped, perhaps. Carried away to some secret place. Perhaps disposed of."

"What can we do, then?" the girl demanded, desperately. "Surely, there is something."

"The situation will have to be handled very delicately. America is not at war, you know. We must be careful not to reveal anything which might give any one proof that your country is other than a neutral. It might be too costly for us—to our allies—to America. But I talk too much. I shall make more enquiries here in the hotel and then I must report to my superiors. This is a case that may prove to have great international complications."

Despondently Claire accompanied the detective downstairs. She was with him when he closely questioned the clerk at the desk. All they were able to learn was what they already knew, substantially. Cameron had checked out at about ten o'clock. He had left orders, if any mail came, to forward it to the American Embassy. The old porter, who also served as doorman now that so many of the younger employees had been called to join their regiments, remembered that M. Cameron had stepped out to the curb when he left the hotel and hailed a taxi which was standing a few doors up the street. It came up, and he stepped in and was driven away. That was the last he had seen of him.

No, he didn't recall seeing any one else in the cab besides the driver. He did remember that the cab drove hurriedly away as soon as the American gentleman stepped inside.

"You see, Mademoiselle?" Bornet said. "Everywhere, we get just so far and then we find a blank wall."

She nodded, hopelessly, and after again vainly urging her to take advantage of the chance to return to America on the warship, the detective left the hotel after exacting a promise from her to phone immediately if she learned anything.

Claire entered the self-operatin elevator, pressed the button and a minute later stepped out on the third floor. In anothr moment she was in her room, and clicked on the light as it now was quite dark outside.

She had a feeling something was wrong, and glanced quickly into the clothes closet in her rooms, and then into the adjoining bath. Both were empty. Then she turned to unpack her bags, chiding herself for her nervousness. It would be good to get a bath, to get into fresh clothing. She looked about her for her overnight bag, but could not immediately find it. Perhaps the porter had placed it in the closet.

A search there failed to reveal it. It was nowhere in either room. It had vanished—the bag which exactly matched the one that had been added to her baggage on board the St. Croix!

In a panic, she grabbed up the phone and asked to be connected with the porter. Yes, he rememberered her bags — he had carried them up himself as Alphonse was busy elsewhere. Yes, there had been four of them. He had placed them on the rack by the window—all four of them.

She thanked him and rang for the chambermaid, nervously pacing the floor until the middle-aged servant appeared.

"You rang, Mademoiselle?" she asked when Clarie opened the door.

"Have you been on this floor for some time?" the girl demanded.

"All afternoon, Mademoiselle. Is there something wrong?"

"Did you see any one enter my room during the last half hour — while I was absent?"

"But no, Mademoiselle. I did not. But I was not in this corridor all the time. I had my work to do in the other wing—we are so short-handed, you know, because of the war. Many women have taken men's jobs and we have so much more to do. I am worn out from work, but I do it willingly. It is for France."

"You're certain you didn't see any strange person near my door?"

"But, no, Mademoiselle. I did not. Has something happened?"

"No. Thank you," Claire dismissed her, and turned the key in the lock as the woman left.

Bornet was right. He had not been exaggerating when he told her about spies. That they were everywhere.

One of them must have slipped into her room during her absence and stolen her bag, thinking it was the one that contained the incendiary powder!

CHAPTER 4

The Mysterious "Z. Y."

After the first feeling of panic had passed, Claire sat down and forced herself to take stock of the situation.

That she was in danger, there was little doubt. When those who had attempted to make her the instrument of destroying the great ocean liner St. Croix discovered that she knew of the treachery, they undoubtedly would make some new attempt against her.

The Surete Generale, she knew, was a famous organization—one of the most efficent secret services in the world—but it was not very reassuring to have one of its chiefs, Pierre Bornet, tell her that even they did not know many of the spy rings actively operating in France.

There was the added worry about Bill Cameron. Where was he? What had happened to him? She could not bring herself to believe what Bornet so obviously did—that Cameron had been done away with by those who had prevented his sailing to America. That would be too horrible—too horrible, even to think about.

Danny Brooks! The name popped into her mind. Danny was a wire service correspondent who had known Cameron for years. Through her employer she had met him frequently during their stay in Paris. She had gone out with him several times to shows and night clubs.

In a few moments, she had him on the telephone and was hearing his surprised exclamation to learn she was back in Paris.

"I can't explain over the phone, Danny," she told him. "But I've got to see you some time this evening."

He suggested dinner and said he would be able to make it about eight o'clock. The appointment was made for the Rond-Point des Champs-Elysees at that hour. Claire was to meet him there.

She congratulated herself as she put down the phone. Danny might have heard something from Cameron—might have some confidential information that would solve the mystery of his sudden dissappearance. At any rate, he could help her.

She walked to the window and pulled back the heavy black draperies that shrouded them. They had been put up at the first alarm of war at the same time that the windows were painted dark blue and diagonal strips of heavy tape were stuck at the glass. There was a theory that in case of bombs dropping close by, the tape would lessen the danger of the glass shattering.

She turned out the light and opened the window, looking down on the Rue de Rivoli. She could hear the swish of tires as cars moved along, but aside from tiny specks of light from their hooded headlights, could see nothing of them. Across the street were the Tuileries, the beautiful gardens now enshrouded in inky blackness.

Leaning out, she looked toward the Place de la Concorde. Usually at this hour of night in peacetime Paris, the huge fountains would be brilliantly lighted and the water would be cascading down sculptured edges in a never-ending golden shower. Now, even the water was turned off as an economy measure, and there wasn't a shred of light.

Farther to the west where the Eifel Tower ordinarily was outlined in flashing electric bulbs to the very tip of its more than 900 feet of delicate steel framework, she could see nothing. The tower, she knew, was there but it might as well not have existed so far as her senses were concerned. Even the usual red light at the top, a warning to cruising planes, was missing now. No French planes would be circling in that area. If enemy planes should happen to collide with it—well, it was the fortune of war.

She carefully closed the window, pulled the curtain and then switched on the light. It was later than she thought. She'd have to hurry. While her bath was running, she unpacked her bags and laid out fresh clothes for the evening. Her gowns were wrinkled, but she had no time now to have one of them pressed. The black one she chose would have to do, even it was a bit wrinkled.

By a quarter to eight, she was standing in the darkness at the front entrance of the hotel waiting for a cab, her gas mask—which she had fortunately been able to reclaim from the desk, as it had not yet been given away—slung by its strap over one shoulder.

A car drew up at the curb, and from the tiny light on the meter she recognized it as a cab and stepped forward. As she did so a dark shadow loomed before her, and she drew back, startled—a bit frightened.

"I beg your pardon, Mademoiselle," a man said. "I've been waiting some time for a cab." His voice was soft but vibrant, and despite the fact that he spoke in French, Claire detected the trace of an accent, unmistakably American.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said, in English.

"That's quite all right." The man answered in English, also. "You're American, aren't you?" Without giving her a chance to reply, he went on, quickly, "So am I— from Indiana. Perhaps I can give you a lift? I'm not going very far, but I never would find my way on foot in the dark."

"You're very kind," Claire answered, impulsively, "As a matter of fact I'm afraid I'll be late for an appointment. I'm going to the Rond-Point."

"Fine. Then jump in. I'm getting off sooner than that, and you can take the cab on to your engagement."

Somehow, despite Bornet's stories of spies and the dangers of Paris after dark, Claire hadn't the slightest fear of her unknown acquaintance. There was something in his voice, a reassuring quality, that drove all thoughts of danger from her mind.

"Thanks," she answered. "That's very good of you."

She sensed, rather than saw him step quickly forward and open the back door of the cab and she fearlessly entered and seated herself. The man spoke to the driver in a low tone—she didn't catch what he said—and a moment later she felt him settle himself beside her as the door of the car was slammed shut.

"Care for a cigarette?" the man asked. She thanked him, and declined, but urged him to smoke if he wished. She caught but a glimpse of his nose and mouth as he touched a flameless lighter to his cigarette and then she saw the end of it glowing in the darkness, followed by a sigh of evident satisfaction as he inhaled deeply.

"Been dying for a smoke," he said, "but I didn't dare light up out in the street."

They rode in silence for several blocks, the cab moving slowly, carefully, as the driver picked his way through the darkness.

"I know you're worried about Bill Cameron," the man at Claire's side said, suddenly, and she almost jumped out of her seat.

"Wha—what?" she stammered.

"Cameron," he repeated. "I know you're worried—wondering what has happened to him." His voice was low, tense. Through the glass partition separating them from the driver, it couldn't have been more than a mere murmur.

"Don't worry about him," the voice went on. "He is alive. I know that much, but I can't tell you any more now."

"But—but how do you know—how do you know who I am?" she demanded, a feeling of panic sweeping over her.

"I know—lots of things, Miss Dutton," the voice said. "I even know whom you will meet tonight. And I must warn you to be on your guard."

"Why, what do you mean? I'm meeting only one person—a good friend."

"I mean just that. You will meet more than one person — several. Some will be your friends—others will not. That is why I say you must be careful. Be on your guard every minute."

"Who—who are you?"

"Never mind. You may find out soon enough, but I can't tell you now."

She heard the glass panel between them and the driver's compartment slid back, and the man's voice call to the driver to stop.

"I'm leaving here, Miss Dutton", he said. "Remember what I told you."

She felt his hand suddenly groping and finding hers in the dark, and then a small round object pressed into her palm as the car slowed and came to a stop.

She heard the door open and close, the murmur of a voice, and a moment later the car started up again. Before she had time to wonder what it was all about, the cab stopped again and the driver had opened the door for her.

"The Rond-Point, Mademoiselle" he said.

She stepped out and fished in her purse for a note to pay him, but as she stood on the curb the taxicab pulled away. Apparently her mysterious fellow passenger had paid the fare.

Claire walked slowly across the sidewalk. A small blue light was her only guide and finally she found the door, swung it back, pushed through several thickness of heavy drapery and was all but blinded by the lights of the cafe. They were not bright, but seemed so after the complete darkness outside.

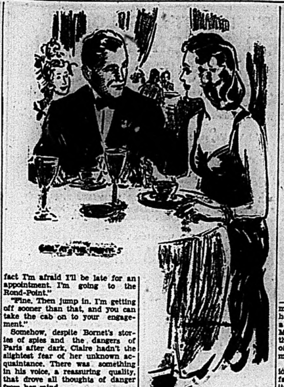
She glanced at the small object in her hand and uttered an exclamation. It was a vanity case—one she remembered as having been in her stolen dressing case.

"This is a little souvenir of Paris," he had said. She snapped open the lid, and saw a small card. Printed in the centre were merely the initials "Z.Y."—nothing more. She turned it over, but there was no mark on the other side.

Claire glanced up and saw Danny Brooks approaching. Quickly she opened her bag and slipped the vanity case into it.

CHAPTER 5

Suspicions and Lip Reading



Claire asked Danny about the four people she had just met. She was still plagued by the warning from her companion in the cab.

Claire smiled up at Danny Brooks and extended her hand in greeting. She liked Danny, and she thought again as she met him how perfectly he fitted into the picture she always had had of what a foreign correspondent should look like.

Suave in manner, handsome, although a bit florid of face, his well-tailored figure was one that would attract attention any place.

"Claire!" he exclaimed. "How nice to see you. I thought by now you'd be well headed for home."

"So did I," she answered, with a little laugh. "But I lost my boss some place, and I couldn't very well go home and leave him here, could I?"

Brooks piloted her toward the bar at the side of the room, and before she had had a chance to explain what had happened to Cameron, he was introducing her to several people she had never seen before.

"I want you to meet some friends of mine, Claire," he said. "This is Maria Herczek—and Julie Roland." Claire nodded and smiled, and glanced quickly at the women, but before she could make up her mind about them Danny was presenting her to George Roland and Captain Rene Martin. Roland enclosed her hand in a hearty clasp and murmured "Pleased to meetcha," and the Frenchman, when his turn came, bowed from the waist and brushed the back of her hand with his lips.

Captain Martin was in uniform, and Claire noted the gold wings pinned to the left breast of his coat which indicated he was an aviator.

There was a murmur of polite conversation for several minutes while Danny ordered drinks all around. Claire declined anything stronger than a limeade and tried to size up her companions as she slowly sipped the cooling mixture.

Maria Herczek was a striking-looking girl, smartly gowned and wearing her natural blonde hair in a chic coiffure that bore the stamp of Antoine as clearly as though it were labelled.

With high cheek bones and wide-set greenish eyes, she hardly needed her name to reveal her Slavic origin. "Exotic" was the descriptive word Claire found clinging, unuttered, to her lips. "Charming" was another that flashed into her mind.

Julie Roland very definitely was American although Claire could see the signs of hours spent in beauty salons and expensive dressmaking establishment reflected in her appearance. Her beauty was of a fresher variety than that of Maria; a naturalness shown through the expert manipulations of an artiste who specialized in make-up.

Her husband presented a curious contradiction of Mid-Western farm background and cosmopolitan polish. His accent, if anything, she thought, was a trifle too broad for Middle West and somehow Claire got an idea that perhaps it was a bit forced. He looked like any one of a thousand Americans she had known—prosperous business men in their late thirties, growing thicker through the middle as their hair grew thinner. She was amazed and scarcely believing when she was told later that he had been in business in Paris for fifteen years. An importer, who handled goods from all countries, but particularly known for his excellent stock of delicate Dresdens.

As the waves of conversation rolled up and about her, Claire dropped in an occasional word and devoted herself to her innocuous drink. Captain Martin reminded her somewhat of Maurice Chevalier, although he was smaller in stature and not quite so exaggerated in feature. He had the same wide mouth, inclined to curl a bit as he smiled, and small eyes that could dance merrily one moment and be deadly serious, with a steel-like quality, the next. As a friend, he would be charming, but Claire shivered slightly when she thought of him as an enemy. He could be merciless, deadly.

She examined her new acquaintances with different eyes than she might have, did she not remember the warning her mysterious companion "Z. Y." had voiced in the taxicab.

"You will meet several people tonight," he had said. "Some will be friends—some enemies."

Were these the people he had meant? How could he have known she was going to meet any one, even Danny? Who was he? How had he come into possession of the vanity case which had been in her vanished bag?

She shook her head despondently. It was too much of a puzzle for her. Did he mean that Maria Herczek would be an enemy to her? Or Julie Roland, or her husband George? Certainly he couldn't have meant Captain Martin or Danny!

Her thoughts were interrupted by Danny Brooks demanding to know if she'd rather have another drink or some food. She realized suddenly that she was hungry — that she hadn't eaten since morning, and there was nothing feigned about her enthusiasm in favor of food.

Danny made a smooth excuse—some private business to discuss with her—and they excused themselves. A few minutes later, from their secluded small table, she saw the others follow a waiter captain to a larger table at the other side of the room.

After they had ordered, Claire asked Danny about the four people she had just met. She was still plagued by the warning from her companion in the cab.

"Rene and Maria I have known for some time," the correspondent answered. "Maria is a Russian, as you probably guessed from her appearance and her name. She is a designer for Gorelle, the famous dressmaker, you know. And she has done some very nice water colors, too. Landscapes, mostly."

"Captain Martin obviously is in the army," she suggested. "A professional soldier?"

Danny laughed, condescendingly. "I'm afraid you'd make a poor detective, Claire," he chuckled. "Rather, he is a career man. He was a brilliant under official in the Ministry of War before all this business started in Poland. He undoubtedly was headed for the Cabinet. But the day war began, he resigned and joined the army—at his reserve rank as a captain of aviation."

"He seems quite charming."

"All of that. He and Maria have been in love for several years—ever since I've known them. They are nice people."

"Who are the Rolands?"

"I know little about them. I met them tonight for the first time. Rene told me he was an American—an importer who has had a shop just off the Rue de la Paix for years—fifteen, I think he said. His wife obviously is an American, considerably younger than he."

"Do you mean you think Roland may not be American? Why, his accent is unmistakable. I'd say Middle West."

"Most any one would. That's what makes me a bit skeptical. Fifteen years in Paris, and still 'Pleased to meetcha' business somehow just doesn't match up."

He laughed, and buttered a piece of bread before he went on.

"That's what the newspaper business does to you, Claire," he grinned. "You get so you're never quite willing to accept any one at face value. I'm quite sure the Rolands must be everything they seem and pretend to be. They're apparently friends of Maria and Rene, and that's godd enough for me."

Y. W. Guild Studies Principles of Democracy

The regular meeting of the Young Women's Guild was held at the home of Mrs. Archibald, Dufferin Street.

The subject under discussion was "Democracy in our Times".

The discussion was under the leadership of Miss J. Tickell who was ably assisted by various members who in turn spoke on the different phases of Democracy.

Miss Tickell introduced the subject by quoting Sir E. D. Simon's summing up of the question "What is Democracy?" In a true democracy (1) the citizens love peace and freedom; (2) justice and truth are tolerant and kindly; (3) the citizens have a sense of public responsibility and friendly co-operation: (4) they demand political, social and economic equality".

Democracy is supported by four pillars (1) freedom of religion; (2) freedom of speech; (3 freedom of the press; (4) freedom of Assembly; and if one of these pillars should fall, liberty is destroyed. Under freedom of the press it was brought out that during war time censorship was necessary to keep valuable information from the enemy—not to keep relevant truth from people at home.

Freedom of Speech—Voltaire was quoted as saying:—"I disapprove heartily of what you say but I defend to the death your right to say it". This has always been accepted as a British right".

Under the Freedom of Assembly the question of the Public Meeting and Processions Act of 1939, was briefly touched upon and it was brought out that different methods are required during war time, than during peace time.

Freedom of Religion— Each Christian has a definite responsibility to be zealous in his religion so that there may never be a danger of any one sect of people becoming too dominant.

Democracy cannot win by a purely defensive campaign. Its strength lies in devotion to public welfare: in a steady movement towards the elimination of poverty, ignorance and oppression. The cure for the evils of democracy is more democracy. An effort to make democracy function so that no other system has any appeal to a people.

Cheese and Egg Dishes

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

CHEESE AND EGG dishes are ideal for luncheon, supper and just snacks. No good cook can ever have too many of them. Here are some that you might like to try, maybe during Lent.

Egg Curry is made with two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, teaspoon curry powder, one-eighth teaspoon paprika, one-half tablespoon finely-chopped onion, one-half teaspoon salt, one and one third cups scalded milk, four hard-boiled eggs and one cup cooked rice. Cream butter and flour. Add curry powder, paprika, chopped onion and salt. Stir well, add the scalded milk and cook until mixture thickens. Chop the egg whites and add them with the cooked rice to the above mixture. Serve in patty shells and garnish with the chopped egg yolks.

Cheese Delight requires one-half cup grated American cheese, one and one-half tablespoons melted butter, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, three eggs, two teaspoons prepared mustard. Mix grated cheese, butter, salt and paprika. Beat eggs until light, add mustard and pour into the cheese mixture. Cook in double boiler, stirring constantly until the mixture is smooth and creamy. Serve on hot toast points garnished with paprika.

Instead of Potatoes

Cheese Fritters substitute for potatoes. Make them with one cup cooked rice, one egg, one-fourth cup milk, one-half cup grated American cheese, two teaspoons prepared mustard, one-fourth teaspoon salt, buttered cracker crumbs and one-fourth teaspoon paprika. Mix the rice thoroughly with the beaten egg milk, grated cheese and seasonings. Shape into balls, roll in buttered cracker crumbs and fry in deep fat.

A reader sends a recipe for hominy and tomatoes that is excellent. For four servings, use one tablespoon butter (melted), tablespoon flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup evaporated milk, four medium-sized tomatoes, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, tablespoon sugar, pepper, tablespoon sugar, one-one-fourth cup drained canned hominy and one-half cup grated cheese. Make a sauce by blending butter, flour, salt, adding milk, and cooking a few minutes until thick and smooth. Scoop out the tomatoes and sprinkle inside with salt, pepper and sugar. Mix hominy with the sauce. Fill tomatoes with hominy mixture and sprinkle with cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (350 F.) for 15 minutes.

AT THE McCARTHY

"A Girl Must Live"

The eagerly awaited comedy production "A Girl Must Live" featuring Margaret Lockwood, Naunton Wayne, Mary Clare and that famous old trouper of the stage success "The Bing Boys Are Here", George Robey, is now on the McCarthy theatre screen.

Rated five stars by Roly Young of the Globe and Mail, Toronto, and five bells by Jimmie Fiddler, "A Girl Must Live" is also spoken of as leading candidate for the Funniest Picture of 1940.

Manager Freeman of the McCarthy theatre has received a letter from the distributers in Canada of "A Girl Must Live," Empire-Universal Films Limited, stating that The McCarthy Theatre is the second theatre in North America to present the picture and that at the same time that the picture is shown at the McCarthy Theatre, it begins its fifth week at the Eglinton theatre, Toronto, breaking all previous house records for attendance and that the end of the engagement is not yet in sight.

An excellent program of short subjects precedes each presentation of the above and in our honest estimation the entire two hours entertainment is one of the best moviegoers of the city and district have or will enjoy for a long time to come.

AT THE CAPITOL

"We Are Not Alone"

The new Paul Muni starring picture "We Are Not Alone", adapted from the best-selling novel by James Hilton, author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," is now having its local premiere at the Capitol theatre. Produced by Warner Bros., and directed by Edmund Goulding, whose most recent work was "The Old Maid" earlier in the season, "We Are Not Alone" has received unanimous acclaim from all the critics who previewed it in Hollywood.

Muni's role is a complete departure from the historical biographies he has done in the past several years. In "We Are Not Alone" he plays a modern, fictional character, a small town English doctor, who serves his patients with compassion and skill but is completely unable to remedy the pain in his own life. The film tells the story of his neither happy nor melancholy life in a little cathedral town, and of how the pattern of that life was shattered by his summons to attend a little Austrian dancer in a down-at-the-heel stock company. The story of the linked fates of these two is one of love, jealousy, passion and enduring faith.

Appearing with him in the role of the dancer is Jane Bryan, brilliant young dramatic actress whose performance in "The Old Maid" won her the role opposite Muni. Flora Robson, noted British screen star, is cast as his cold and unsympathetic wife, and young Raymond Severn plays their little son. Others in the notable supporting cast include Una O'Connor, Henry Daniell, Montagu Love, James Stephenson, Ely Malyon and a score of others.

Hilton and Milton Krims wrote the screen play based on Hilton's novel, and Max Steiner wrote the sympathetic musical score which accompanies the film.

AT THE BELLE

Nelson Eddy "Balalaika"

Music lovers, regardless of their tastes, have a treat in store for them at the Belle Theatre where "Balalaika," the new musical starring Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey is now playing. It is a brilliant production musically and dramatically and serves as an excellent vehicle with which to introduce Miss Massey, Hollwood's newest singing star. As for Nelson Eddy, it is probably his most important picture to date. "Balalaika" based on the London musical stage success of the same name by Eric Maschwitz, is a story of old Russia before, during and after the revolution. It is colorful, gay at times and intensely dramatic at others. Romantically, it concerns the love of a colonel of the Cossacks and the daughter of a revolutionist, who are separated by world upheaval only to meet again on common ground as exiles in Paris and plight their troth.

Musically, "Balalaika" offers a great variety of song numbers. Miss Massey's "Tanya" is bound to be a hit. Her voice also is given effective opportunity in "At the Balalaika" and in an operatic version of Rimsky-Korsakoy's dance suite, "Scheherezade." The love duet, "Magic of Your Love," is a lovely composition of Franz Lehar. Eddy probably never has had such a scope to cover in song. "Flow, Flow, White Wine," "Ride Cossack Ride," and "Volga Boat Song" are from a wide range of music schools, including Russian folk music, light opera and the modern trend.

One of Eddy's most effective musical scenes is a reenactment of a dramatic incident of the world war when Russian and Austrian troops faced each other across No Man's Land on Christmas Eve and joined in singing "Holy Night." Eddy sings the hymn with a chorus of one hundred male voices.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Substitute Daughters

Do you remember when the older members of the family first began to be shamefacedly age-conscious?

I think it was when a certain university professor declared that at forty a man's usefulness began to decline. This wasn't really true, of course, but stalwart breadwinners of 41 or so, all over the country began right away to lose their courage and their appetites and to feel that it was all over.

A little later, somebody discovered that there were savage tribes whose older people were killed off as a mere matter of routine. And that information wasn't any too heartwarming.

Then sons and daughters began cheerfully to throw off the shackles of parental authority and took family matters into their own hands. So that before long, nobody over 25 seemed to have much spirit any more.

But I now have to announce that youth has considerably relented. It's been discovered that parents are people, after all — aunts and uncles likewise — and a sweet, homey, old-fashioned family feeling is beginning to show itself again. I'm hoping that in consequence the lonely, troubled look will disappear from many elderly faces.

Although kindness seems to be guiding so many youthful hearts at this moment, two young women in particular have felt so strongly an affection and responsibility toward their elders in general, that they have organized their expression of these feelings.

These two Vassar graduates who live in New York, Miss Large and Miss Stabler, aren't going to let any widowed mothers or solitary aunts who may be bravely living on their own in the city spend a forlorn winter if they can help it.

And how can they help it?

Well, there are lots of ways in which pleasure can be given to elderly women.

First, by making sure that news comes frequently enough from beloved absent sons and daughters, nieces and nephews. This requires machinery, but it can be done.

Then, by bringing congenial women together, perhaps the best of all services. Or by organizing bridge clubs for groups of four or more women. Or book-clubs, if they have cards.

Or, by getting up a few little informal tea-parties, where the fragrance of the tea and the shine of the fire-light and a few notes played on the piano, can do so much to take away the sting of loneliness—perhaps even start the remaking of a life or two.

This Service to Seniors, as it is called, doesn't overlook more practical things. The Vassar girls see that their elderly friends' shopping gets done, and done sympathetically — not coldly, as a mere chore. This shopping has heart in it.

Most of all, perhaps, these daughter-substitutes know that they can help by a mere human coming together of the older woman and the younger one, an intimately real contact. They believe it's worth while if they can replace, if for a moment only, a treasured lost relationship .... Of course, such a moment of love and sympathy counts for far more with a hungry heart than a hundred mere distractions.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Notes of Congratulation Should Be Answered

If you receive any type of message of congratulations or good wishes, the chapter of politeness isn't closed until you send a note of appreciation of this thoughtful attention.

Your friend's kind words may be to send good wishes for your birthday, your engagement, your marriage, your wedding anniversary or for any other of the milestones of your life. They may be words of congratulation on your new business position or promotion, or on how well you sang at a concert, or what a good talk you made at your club meeting, or what fine work you did on a committee, or on any other achievement.

It's a delight to receive words of approval or best wishes on these occasions from our friends. And courtesy demands that we write to tell our friends how happy their words of felicitation or approval have made us.

Stepmother

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Several of my friends and I have been discussing whether or not it is proper to call a stepmother "Mother" or "Mamma", or to call her by her first name: that is, providing one is over twenty-one.

In my opinion it would be proper for small children to call a stepmother "Mother" or "Mamma", but I cannot see why it is proper for a person in her twenties to do this. My mother died five years ago, and two years later my father married again. I am a girl of twenty-one, and it is hard for me to call my stepmother "Mother" I may be entirely wrong about this, but I just can't call another woman "Mother." Will you please advise me, Mrs. Beeckman?

Twenty-one

-You are completely right in everything you say in your letter, and you are completely right in your natural reactions and preferences concerning using the name "Mother" to a stepmother, no matter how dear to you or no matter how admirable. You are grown-up, and therefore it is your right to make this decision about your use of this word.

Have you talked over this name-problem of yours with your stepmother or with your father? Most step-parents of grown-up daughters and sons choose to be called by their first names. If this seems inappropriate to you or to her or to your father (as, for instance, it might be if she is not young), then it might be best to adopt the useful title of Aunt before her first name. Sometimes there is an effectionate name-abbreviation or nickname that can be chosen .... if so, this is a perfect solution.

Courtesy Tip

If you are introducing a person who has an unusual or a difficult name, make a special effort to pronounce it distinctly.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Better Children

I am convinced that the greatest advance medical science is making is not in the development of new techniques in surgery or of new pharmaceutical cures. It is the exploration work, the patient observation and testing, that is showing us what habits of eating, sleeping, resting, exercising — in brief, of living — will keep persons healthy. Thanks to this work, every M. D. is prepared today to guide you and your child into a healthier way of living. And next to the exploration itself, nothing is more important than the work doctors are doing in spreading this knowledge.

I know of no adage truer than that an ounce of prevention beats a pound of cure. I always want to emphasize one credo in these columns. If our children get the proper exercise, the proper rest, the proper food; if they adhere to a few simple but necessary "dos" and "don'ts" about personal habits, they will have systems immune to most attacks of disease and capable of recovering quickly from the others.

In the United States you are very fortunate, indeed. There are so many agencies all over the land ready to help parents who seek information about the proper upbringing of their children and the safeguarding of their health. You have the very best scientific information in the world at your command, and if you are poor, you can get this information and help free. In the United States, too, food is abundant and cheap enough for everyone to have the proper diet. You have the greatest opportunity of any people on earth to give your children the most priceless of gifts—good health.

We have in the health enjoyed by the Dionne Quintuplets an example of what preventive medicine can accomplish. My advice to parents is to place their child in a family doctor's care before the child gets sick. Have the doctor see the child at regular intervals, as often as the doctor may think necessary. When he gives you advice and instructions, try to do just what he says. The greatest help you can give your doctor in keeping your children healthy is to have faith in him.

The doctor will work as hard to keep persons well as he will to cure them when they become sick, and most general practitioners will give the same service whether they are paid for it or not. Doctors work for many families who can never pay them. I know of doctors who have served families for years, bringing baby after baby into the world and attended all them, and never expected to get a cent in return. A doctor gets the feeling that if he helps a child on the way to health, this more than makes up for the fee he doesn't get.

One great drawback to my own practice has been the disposition of people out in a country district like mine to neglect to call a doctor until a child is really sick. For thirty years I have tried to show them that I or any other doctor can be more valuable to them and their families if given as much chance to prevent illness as to cure it.

Superstitions often cause parents to neglect symptoms that would be significant to a physician. For example, parents sometimes speak of "growing pains." There isn't any such thing. What the parents may regard lightly as "growing pains" in children, may be rheumatism or something worse.

To keep a child well, a doctor must see it regularly. Parents should make it a rule to take each child to the doctor's office at planned intervals for checkups. There is no question of the great value of periodic health examinations for everybody.

All Rumanian Oil Companies Must Turn Over 'Certain Amount' Of Oil to Gov't Says Oil Dictator

Bucharest, Jan. 29—(AP)—Gheron Netta newly appointed Rumanian Government Petroleum Dictator, has ordered all oil companies to turn over a "certain amount" of oil to the gvernment for Rumanian use alone.

Rumanian oil companies are largely owned by British, French and United States interests.

Great Britain and France have warned that any move compelling French and British companies to supply oil for Germany would bring grave consequences.

At the same time Germany has been pressing Rumania for increased oil exports to the Reich.

Netta said the order was necessary to assure sufficient oil for the army and adequate distribution of petroleum products through the country.

The Rumanian government recently established a commission to control the oil industry.

A communique issued at the French embassy said:

"If the goal of the commission is to considerably increase the provisioning of Germany with oil, France can only entirely approve the attitude of Britain, to support to the very end policy of opposing Germany in the Rumanian petroleum question."

GIRLS STABBED IN LEGS

Montreal, Jan. 27—(CP)—Police today sought a person who jabbed a sharp instrument into the legs of two girls returning home from work in a crowded eastend street car last night. The victims, Estelle Dube, 18, and Cecille Leduc, 16, told police they felt a sharp pain and discovered later their legs were bleeding. Physicians said the wounds were caused by a pin, needle or razor blade.

South of the Border

By ALICE ALDEN

BOLD plaids carry on. We've had them in evening coats and housecoats, in taffeta and wool. Now comes what promises to be one of the pet beach robes of the cruise and summer season, plaid in handwoven Mexican linen—the same linen, in fact, which graces yoyur breakfast and luncheon tables, in desert colors of cactus green, sand, gold and rose. Lucille Ball is the Hollywood enthusiast in this picture, snapped at Palm Springs, but she's only one of dozens of us who are planning for something more exciting on the sands.

Glamour in the Bedroom

By ELEANOR ROSS

It's easy to bring glamor into the home. This is especially so of the bathroom, once a dull, drab affair and now filled with color, gleaming mirror glass, oiled silk in beautiful colors and bright fixtures. With the arrival of the new year, luxuries for the bath seem to be bursting forth in shops as gaily and thickly as tulips in spring. Many of them make their debut at the home furnishings show held each year in Chicago, a marvelous display of manufactured wares for the house.

Though not all of us can indulge ourselves in the whole range of gadgets and luxuries for the bathroom, there are many items well within the reach of the average budget. Against the day when your spirit demands a little indulgence, it might be a good idea to jot some of them down right now. Color, of course, is an adjunct to the bathroom, even in a shower and window curtain set. Color combinations of the new sets are luscious — peach grounds with white and silver flowers; soft blues decorated with trim sailboats; delicate greens with gardenia sprays, and morning glories in white and silver splashed on a whole range of pastels. One design, which has been named Victoria, is a plain shower curtain with a decorated valance across the top. As a final word in ensembling, there are shower caps to match the curtains.

Bathtub Tray

A bathtub accessory which literally breathes the spirit of luxury is a tray equipped to hold manicure set, facial creams, magazines, cigarettes, ash trays and bath sponge. One model is de luxe with chromium and an attached mirror, but there is a less expensive one. These are fashioned of wood enameled in pastel shades. For the leisurely bather there are neck and shoulder pillows made of fine-grained pastel rubber, with rubber suction caps to attach them to the tub. A set of monogrammed bottles, ensembled with hand mirror and matching powder, is tempting.

One of the smartest of the new bathroom items is a set consisting of hamper and matching waste basket, decorated with reproductions of the covers of leading magazines, carefully selected to maintain good color relations. For the bathroom which has a built-in dressing table, there is the chair upholstered in pastel satin with an attached mirror on a chromium standard which is adjustable. There are dozens of new make-up and magnifying mirrors. all with strategically placed lights.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Wife Has to Do Most of the Adjusting in Marriage.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I am married the second time to a man twenty years older than I and I am disappointed. He likes to sit at home and spend quiet evenings and I like to go places and do things. Living in the country there is nowhere to go unless we get in the car and ride several miles, which he doesn't enjoy after a hard day's work. What I want to know is whether you can persuade a man to do what you want him to do if you talk hard enough and long enough?

A Disappointed Wife.

Answer:

What is talking hard and long but nagging. I wonder! Now surely every woman has heard what the nagging wife brings down on her head: her husband's bad humour, his determination not to yield a point and in the end open revolt against her. If this is what you want talk hard and long and you will get it all.

No, sister, you can't talk 'em into doing anything by repeating what you want to do. You have to find out what they want to do and do it with 'em or go it alone. And you have to learn to think before you can work out a problem with a husband twenty years older than you. If it happens that he's selfish in addition to being tired, your prospects are poor. If the husband won't play the give and take game, go with you once a week while you sit with him six times, you'll have to gad in the day time and sit with him in the evening.

That's life, you know. We women marry men, honestly believing that we can make them do to suit us (they encourage this belief before marriage) and consequently be happy ever after. But they are never quite as docile as we expected them to be and they seldom suit us. One time they are young and skittish as colts, another time old and string halted. One time they take the bit in their teeth and run away. Another time they balk and won't go backwards or forwards.

There's the wife's job; there's her part, if any; to say grace over the young colt or old horse that she's taken for better or for worse; and have some fun out of life even if he's balking or running away.

Fashion Flashes

There's plenty of white millinery with black touches both at home and down south this season. A smart hat of white toyo has a curved brim and a high, narrow crown circled in black grosgrain. A wide mesh veil in black is draped over the crown and falls softly in back.

It's always time for mink. For Spring, furriers are showing a little hip-length jacket with elbow sleeves finished in scallops and a scalloped edge to the hem. Collarless neckline.

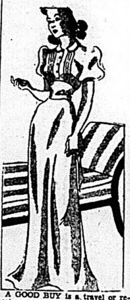
GOING PLACES all dressed up with embroideries and sequins is the erstwhile utilitarian sweater. A pullover of white wool and silk, hand-knit, has spaced motifs of fleur-de-lys in tiny gold sequins.

CRUISERS ARE PACKING a lovely evening suit of fine white serge, the jacket embellished with gold kidskin and turquoise beads. Its white chiffon blouse is gold-embroidered and beaded to match.

THE DOMESTIC SCENE is enhanced by a house gown of yellow slipper satin trimmed with appliques of rose velvet, the slender bodice set off by a trim waist and full skirt.

PLANNING PLAY HOURS? Top playsuits and protect your coiffure with a jacket of wool in a pale mauvish-pink hood attached.

COVERED-UP tops appear on many southern evening frocks but an equal number bare the midriff. There are inches between the top and voluminous skirt of a lovely evening gown in pure silk crepe with a printed design of green and white flowers ties by gold-toned bowknots.



A GOOD BUY is a travel or resort coat to use later at home. Such a model is in a blue, brown and white tweed mixture and has a double tuxedo and a deep sailor collar of lynx.

CHEER UP your winter ensemble with a bright frock of pure silk crepe in white pin-dotted red. It is made on apron lines with self-fabric ruffles at the edges.

PRACTICAL anywhere is an evening jacket of deep sky-blue woolen on fitted lines, hip-length with a curved hem. It is embroidered down the front and around the hem, beads and sequins in night blue, silver and pale gold.

CITED FOR SPRING is a lovely bell-shaped cape of mink, made with cutaway, rounded front, the skins worked to follow this curved line. Collarless, with a high neckline.

GETTING THE BEST IN MEDICAL GUIDANCE

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

There is nothing so precious to us as our children, and the younger and more helpless they are, the more they hold to our heart-strings Their healthy physical growth, is, of course, our first concern. We are willing to make any sacrifice to this end. No matter what our economic limitations, we want the best guidance in the physical care of the infant we can get.

How wonderful it is that so many cities and towns, even rural areas, have baby centers to which mothers can take their babies at regular intervals for advice on their care and feeding.

But we can never be absolutely sure that our children won't get sick some time. For such emergencies we want to be ready. We want to know whom to call upon.

On Neighbor's Advice

The average parent is likely to select a doctor on the advice of a neighbor. If she hears a doctor's name mentioned often, she assumes that he must be entirely reliable. Most people are greatly impressed by the doctor who always has his office full of persons waiting to see him. Sometimes such a doctor is the very one to be avoided.

We like a good handshaker and smiler at the Sunday school and club, but when our child is sick or we are ill ourselves, we want expert advice. Therefore, our first concern is, "How well is the doctor trained?" Because our child is precious, we want to be sure that the doctor to whom we entrust his health and life has the very best training.

We easily can find out. In practically every county seat, every town and city, there is a public health department. Why not inquire of it the names of some doctors who are qualified? If there is an academy of medicine, its advice will be reliable. Don't wait until your child is sick to do so. Do it right now so as to be ready for any emergency.

Not Medical Adviser

I am not a medical expert, but I wish I were. Unfortunately, an occasional reader supposes I am, and asks me for medical advice. Of course, I cannot give it, and must take the trouble to write to tell this inquirer so.

When my own children have been sick, we have called upon a well trained child doctor. We have also kept in touch with this doctor to advise us on keeping our children well. I strongly recommend that you do likewise.

As I say to my parent classes at the university, I am not an expert on what the child should eat, for example, but I presume to know how to make him want to eat. My field is in the guidance of his habits, attitudes, emotions — his behavior, in short; and in helping his parents in relation to these matters. And my readers have a right to know by what authority I, or any other expert, offer such advice.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. In our neighborhood is a boy of seven. He lies, steals and uses ugly language. The other parents do not want their children to play with him. Month by month he grows worse and worse. Please suggest a solution to this problem.

A. Welcome this child to your home when you can have time to supervise his play with your children. Help him to gain great satisfaction at his play there. But let him know that the moment he violates the rules of your home, he must leave. Try to get the other parents to treat him in like fashion, all aiming at winning the friendship and co-operation of this child's parents.

Stretch to Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

STRETCHING exercises are fun and fatigue does not result, so the girl who isn't inclined to exert herself should take them under consideration. Ten minutes a day of these simple calesthenics will start blood streams promenading, firm fibers, aid digestion, help the central nervous system to keep from getting jumpy. Those girls who don't realize that good appearance is built on health are short-sighted. One might as well look ahead, visualize what the years may bring in the way of facial lines and the thickened equator. Stave them off by living hygienically and sensibly, according to the laws of health.

When awakened, throw back the bed clothes. Lie on your back, hands at the sides. Relax. Throw back the head, stretch the muscles of the neck. Extend arms and legs, stretching and wriggling the fingers and toes. Try to pull yourself apart at the middle. It's fine for cultivating the waspy waistline.

Before going to bed stand facing the wall, lift on your toes, raise your hands, see how far you can reach, how tall you can make yourself. Down on the toes, and repeat. When stretching, pull hard on the muscles; otherwise, you won't progress a single step along the beauty road.

A new coiffure is a stimulant to the soul, yet many a woman sticks to the old arrangement, fearing that she will look strange, or queer, or that the family will hand out smart cracks.

The change may not always be to one's liking, but one must remember that the flattering pattern has to be developed, a curl here, an upsweep there. In the end it is worth the time and the trouble.

Middle-aged women especially should keep in step with changing fashions; if they don't they'll fall into a rut, soon will be dated as old timers. That won't do. No sense lugging out a little ladder and climbing on the shelf.

Weather Dictator Of Our Health

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE WEATHER this year is engaging the serious attention of more people than it has for 25 years. Every general staff of every army has to study weather and climatic conditions in order to keep large bodies of armed forces at the highest pitch of physical vigor.

Physical vigor is maintained best in temperate climates. There is no instance in history where troops from tropical regions or from Arctic regions have beaten troops from temperate regions.

Our general energy level and physical tone are determined by the ease or difficulty with which heat is lost from the body. When the heat loss is difficult, as in tropical climates, internal combustion is slowed and available energy falls, and all the vital functions of the body are depressed. "Vital functions" include the intellectual processes of the general staff.

Extreme cold may promote harmful chilling by too rapid removal of body heat. This results in exhaustion of the body and a greater susceptibility to infection. When southerners migrate to temperate regions, their resistance and ability to fight infection is much reduced over that of the native population. Pneumonia is more deadly in them and tuberculosis runs a more rapid course.

Respiratory Infections

Shifting troops from tropical regions to temperate regions involves the incurrence of respiratory infections. Shifting troops from the north to the south involves a different kind of danger. According to military medical authorities, it produces symptoms of insufficiency of the adrenal glands. The adrenal glands have to do with combustion and with the sympathetic nervous system. When the need for restricting combustion lowers the functional activity of the adrenal glands, it also affects the sympathetic nervous system and the circulation.

Shifting troops from the north to the south means a marked fall in blood pressure and hypertonicity of the digestive system.

Of course the same general results that are observed in armies occur in the civil population. In cold weather movements are automatically more energetic in order to keep up warmth. The load on the heart is correspondingly greater; the blood pressure is a little higher, and there is more heart disease during the winter months.

Nature's Experiment

During the very severe summer of 1934, in the middle west, Nature made an experiment of its own which was observed, and the observations show that the blood pressure fell about 30 per cent and there was a general relief from symptoms of heart disease.

Changeable temperatures and the pressure of storm zones produce a population badly afflicted with arthritis and chronic respiratory trouble—chronic bronchitis, sinus disease, etc.

For some curious reason, acute appendicitis is related to storm pathways, following almost the same curve as respiratory infection, and although the occurrence of acute appendicitis is highest in the colder climates, the fatality rate drops in those same regions.

Economic depressions during the past 60 years can be so charted as to show that they have been preceded by high temperatures and a lack of storms that bring about reduction in human energy.

These statements are not made without some scientific basis. Dr. C. A. Mills, professor of Experimental Medicine at the University of Cincinnati, has made these observations over a number of years. They can be found in the Military Surgeon for May, 1937.

TRICOLOR STAR PLACES THIRD IN 600-YD. RACE

Billie. Fritz. Led. All. the Way Until the Last Few Yards

O'CONNOR WINS

Boston, Jan. 29.—(CP)—Bill Fritz, the half mile star from Queen's University, today awaited New York City's Millrose games at the week end for an opportunity to avenge himself in the 600 yards for his defeat here Saturday night.

After leading all the way from the opening gun, the Canadian Star was nipped in the closing half lap by two mid-westerners who run under the colors of New York's 69th regiment.

Fritz broke fast and out-sprinted the field to the first corner, setting the pace continuously until Charley Beetham of Columbus, O., who paced himself carefully put on a burst of speed that carried him from fifth place to a three-yard victory.

Hal Cagle of Oklahoma City, tried to keep up with Beetham and his kick carried him past Fritz into second place, three feet ahead of the Canadian. Further back were Roy Rochran of Indiana and Warren Breidenback of Michigan.

The Dominion scored one victory during the night when Larry O'Connor of University of Toronto captured the 45-yard high hurdles in 5.3 seconds, the same time that he marked up in his semi-final heat. Second was the Tufts College negro, Eddie Dugger, with Allan Tomlich of Detroit third.

Chuck Fenske of Madison, Wis., threw off a cold and Glenn Cunningham's closing speed to win the mile in the fastest time of the current indoor season, 4:10.3. Don Lash, two-mile record holder, was beaten by Gregory Rice, Notre Dame University, who turned in the excellent time of 9:01.7.

MEL HILL
Boston Bruins

Mel Hill

Only in his third season in the National league, it's hard to say just what heights Mel Hill will achieve before through, but he'll have a tough job bettering his his feats of last spring when he acquired, for a time, the name, "Sudden Death". Boston Bruins, as you probably remember, played Rangers in the first round of the Stanley Cup play-offs and won out four games to three. Three of the Boston wins were overtime affairs, first goal scored ending the game, and in three of these it was Hill that sank the winning tally!! At the start of last season there was doubt as to whether he should be farmed to a minor league club for another year. Art Ross decided to retain him and during the latter part of the season he patrolled right wing on one of the most effective lines in the league. Bill Cowley holding down the centre spot and Roy Conacher, league leading goal-getter, left wing. This year the line has suffered the loss of both Hill and Conacher for long spell. As long as seven years ago Mel attended Lester Patrick's Ranger "school" at Winnipeg, but didn't linger long, and was scouted for the Bruins by Lionel Hitchman. Played with the Sudbury Allan cup winners of three years ago, then turned pro with Providence and played a few games with Bruins in the same year. He'll be 26 on February 15. Born at Glenbose, Manitoba.

TOMORROW: Bob Davidson, Maple Leafs.

FRANKFORD RINK POPULAR PLACE FOR 'COBBLERS'

Sporting Activities Take Decided Jump Since Arrival of Bata Shoe Company

MANY LOOPS OPERATE

Foxboro, (Special)—After a period of some eight or nine years during which the winter-time sporting activities in the village rink had dwindled from the highest possible heights into a state where it had almost ceased to exist altogether, the Frankford Arena is once again ablaze in all the glory of its one-time popularity.

Not since the once powerful Frankford Hockey Club gave up its berth in the old Trent Valley League nearly a decade ago have the residents of the village and vicinity had the opportunity of cheering a home team on to victory and, as a consequence, the excited crowds, which once jammed the Frankford Arena to capacity have long been missing. But with the return of prosperity to the once famous paper-making town, a new life has awakened in its veins and Frankford is once again very much hockey conscious.

On four nights out of the week, and sometimes five nights, the village rink resounds to the cheers of the fan-fare as the various hockey teams representing Frankford and district vie for supremacy, while on the "off" nights, public skating is the order of the day.

Shoemakers Holding Own

First of all, of course, there is the Bata Shoe Company's entrant in the Trent Valley League and, although the "Shoemakers", as they are appropriately dubbed, are not leading the league by any means, they are at least holding their own. In view of the fact that they had to start from scratch in forming their team, however, and also taking into consideration that they have been together only a little over a month, their performance to date has been more than credible and the fans are with them all the way.

According to the present scheme of things, the newly formed Bata Sports Club have arrangements with the rink management whereby they have the Arena to do with what they wish four nights out of every week. This gives ample opportunity for League hockey games and also for the staging of departmental games between the various division of the factory, while on Saturday nights a really gala evening is enjoyed when it is "free skating" for every worker of the Bata Shoe factory and Building Department.

On Tuesday and Thursday evenings the Frankford and District Hockey League get into action and provides wholesale entertainment for the fans as the four teams of the loop battle it out in a double header each night. Frankford, Wooler, Glenn Miller and Wallbridge comprise the league and the schedule is now about half completed with the Glenn Miller "paper-makers" apparently showing the class of the loop thus far in the race. Following the regular schedule the winners of this loop along the shores of the Trent usually arrange a play-off series with the top-notchers in the Central Hastings Rural League with last year's honors going to the Wooler lads, winners in their league, who rather badly trounced the Glenn Ross sextette in the post season series between the winners of the two rural leagues.

The latest information coming out of Frankford is the formation of a ladies' hockey team being chosen among the workers at the factory. The lassies have been practising faithfully for the past week and are on the lookout for some opposition but in the meantime one of the "femmes" is becoming impatient of the delay and is turning out with one of the men's teams playing departmental hockey.

Athletics Offer $40,000 in Cash, Two-Year Contract

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 29—(AP)—Baseball's battle of dollars for the services of 23-year-old Benny McCoy is scheduled to end before sundown with the former Detroit Tiger infielder affixing his signature to a contract with one of six Major League clubs seeking his services.

McCoy, declared a free agent recently by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis along with 90 other Tiger chattels, could have signed a contract at midnight Sunday, but he delayed until this afternoon to give all bidders a chance to submit final offers.

"I'll be glad to get it over with," McCoy said. "I have had hardly any rest since I got the good news that I was a free agent."

Clubs named by McCoy as still being interested in acquiring his services are Boston, Pittsburgh, Brooklyn and Cincinnati of the National League and Philadelphia and Washington of the American circuit.

Cornwall Franchise Transfered to Oneonta

Utica, N.Y., Jan. 29—(AP)—Directors of the Canadian-American Baseball League voted Sunday transfer of the Cornwall, Ont., franchise to Oneonta, N.Y., because of the war.

While tabling action on the Ottawa franchise, which may be moved to a New York State city for the same reason, directors approved purchase of the Cornwall Club by Oneonta Sports, Inc.

Rev. Harold J. Martin, Heuvelton, re-elected president of the class C loop for the third time, said Ottawa may retain its franchise but added that Ogdensburg, Cortland and Kingston are interested in taking it over for the duration of the war.

The club owners raised the salary limit from $1,400 to $1,600 a month and made minor changes in several other league rules. Earlier Billy Southworth, Rome outfielder, was named the loop's most valuable player.

TOURING GOLFERS SWING EASTWARD

Ed Oliver of Hornell, N.Y., Wins Bing Crosby Tourney With Score of 135

Del Mar, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP) — With a newcomer, sturdy Ed Oliver of Hornell, N.Y., installed as winner of the fourth annual $3,000 Bing Crosby golf tournament, the touring brigade of professionals swung east today.

Oliver repeated his sub-par Saturday performance yesterday and led the field with a 36-hole card of 68-67—135 to capture his first major tournament. He was nine strokes under par for the regulation 72 at Rancho Santa Fe Country Club.

Three strokes back was Vic Ghezzi of Deal, N.J., and four blows off the leaders' pace were Beng Hogan, White Plains, N.Y., and Harold McSpaden of Winchester, Mass.

Oliver's score was the lowest in the four-year history of the Crosby tournament. Next stop for the touring pros is Phoenix, next weekend.

CAMPBELLFORD SQUAD BEATEN BY TWEED TEAM

Tweed, Jan. 29—(Special)—In a fast wide-open game Tweed hockey team defeated the Campbellford squad by a score of 7-4 before a bumper crowd of wildly cheering fans. The locals were full value for their win as, smarting under a recent reverse at the hands of Madoc, they turned on the pressure right from the face-off. Robinson, classy centre for the visitors, performed the well-known "hat trick," scoring three of his team's goals. Elsbury, Storms, Tummon and Reefes turned in smart games as did every player on the local squad.

Play was very fast from the opening face-off as the players took full advantage of very keen ice. There was little to choose between the teams in the opening period which ended in the teams being deadlocked at one goal each. Wagar opened the scoring on a pass from Orr. The visitors knotted the count on Hendy's smart goal.

The locals took the lead again in the second period when Elsbury carried the rubber through the entire Campbellford team. Robinson scored his first goal, placing his team on even terms again by his clever playing. Tummon took Storms' pass to give the locals a lead which they retained until the final bell. Play became decidedly rough towards the middle of the second frame and the referees were forced to clamp down on rough play. The penalty box was taxed to its capacity as the fans were treated to the unusual spectacle of five players, four of the Campbellford team in the penalty box at one time, leaving them short handed half of the period.

Six in Last Period

Six goals were scored in the last period with the locals rattling the twine four times behind Jewell who was unable to cope with Tweed Sharpshooters. Tummon scored his second goal of the game while Storms tallied twice and Elsbury also added a second goal to his total. Robinson kept the visitors in the running with two clever goals, but his teammates were unable to match his stellar playing. The final score: Tweed 7; Campbellford 4.

The lineups:

Campbellford—Goal, Jewell; defence, Hendy and Wilks; centre, Robinson; wings, Blake, McIlraith; subs, Free, Horton, Kelly, Couch.

Tweed—Goal, Reeves; defence, Tummon, Orr; centre, Wager, wings, Storms, Elsbury; subs.

Referees — Payne, Campbellford, Marsh, A. Cournyea, Long, Arber, Woodcock.

Leaders Saw Leads Shaved Over Weekend

Montreal, Jan. 29—(CP)—Leaders in Quebec's two senior amateur hockey leagues saw their leads shaved in week-end games but held their position despite gains made by the runners up.

In the Quebec Senior League, Montreal Concordia crept to within a point of the leading Montreal Royals as they won and lost in home and home games against the Ottawa Senators. Royals, however, who played a 4-4 draw with Verdun Maple Leafs yesterday, have a game in hand.

In the provincial league Boston Olympics cut two points off Sherbrooke Red Raiders' first place margin by beating Shawinigan Falls Cataracts 4-3 in overtime while the Raiders were taking a 9-2 drubbing from Lachine Rapides. Three points now separate the teams.

The only change in the standings in either league was when Valleyfield Braves beat Verdun Bulldogs 2-1 in a provincial league contest. By their victory the Braves broke a fifth place deadlock with the Bulldogs.

Cornwall Flyers sliced Verdun's fourth place margin in the Q.S.H.L. to two points by beating Quebec Aces 3-2 in Quebec yesterday. Scores of the Concordia-Ottawa series were 6-4 in favor of Ottawa in the capital Saturday night and 4-3 for the Montreal team here yesterday.

N.H.L. STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Les Cunningham, Chicago, went on a scoring spree against Canadiens to tally two goals and help in three others in an 8-1 victory.

Syd Howe, Detroit, scored one goal and helped in one in a 4-2 victory over Boston Bruins.

Milt Schmidt, Boston, had a hand in both his term's goals against Detroit, scoring one and getting an assist on the other.

Bryan Hextall, Rangers, kept at the top among N.H.L. goal-getters by his 18th of the season against Americans and helping in another in a 4-2 victory.

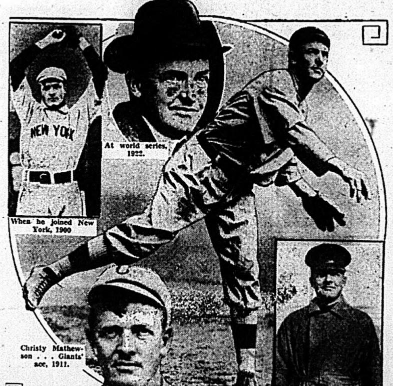
Sweeney Schriner, Toronto, got the winning goal in a 3-1 Saturday

Diamond Meteors!

MATHEWSON WORKED LONG AND HARD FOR SUCCESS



When he joined New York, 1900

At world series, 1922.

Christy Mathewson . . . Giants' ace, 1911.

As manager of Reds, 1917.

Capt. Mathewson, 1919

The "Fadeaway" trade-marked Christy Mathewson's formula for success.

Baseball's great righthander of yesterday struggled upward to fortune and diamond fame by unceasing work and ingenuity.

Matty was born of poor parents in the little town of Factoryville, Pa., in 1880. He knew when he was still a small boy that he would have to work for his pocket money and provide his own education.

He went after his aims in characteristic "Big Six" style. Sam Crane, a sports writer, nicknamed Mathewson — years later — after a famous old New York steam fire engine. The nickname was as permanent and lasting as Matty's record, commemorated with a plaque in baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., in 1939.

Worked Way

Young Mathewson worked his way through Keystone academy with odd jobs. He got a semi-pro contract with the Y.M.C.A. team at Scanton, Pa., and paid his way through Bucknell university.

Up through the minors in New England and the south, Matty got a break with the New York Giants in 1900, but he was shipped back to Norfolk Va., for seasoning.

This was the test period in Matty's career. Matty proved he could take the kick downstairs and keep struggling to get up again. When he showed signs of renewed prowess at Norfolk, he was quickly snapped up again by the Giants.

Develops Pitch

Under John McGraw of the Giants, Matty hit his stride in 1902 He developed the famous "fadeaway," a product of tireless work and endless experiment. This streaking pitched ball seemed to disappear or "fade away" on its path to the plate and it baffled scores of hitters.

Next to his "fadeaway" Matty's most celebrated possession was his scruple against Sunday ball games. Throughout his career he never pitched a Sunday game. In 1918, after two years with Cincinnati, Matty resigned and joined the United States army's medical corps for war service.

The slab artist led the National League in pitching in 1909 and 1910, winning 25 and 27 games respectively.

Mathewson's health broke in 1919. After four years of sanatoriums he made a short comeback as president of the Boston Braves. Matty's death in 1925 during the world series overshadowed the baseball classic and shocked the nation. Mathewson reached the peaks of success in baseball and his passing brought sorrow to all the land.

EDDIE SHORE SPARKS SQUAD TO PAIR OF WINS

Springfield Indians Only Team to Win Two Over Weekend in Int.-Am. Loop

PROVIDENCE TIES

With New Haven Heads Eastern Division of the League

(By The Canadian Press)

The old man may not be the hockey player he used to be but as an inspiration he still has no equal.

The old man is Eddie Shore who returned to active hockey during the week-end and sparked his Springfield Indians to a pair of victories.

Shore, expected to resume National hockey league warfare Tuesday when his new club, New York Americans, play Montreal Canadians, got in a bit of practice Saturday and Sunday and his presence was just about all Springfield needed to gain the only double victory of the Int.-Am. week-end.

The Edmonton veteran was an inspiration on the defence and on the attack Saturday as the Indians blanked Cleveland Barons 3-0. Shore figured in two goals in addition to playing a bang-up game on the defence.

Against Indianapolis last night, Shore did not figure in the goals but his inspiration was evident as the Indians twice fought from behind, finally gaining victory on Joe Lamb's goal in the third period.

In other week-end games Providence tied New Haven for the eastern division lead by beating Syracuse 4-1 last night after tieing Pittsburgh 4-4 Saturday. The Eagles, meantime, dropped a 2-1 decision to Philadelphia Saturday and edged out Pittsburgh 4-3 last night.

Syracuse beat Hershey 3-2 Saturday in the only other game.

Sports Roundup

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Jan. 29.—(AP)—The East may see Al Hostak, the N.B.A. Middleweight champ, in action soon in an overweight bout with Ken Overlin of Richmond . . . When a southern sports editor wired Judge W. G. Bramham, the minor league baseball czar, for an interpretation of Judge Landis' recent pronouncement, Judge Bramham wired back "get out your Bible and turn to the First Kings, Chapter four, verses 29-34". . . . Boston papers are panning Art Ross and Co., for trading Eddie Shore to New York Americans.

They're going to play Hank Greenberg in the outfield and stars throughout the majors fear the worst don't be surprised if Jimmy Foxx is shifted to the pitcher's box, or if you find Carl Hubbell playing first.

Lee Savold, the fighter, has joined the Des Moines junior Chamber of Commerce . . . Joe Stripp, the temperamental third baseman, has his baseball school going full blast down at Orlando with more than 160 students enrolled.

Today's guest star:

Harold M. Slater, St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press: "Larry MacPhail must be slipping . . .so far he hasn't offered Hitler a contract to make his surrender between games at a Brooklyn double header next season."

Rumor hath it that Benny also has an offer of $30,000 from the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Washington Senators, with seven other major league clubs bidding for his services. McCoy want a $40,000 bonus and a three-year contract calling for $10,000 a year salary.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

For nearly two years we have harbored a district sports story and did not intend to make it public owing to the surrounding circumstances, but the Peterboro scribe, in a recent comment, practically forced our hand in the matter, as we feel the truth should at all times prevail. Belleville fans did not generally know there has been a feud carried on between the Jackson brothers of the Redmen and Honey Tompkins, of the Petes. The Peterboro' scribe brought the matter to the attention of his many (?) readers last Friday and stated that the feud broke out when the boys were all residents of Deseronto, Tompkins originally comes from the former match-making village. Liftlock City scribe Cec Perdue says the feud commenced when "the Jacksons" and Tompkins were neighbour boys in Deseronto. Actually there is no truth in the statement that the feud broke out in Deseronto, because when Tompkins was a team mate of the Jacksons when the trio was a tower of strength with the Redmen, the boys were bossom friends and practically inseparable while on the road.

Actually, had Tompkins not written a letter to his parents in the spring of 1939, the truth would have never been known. It seems that during a game played in Peterboro last winter, between the Redmen and the Petes, Clayton Jackson had two teeth knocked out during a skirmish near the Peterboro net. Players were milling around and after Jackson was hit, the Belleville players always blamed Don Crowe, hard-hitting Peterboro defenceman, for the attack on Bill and for the remainder of the season Crowe was the target of every Belleville thrust in retaliation. The incident was forgotten with the passing of time, until one late spring day Mrs. Tompkins received a letter from son Honey. It seems Mrs. Tompkins had mislaid her glasses and called in a neighbour girl to read the letter to her. In the letter Honey openly boasted he had "clipped Jackson and knocked out his teeth." True to tradition, the neighbour girl carried the news to the Jacksons and it was not until that time that the truth of the matter came to light, as Crowe had always been blamed for the attack.

Therein lies the unadulterated truth of how Clayt Jackson got his teeth knocked out and also saw the beginning of the Jackson-Tompkins feud. Unfortunately Tompkins knew nothing of the letter-reading incident and was surprised when the Jacksons refused to speak to him when the Redmen went to Peterboro on Dec. 29th last. However the whole thing is "out" now and after last Friday's escapade in Peterboro, watch out for some fun in the future. Actually the lid might be blown off tonight when the Petes come to battle the Air Force, as the old Flyer-Redmen feud seems to have quietened down this season and both teams to make the Hume Arena their home are aiming their guns at the Petes. Tonight's game here between the Flyers and Petes means much to both clubs as a victory will give the winners somewhat of an edge in the group standing. By virtue of having played one extra game, the Petes are one game up on the Holway-led troops, who may trot out two new players tonight, we heard as rumour over the week-end.

A true sporting gesture was shown by the visiting fancy skaters from Ottawa and Toronto, who featured the V.O.N. carnival here Friday night, when these visiting skaters went to the Quinte Skating Club rink on Saturday morning and donned their skates to coach and instruct our Belleville skaters of the Quinte Skating Club. Six of the seven skaters, the petit Constance Choquette, Dennis Ross, Art Nelles, Shirley Halsted, Margaret Wilson and Peter Killam all entered into the spirit of assistance and gave their time and talent to the Quinte skaters. It is gestures like this that gives Canadian sportsmanship the good name it bears throughout the world. President Harold Vaughan, of the Y's Men's Club was on hand to assist in transporting the skaters to the local club and create a mutual feeling of good fellowship.

Taking an unbiased stand in the matter, the Peterboro scribe penned the following two paragraphs following Friday night's Redmen at Petes game: "That 19-5 score for the Petes over Belleville here last night was a shame. Because it did not represent the true strength of the two teams. The Redmen, with Hastie and Gow—two top scorers all season for Gananoque—and the full squad here would have given the Petes a battle. Though, we're confident the locals would have won. Well, Hastie and Gow were taken from the Redmen at the start of the season—after hoisting the Thomasites into the VanHorne Cup semi-finals in Kingston — and awarded to Gananoque. And the Redmen weren't so hot after that. But last night, they were even worse, coming here without Storms, the two Jackson brothers and a few more. Just a pickup team which knew it was out of the running."

Continuing he adds: "Now, we're not criticizing the boys who came here, nossuh. We admire a game guy anytime, and the bunch who came knew they were in for a cold trip, with no dough coming to 'em and not a ghost of a chance of the playoffs. So they came, with Coach Speedy St. Louis in charge. And they went down battling, playing clean hockey and trying right to the finish. But the gees who passed up the trip and the setup in Bella Villa which disrupted the squad deserves plenty of censure. We don't know the inside of it all, but there's something there that smells no sweeter than a cat, on the garbage pile, that died two weeks ago!"

Old hockey fans will regret to hear of the sudden death of Harry "Dyke" Maguire, former Belleville hockey player, who died suddenly at his home in Detroit over the weekend. Just after the turn of the century "Dyke" Maguire paced a great Belleville hockey team that consisted of Maguire, Kennedy, Marks, McMillan, Winchester and our own Sandy Burrows. The late "Dyke" Maguire visited relatives here two years ago at which time we had the pleasure of meeting the man we had heard so much about in our childhood. "Dyke" Maguire was a great Y.M.C.A. worker, besides being an outstanding hockey player, and was engaged in "Y" work in Detroit at the time of his death.

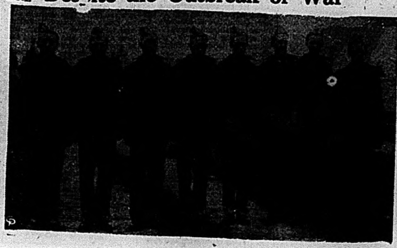
National Forestry Program to Continue This Year Despite the Outbreak of War



Boys of the N.F.P. are shown here in their natty khaki drill shirts and trousers, forage caps and friese windbreakers

By C. F. STEELE
Central Press Canadian Writer

Its practical value in building boys and accomplishing worthwhile projects in woodcraft and forest conservation attested, the National Forestry Program of Canada will this year embark on its second season on a nation-wide basis. Similar in some respects to the C.C.C. — Civilian Conservation Corps— of the United States, the N.F.P. in its two divisions, provincial and federal, enrolled last year 4,000 or more alert young Canadians in units scattered across the country from Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, to Vancouver Island, British Columbia.

As in other years, the war has had its affect on this youth program, the call to the colors, sounded soon after the declaration of war last September, being answered by numbers of these young men in training on the "forestry front." Skilled in hand and eye, young and physically fit, these lads were just the type the recruiting officers were looking for. And so numbers of them downed the woodsman's axe for the rifle and are in uniform today.

Need for Program

However, there will be a need for this program, war or no war, for Canada's task during the struggle will be to maintain a reservoir of supplies at home for the Allied forces overseas. Moreover, it is agreed that the basic industries of the country must be maintained and, in fact, expanded to meet the new needs. So the N.F.P. will carry on its job so well begun.

This is a large-scale undertaking to meet the problem of unemployed youth, especially in the urban centres by placing them in well-organized and supervised camps in forest reserves and national parks. While the federal units have operated only a year, the provinces have maintained youth training camps for some years. British Columbia had carried on the work for three or four years and in 1938 several other provinces inaugurated schemes of this type. The dominion forest service in 1937 also made a start in training boys from Prince Edward Island at the Acadia Forest Experiment station in New Brunswick. Thus with a lot of spade work done here and there across the country, the second stage of a long-range conservation scheme was launched—the National Forestry Program—administered by the department of mines and resources.

Save Forest Wealth

The program is linked directly with the forest heritage of the Dominion, the job of the boys being to assist in saving Canada's forest wealth. They learn the best means of fighting forest fires, how to build trails and roads, bridges and ranger cabins. Their work also includes clearing camp sites, making ski runs, building telephone lines between points in the forest reserves, etc., likewise studying right in the open woodcraft, first aid, the combating of insect pests that prey upon trees and shrubbery in the national parks. Canada's chain of national parks are increasingly a magnet for tourists; one of the jobs of the N.F.P. units is to safeguard the scenic attractions of these national playgrounds. Last season many tourist campsites were cleared and fitted up for use by these boys.

Paid Dollar a Day

The funds for the program are voted by the dominion parliament and the provinces and for doing this job the boys are paid a dollar a day with food and lodgings and medical service provided. None of the young trainees —they range in age from 18 to 25—may draw more than $10 a month of his pay, the remainder being held back to be paid over in a lump sum when the projects close in the fall. Then the boys return to their homes with something in their pockets to tide them over the winter or until such time as they get something to do.

These trainees come from homes in necessitous circumstances and the new inspiration and interest kindled in getting a job in a big, nation-wide scheme and in a setting their natural inclinations relish, at once is noticeable. "They take to this work like ducks to water." one of the camp directors said.

After being signed-up the boys are taken to their camp units and measured for uniforms. And while the boys dress in natty khaki drill shirts and trousers, forage caps and frieze windbreakers, there is nothing of a military character in the camp routine. Discipline, however, is maintained and the camp run on schedule. An eight-hour day is crammed with activities that harden muscles and enlighten the mind. Meals are wholesome, rest and recreation periods fully provided for. Citizenship training is not overlooked with a patriotic devotion fostered in the flag that flies from the camp flagpole. One-half day a week is devoted to training in the form of lectures and demonstrations. Saturdays the enrollees enjoy recreation and on Sunday as far as possible they are given religious instruction. Thus the week of the N.F.P. recruits is rounded out.

The national scope of the program is revealed in the list of camps in operation last year under the federal scheme. From one to four units were located in the Petawawa, Valcartier, Acadia and Kananaskis forest experiment stations, and in Cape Breton Highlands, Riding Mountain, Prince Albert, Elk Island, Banff, Jasper, Waterton Lakes, Yoho and Mount Revelstoke national parks. Each unit has a personnel of 27 trainees, plus leader, assistant leader, cook and teamster. From the ranks of the trainees are drawn cooks, assistants, straw bosses, clerks, truck drivers, etc. Altogether there has been evolved in a short period an efficiently co-ordinated program with many valuable forestry enterprises already to its credit.

BISHOP LAMARCHE DIES AT AGE OF 69

Chicoutimi, Que., Jan. 29 (CP).—Rt. Rev. Charles Antonelli Lamarche, 69, Bishop of Chicoutimi for the past eleven years, died today after a brief illness.

Bishop Lamarche, who was ordained to the priesthood at the age of 22 years, was born Oct. 26, 1870 at St. Roche de l'Achigan, Que. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Denis Lamarche.

German Freedom Radio Baffles Gestapo

By Central Press Canadian

In the war of the airwaves which rages nightly between Germany and the Allies the latter are receiving valuable support from the secret German Freedom station. This transmitter, which has baffled the entire world since it was first heard in January, 1937, sends nightly broadcasts to Germany. As mouthpiece of the German underground movement, it has long advocated overthrow of the Hitler regime.

The Freedom station is working against amazing odds. From the outset it has had the entire machinery of the German Gestapo against it. But efforts to jam it on the air find it not unprepared. If broadcasts on its usual wave-length of 29.3 metres are interfered with it can readily switch to another wave. Nor have efforts to counteract its influence with a fake Freedom station been more effective. The station has been silenced occasionally, but never for long.

Only a few insiders know where the station is located. At one time or another it was believed to broadcast from Austria, the Sudeten territory, Russia, Spain and Luxembourg, and even from Honolulu and Iceland. Most people, however, believe it operates within Germany itself, and Gestapo, storm troopers and elite guards have tried desperately to hunt it down. Barns, boathouses, and lonely cottages from the Alps to the Baltic seacoast have been searched. One day all cars on roads leading to Berlin were stopped, following a tip that the transmitter was installed in an automobile headed for the capital. Another time all furniture vans in Wurttemberg were halted. Even barges on the Rhine have been included in the hunt.

The hunt is not only for the transmitter, however, but for its audience as well. Short-wave sets, possession of which now constitutes a criminal offence in Germany, are carefully hidden. Sets are considered fairly safe, for example, concealed on bookshelves behind "Mein Kampf" and other Nazi writings, yet many listeners have been arrested and to reduce the danger a new technique has been developed Listeners from small groups. Only one member listens in each day, then informs the others.

The programs are shaped by the two chief aims of the German opposition; peace and overthrow of Hitler. Broadcasts include foreign news reports, exposures of the private lives and corrupt practices of leading Nazis, talks on exploitation of workers, on the food situation, on Germany's economic status on strikes and sabotage acts.

Daily repetition of "Ten Commandments for Germans" impresses on listeners the necessity of fighting Nazi'sm with all means at their command. "Work Slow" the audience is admonished. "Spread the truth about Hitler and his henchmen; do not trust the Nazi press; do not deposit money in saving banks; help victims of National Socialism."

Often the station broadcasts the names of Gestapo agents posing as anti-Nazis. It encouraged anti-war activities at the time of the Czecho-Slovakian crisis in September, 1938 and again before the present war. It fought anti-Semitism by unmasking the programs of November 1933, as a desperate attempt by the Hitler government to fill its empty treasury.

At the height of the crisis, on September 10, 1938, the station warned of the imminent danger of inflation. Withdrawal of savings from banks so increased after this broadcast that a government decree three days later limited withdrawals to 30 marks daily.

Report on strikes and acts of sabotage constitute one of the station's most important features. The broadcaster comments on individual experiences, suggesting improvements on the methods used. The station claims the number of strikes has steadily increased since it began broadcasting. Lately armament workers particularly have been encouraged to sabotage production.

This month the station enters its fourth year. The war may well give it added significance, and it is not impossible that future historians will compare it to the famous Belgian underground journal which baffled the German government throughout the last war.

Building Program of Wings Already Taking Effect as Team Undefeated in Last Four Starts

Stopped Bruins 4-2 and Put Squad Five Points Off Pace Set by Rangers

RANGERS WIN

Defeat Americans 4-2 While Canadiens Lose to Hawks 8-1—Toronto Wins Saturday

By JACK CALDER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Any time Detroit Red Wings whip one of the National Hockey League leaders today, it's a wonder. When Jack Adams' tremendous reconstruction program begins to take full effect a year or two from now, though, no Red Wing victory will be an upset.

Adams' fast - improving team stopped Boston Bruins 4-2 at Detroit last night and dropped the Bears five points off the furious pace being set by New York Rangers. Inasmuch as Detroit has not lost in its last four starts, there's a hint in the air that the building program already is taking effect as the youngsters gain experience.

Adams and owner James J. Norris, Sr., learned a terrific lesson when the Red Wings tumbled from the heights two years ago after two world championship seasons. They didn't reach the playoffs in 1938.

Strengthen Farm System

Determined that nothing like that ever should happen again, the Detroit management went out to strengthen an already extensive farm system. This year Omaha and Indianapolis became adjuncts to the major league club and chief scout Carson Cooper started to look at and talk to more amateurs than any N.H.L. club ever had scouted.

No one expected the network to start paying big dividends this year. But a week ago the Wings whipped the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs and last night they made the Bruins like it. Considering the fact that they can perform wonders on their home ice, the Red Wings might cause complications in the playoffs.

The beating of the Bruins was achieved on a power play as skilful as any the Red Wings of the championship days ever pulled. While Johnny Crawford of the visitors served a penalty, Alex Motter scored after seven minutes of the third period with the aid of Captain Eddie Goodfellow and Eddie Wares to give Detroit a 3-2 advantage. Manager Art Ross pulled out Goalie Frank Brimsek to insert six Bruin attackers in the last minute and Ken Kilrea broke away from them to score.

Sid Abel and Syd Howe gave Detroit a two-goal lead in the early minutes but Milt Schmidt reduced the margin after 12 minutes of play. The score stayed at 2-1 until Bobby Bauer tied it with one minute of the third period gone.

Rangers Widen Margin

The Rangers, meanwhile, widened their margin through a 4-2 victory over their fellow-townsmen, the Americans, before 14,000 customers in a wild affair at Madison Square Garden.

Stuck with only two defencemen because of an injury to Al Murray, the Americans battled so gamely they held a 2-1 lead going into the third period as a result of goals by Charlie Conacher and Johnny Gagnon, against one by Phil Watson. Along the way Hooley Smith and Watson staged a gory fist-fight, drawing match sentences.

Then Clint Smith fired the tying goal seven minutes into the final chapter and, despite the fact they were short-handed both times, the Rangers registered their fifth straight victory on counters by Neil Colville and Bryan Hextall. It was that up-the-ice Ranger method of offsetting penalties clicking again.

Everything happened to Montreal Canadiens. The Maple Leafs beat them 3-1 at Toronto Saturday and the Black Hawks swarmed over them to an 8-1 success at Chicago last night. To cap it all, Coach Pit Lepine missed both games because of an infected foot that confined him to his Toronto hotel room.

Apps Returns to Lineup

Syl Apps returned to the Toronto lineup to electrify 10,030 fans again, getting an assist as Gordon Drillon fired the first goal with Doug Young of the Canadiens serving a first-period penalty Ray Getliffe levelled the score in that period but Sweeney Schriner fired the winning goal in the second. Gus Marker made the win certain in the third.

It was a field night for the Hawks, although they were able to gain nothing better than a 2-0 advantage in the first two periods. Les Cunningham got the third goal as the third stanza started and he bagged another goal and two assists before it was over.

Hector (Toe) Blake, the ever-willing worker, scored for the hapless Habitants midway through that third-period slaughter.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma said, My friends can hardly beleeve it, Willyum, I mean about Mrs. Thudston Williws excepting my dinner invitation.

Maybe Mrs. Thurston Willows friends are still more surprised pop said, and ma said, How do you think it would sound in the paper, Willyum, Mrs. Thurston Willows was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Willyum P. Potts last evening, the table was tastefully arranged with a floral scheme and so 4th and so on.

How the dooce would it get into the paper? pop said, and ma said, Well naturelly it wouldn't, unless I sent them a little note to that effect, wich naturelly I wouldn't because I'm certainly no publicity monger. I mean unless I thought it would help you in a business way.

I wont see how for Peet sake, pop said, and ma said, Cant you imagine a good many people being much more apt to take out insurance at your office after seeing a little item like that in the papers?

I can more easily imagine being pestered to death by caviar salesmen and interior decorators, pop said. I can imagine myself losing my most important client because the telephone rings and interrupts him just as he is about to sign his name on the dotted line, and who is calling but a firm of florists to inquire if I wouldn't like a gardenia delivered at my office every morning for my buttonhole. No my deer, if I have to see anything in the sisiety columns I'd prefer it to be a little notice to the effect that Mrs. Thurston Willows has sprained her pearl necklace and has been obliged to cancel all engagements, pop said.

Now Willyum you're just saying all that for my sake, but it's a woman's duty to make certain little social sacrifices for her husband's career, so I think I'll send a little conservative notice to the sisiety editors when the time comes, ma said.

Wich she properly will.

News of the Produce Markets

Toronto, Jan. 29—Better inquiry firmed the undertone of the butter market here Saturday, while cheese prices remained strong and eggs pointed down in continued quiet trading.

Light offerings and more interest gave an improved tone to the butter market. Business was still on the slow side, but some sales of Ontario No. 1 creamery solids were reported at 27 1-2c per pound. Holders were asking 27 1-2c to 27 3-4c for Western make. Regraded lots sold at 27 1-2c.

While local buyers remained aloof from the wholesale market, sales of new cheese to outside points for export were restricted by lack of offerings. Prices were quoted nominal for another day. Further advances occurred in the retail section of the market.

The egg market sagged at the week-end when trading failed to pick up. Dealers reported that receipts moved slowly. Grades "B" and "C" declined to 18c and 17c, respectively, in the graded section, with the three top grades easing 1c per dozen in the retail division.

The Premier said last night that plans for recessing the House have been abandoned but he still could not forecast the date of the budget speech.

"I can't say at this time when the budget will be ready," he said. "But we are working overtime on it now."

It was understood the Conservative leader, Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, might reply today to statements made in the House of Commons regarding the part he played in the legislature's vote criticizing the Dominion Government war effort.

KIWANIS PREPARES FOR SWELL PARTY

Annual "At Home" to be Social Event of the Season

Members and friends of the Belleville Kiwanis Club are looking forward with more than usual anticipation to the annual "At Home" of the club, which takes place tomorrow night in the Trianon Ballroom.

The function which is a novel departure from the usual form of dance, will take the aspect of a Monte Carlo Night when all sorts of games will be in evidence, offering a pleasant respite from the dance floor.

The sweet music of Bud Haines and his Commodores orchestra which is rapidly gaining fame as one of the outstanding dance bands in Eastern Ontario, will again dispense the rhythms for which they are noted. Novelty dances, decorative dances—in fact all sorts of highly interesting and entertaining numbers have been arranged by the committee in charge.

There will be fun, melody and music for all. Dancing will start at nine o'clock and last until the wee sma' hours. Arrangements made thus far point out the function to be one of the outstanding ones of the season, and the officials and committees in charge are anticipating a large crowd. Many small parties have been arranged and if the present sale of tickets is any criterion then the Kiwanis Ball will be the social event of the year.

Nothing has been left undone to ensure everyone a good time. Lunch will be served. There will be music, mirth and a good time for all.

DOUBLE RATIONS

But its usefulness has been questioned by some well-known economists who pointed out that there already exists a mixed national consultative committee of employer and employee representatives to report on discrepanies between salaries and living costs.

Desire to Avoid Inflation

The mixed committee will meet again with government representatives next Wednesday. Economists commented that the government's attitude toward any proposals submitted will be conditioned by a desire to avoid inflation, credit being one of the principal weapons of a nation at war.

Establishment of a price ceiling is considered improbable at least for the near future.

Competent circles believe one way of holding the price increases within bounds will be through strict limitation of consumption. Thus far the government has called only for voluntary sacrifices in most instances, but stricter measures may be on the way.

A proposal made by the noted economist J. M. Keynes at the beginning of the war, but not then accepted by the government, has been in the forefront of recent discussion. Mr. Keynes suggested forced savings for all classes, with the sums thus raised going into the treasury. The device would have the double purpose of limiting purchasing power — and consequently consumption—and of supplying the necessary funds for carrying on the war.

ALL SHIPS

Protection Explained

This phase of the port's protection was explained to a group of newspaper reporters and photographers as they toured the defences under the guidance of an artillery colonel who commands the fortress areas.

An anti-submarine net stretches from shore to shore of the harbor. Midway across, two vessels swing apart or together to open or close the gate which provides the only passage.

Even if in fog or storm an enemy ship were to slip undiscovered past the examination boat and the fort and find the gate open, her troubles would not be over.

She might pass successfully through the gate but because of its narrowness even the thickest pea-soup fog would not conceal her. An alarm would be flashed to the shore defences and from both sides of the harbor guns would open fire.

Fire Covers Channel

These batteries are so placed their fire would cover the entire channel and the gunners know every square foot of the harbor. Here as well as at the outer forts, a constant watch is kept and in less than a minute after an alarm gunners are at their positions.

But there is little chance of a raider ever progressing that far even with extraordinary luck and audacity. To begin with, she would have to cross the Atlantic and approach the coast unobserved by constant naval and air patrols. The weather would have to be just right and the gate in the submarine net would have to be open. It never is except when an already-cleared ship is passing up or down.

Take No Chances

But the port defenders take no chances. That is why an innocent coastal ship that may have passed outward only the previous day undergoes examination as well as an unfamiliar vessel.

"You never can tell what may have happened to that ship in 24 hours or who may have taken her over since we last saw her," an officer explained.

If there is any doubt in the minds of the examining officials, the incoming ship is directed to an anchorage outside the gate and covered by the fort's guns. An instant's hesitation in obeying orders would probably bring a warning shot across her bow. Any further delay and the shots no longer would be mere warnings.

Troops Well Equipped

Foreign correspondents at Viborg where shown several Russian prisoners fresh from the Isthmus front. They appeared better-equipped and trained than prisoners taken earlier in the war.

Soviet warplanes tried to raid Helsingfors today, but were driven off by anti-aircraft fire after causing two alarms.

The first alarm wailed at 9:45 a.m. and was lifted at 11:10 a.m. (2:45 a.m. to 4:10 a.m., EST). The second came 20 minutes later and lasted to noon.

Finnish officials said the Russians had bombed 10 localities in Uusimaa Province— Helsingfors county—in Savo Province in the north and also a coast town on the Gulf of Bothnia yesterday.

They said 250 bombs were dropped but that casualties and material damage were slight.

"Enemy airmen again revealed brutal methods," an official statement declared. "In one instance, machine-gunning worshippers as they were leaving church in a small village, also machine-gunning one hospital and a passenger train. One bomb fell on the roof of a hospital but did not cause serious damage."

Polish Embassy at Holy See Charges Gestapo With Religious Persecution

Says Atrocities Aim at 'Extermination' of Catholic Poles

Claims at Least 14 Priests Shot and 5 Others Maltreated to Death

POPE READS REPORT

Polish Statement Says Diabolic Malice and Unequalled Cruelty Shown by Nazis

Vatican City, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Polish Embassy at the Holy See has made public a report charging the Gestapo—the Nazi secret police—and other authorities of the German-occupied section of Poland with persecution and atrocities which were said to be aimed at "extermination" of Catholic Polish inhabitants.

The report, issued as a pamphlet which Embassy officials indicated was based on information from priests, charged the Gestapo with shooting at least 14 priests and being responsible for the deaths of five others by maltreatment with closing churches and driving the Catholic religion underground, with beating, humiliating and imprisoning clergymen, and with forcing a mass migration of Poles from the archdioceses of Poznan and Gneizno.

Nazi's Deny Persecutions

(German authorities in Berlin declined to comment on the specific charge that 14 priests had been shot, but they admitted that priests were shot as "snipers" when arms were found in their homes. Authorized German sources denied there was persecution of Catholics in Poland and stated that churches were open for worship as usual).

The Polish report charges that persons expelled from their homes were left in the open country to shift for themselves and that boys and girls of 14 and younger were deported to Germany to be brought up under Nazi dostrines.

Polish Embassy officials said that the report was read by Pope Pius and August Cardinal Hlond, primate of Poland.

'Diabolical Malice' Charged

In charging that the Germans sought to exterminate the Catholic Polish inhabitants, the report said: "It is a real extermination, conceived with diabolic malice and carried out with unequalled cruelty."

It described the deportation of thousands of Poles, including priests in cattle cars from their homes to that part of Poland known as "General Government" Poland, with reports that many died on the trips.

(This referred to the section of Poland under German control but not joined to Germany under "permanent" annexation.)

Churches and buildings of religious orders of priests and nuns were confiscated by the Gestapo along with other property, the report charged, and the altars of churches and convents allegedly were profaned.

Gestapo Seizes Money

Naming persons and places in detail, the report charged:

At Gniezno the archdiocesan headquarters were closed by the Gestapo and funds of 80,000 zlotys (nominally about $16,000) were seized.

Soldiers occupied the seminary of Gniezno, with a German General living in the archbishop's palace.

The Gestapo was accused of terrorizing the Catholic clergy. "Dozens of priests are in prison, where they have been humiliated, beaten and mistreated," the report said. "Some have been deported to Germany and there is no news of them. Others are detained in concentration camps."

Mass Celebrated Clandestinely

Priests are beginning to say mass and administer the sacraments clandestinely in private houses, the report said.

Conditions in the archdiocese of Poznan were described as similar to those in the Gniezno region. Mgr. Valentino Dymek, Vicar General of Poznan, was said to be a prisoner in his own home.

About 50 priests were reported in prison in that archdiocese.

Catholic newspapers also were said to have been suppressed.

Millions of persons were reported to have been driven from their homes by the Germans. Tens of thousands of families were driven out after losing everything they possessed, with the Gestapo arresting from 500 to 1,500 persons nightly in raids on whole sections of cities.

ICE CUTTING ON BAY IN FULL SWING

Power saws are humming on the ice-covered stretches of the bay as three commercial ice companies of the city swung into the final week of action in harvesting the twelve thousand tons of ice that annually finds its way into ice houses of the city.

While a thickness of ice amounting to twelve inches was apparent when cutting operations started some few days ago, recent sub-zero weather has increased the thickness to twenty inches.

Absence of snow during the earlier part of the winter has resulted in the ice being of the finest quality harvested here in some years, ice company officials said today.

HARRY O. McGUIRE DIES IN DETROIT

Former Resident of Belleville and Prominent in Sports and "Y" Work

Harry O. (Dyke) McGuire, a former resident of Belleville, died in Detroit, Mich., on Sunday, Jan. 28th. To a host of friends in this city the announcement of his passing will bring sincere feelings of regret.

The late Mr. McGuire was born in Belleville about 59 years ago, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. James McGuire. He received his education in the local schools and from his earliest boyhood days he took an active part in sports and was a leader in promoting hockey and other athletic activities. In the playing of hockey he excelled and was a star player on the Belleville team which won the Ontario championship during the season 1904-05. He was a clean sportsman and held the respect of his associates and also that of his opponents. He "played the game" not only in sports, but in his other activities and by the public in general he was well thought of.

In the work of the Y.M.C.A. in this city Harry McGuire became interested at an early age and took an active part in the gymnasium classes and in the work among young boys, with whom he was popular. Later he decided to take up Y.M.C.A. work as a permanent vocation and for thirty-five years he served well the Association as secretary and physical director in various places some of which were Ottawa, Toronto, Galt and Hamilton. At one time he was physical director for the Detroit Red Wings hockey team, and at the time of his death he was Physical Director of the Fisher (Automobile Body Manufacturers) Branch of the Y. M. C. A. in Detroit.

Two years ago Harry McGuire visited his native city and old friends were pleased to renew acquaintance with him at that time. Wherever he made his home he was popular and highly esteemed. He is survived by his wife and to her the sympathy of Belleville friends will be extended.

Interment will be made in Belleville Cemetery; the funeral announcement will be made later.

Police Blotter

M. L. Detlor, Deseronto, reported the theft of goods from his parked automobile to police authorities on Saturday night. Mr. Detlor left his motor car parked in a city parking lot while making week-end purchases nearby. The most valuable article stolen was six pounds of soap, however.

City police were called to the Globe Cafe late Saturday night to quell a disturbance, allegedly caused my three young men who told police their home was in Read. The lads had been imbibing freely, but not well, police revealed. Besides making a general nuisance of themselves, the youths refused to pay for service rendered, that was until the police arrived when they paid up with haste. The proprietor refused to prefer charges of misconduct against the young men, however.

Following police investigations, however, charges of intoxication were preferred against the trio, while three others found themselves in the clutches of the law as the result of imbibing freely, but not well.

BRITISH-FRENCH MISSION ARRIVES AT BUCHAREST

Struggle for Control of Rumania's Oil Fields Reaches Showdown

STATEMENT GIVEN

Paper Says "Britain and France May Buy as Much Oil as They Want"

(By Robert Parker, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Bucharest, Jan. 29—(AP)—The struggle for control of Rumania's oil resources was intensified today with arrival by plane of a 25-member British-French mission followed shortly by a new group of German negotiators who came by train.

Arrival of the delegation followed a statement by a highly-placed person that Britain and France have indicated they may break off economic relations with Rumania unless the question of oil for Germany is settled satisfactorily.

Commenting on the situation, the newspaper Curentul declared Britain and France "can buy as much oil as they want from Rumania but have no right to oppose others getting their share."

The basis of the reported Allied representations is the Rumanian "oil dictatorship" under which Britain and France fear their concerns in Rumania will be forced to furnish oil for the German war machine.

(Informed sources in London termed the reported threat to break off economic relations as "extremely unlikely.")

Rumania Warned by Germany

Meanwhile, Germany is said to have warned Rumania that she will be forced to take "other measures' if she doesn't get larger quantities of Rumanian oil. To underline this need, it is reported, Germany told Bucharest oil is a matter of life or death for the Reich

There are unconfirmed rumors the British and French-controlled oil companies in Rumania are considering a campaign of passive resistance in their plants against any Rumanian attempts to require shipment of their product to Germany.

The British and French concerns along with United States companies control the bulk of Rumania's petroleum production

In reply to the reported Allied representations, the Rumanian cabinet is said to have argued that this country could not drop "economic co-operation" with Germany because more than 40 percent of her entire foreign trade lies in that quarter. Some officials contend it is reasonable for Rumania to do everything possible to avoid offence to Germany because the Reich's armies are near at hand as compared with those of the Allies

FIRST MEMBER OF C.A.S.F. TO GO TO IMPERIAL UNIT

Sergt. A. D. Hay Who Has Hometown in Every Province Given Commission

WITH COLDSTREAMS

(By Edwin Johnson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, Jan. 29— (CP Cable) Sergeant Andrew Drummond Hay, member of the First Provost Company of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who boasts of a home town in every province in Canada, has been recommended for a commission in the Coldstream guards. He began his officers' training course today.

Sergeant Hay becomes the first Canadian of the Dominion's First Division to be transferred to an Imperial unit for promotion. The step realizes an ambition of long standing' He had always hoped to be a member of the Coldstreams, as his father formerly commanded the regiment and a brother, Jimmy, is now serving as an officer with the unit.

During the Royal Tour of Canada last summer. Hay was among the select group singled out to serve as a bodyguard on the Royal train.

Latest Cold Reactions

The latest cold wave has brought a recurrence of plumbing problems in the military camp here. Pipes again are frozen in many billets and blow torches are worked overtime in an effort to ensure sufficient water supply. Some, however, had to cart buckets from a water system not affected by the frigid blasts.

Except for such handicaps, the boys have welcomed the more Canadian-like climate following the damp raw fog of recent weeks. The cold also has materially checked the spread of flu and other winter ailments.

Icy conditions on the parade ground necessitated temporary curtailment of outdoor exercises today but the general training program, which is well advanced, was not seriously affected.

Charles Rush Reelected Chairmen Tweed Fair Board

Directors Vote to Hold Fall Fair on October 8th and 9th

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Tweed, Jan. 29 (Special). — The directors of Tweed Fall Fair Board, meeting in the Council Chambers on Saturday afternoon, re-elected Mr. Charles Rush as president for the third successive term. Present at the annual meeting were Charles Rush, S. R. Curry, secretary-treasurer; W. E. Bateman, Ross Ketcheson, Harry Coulter, Dennis Flemming, Wm. Woods, T. C. Graham, S. H. Connor and W. H. Kingston.

The president expressed his sincere appreciation of the loyal cooperation of the officers and directors during the year, a year of the greatest harmony on the part of all concerned. Despite a falling off in gate receipts, the experience of a great many of the smaller fairs, the local Fair Board paid the full amount of prize money to exhibitors. The president brought from Mr. Carroll, his congratulations to the local board for their efforts to keep the Fair alive in the face of a number of obstacles, chief of which was the outbreak of the European war three weeks before the date of Tweed Fair.

The secretary in his report said that the amount of prize money was considerably in excess of that for several years previously. Lengthy discussion followed the financial report as the directors sought for ways of increasing the gate receipts and finishing the year with a credit balance instead of being "in the red". Revision of the prize list was made and several classes in the live stock sections were eliminated, including grade dairy cattle, pure bred Jerseys, sheep and certain classes of poultry, none of which are produced in the district served by Tweed Fair.

Field Crop Competition.

A successful field crop competition with ten district farmers growing urban oats was held during the year. On a motion of Wm. Woods and W. E. Bateman the directors decided to conduct a competition during 1940, specializing in barley.

Officers elected for the present year were: Hon. president, J. L. McGowan; president, Chas. Rush; first vice-president, T. C. Graham; second vice-president Harry Coulter; secretary-treasurer, S. R. Curry; directors, Dr. P. T. Bowlby, W. H. Craig, Stan Tufts, V. Healey, D. Flemming, Jas. Kinlin, J. W. Kingston, W. E. Bateman, W. K. McCaw, Ross Ketcheson, T. S. McCrea, S. B. Rollins, Burton Coulter, Wm. Woods, A. C. Blakely, J. White; honorary directors, W. E. Tummon, Reeve C. H. Kerr, Geo. Stokes, Dr. H. E. Welsh, M.L.A., C. A. Cameron, K.C., M.P.; auditors, F. W. Clark, S. H. Connor.

On motion of D. Flemming and Wm. Woods, the president and secretary were appointed as delegates to the Fall Fairs Convention to be held in Toronto on Feb. 15 and 16.

Fair On October 8 and 9.

Discussion of a date for Tweed Fall Fair occupied some time. It was the consensus of opinion that a later date would prove popular with the fair-goer. Having this in mind a motion was passed choosing Oct. 8 and 9 as the dates of Tweed Fair for 1940, nearly three weeks later than the 1939 date.

William A. Goodman Dies in 100th Year

Attributed Longevity to Temperance and Division of Life Into Three Parts

Lindsay, Ont., Jan. 29—(CP)—Oldest resident of this Victoria County town, William Alfred Goodwin, died Sunday in his 100th year while visiting a daughter in nearby Oshawa.

A few weeks ago, Mr. Goodwin said he attributed his longevity to temperance and to the division of the day into three parts, eight hours of work, eight hours of play and eight hours of sleep.

Native of England, Mr. Goodwin came to Canada as a boy and had resided here since 1859 during which time he organized a business now conducted by his son. He also had lived in Newcastle and Cobourg, Ont., and Rochester, N.Y.

An artist, he was well-known for his landscapes painted from scenery in Victoria and Haliburton counties.

Peterboro, Ont., Jan. 29 — (CP)—Felix Mueller was remanded when he appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley today.

He was arrested on a vagrancy charge when he recently applied at the police station for a night's lodging and in reply to questioning by P. C. "Are you thinking of proceeding under the War Measures Act?" the magistrate asked, when a further remand was asked.

PICTON LAWYER HOST AT DINNER

Fred Ward Entertains Members of Hunting Camp to Turkey Dinner

Dining rooms of the Hotel Gilbert, Trenton, rang to the stories, tall and otherwise of the "Big Eddy Hunting Camp", of Millbridge on Friday night, when F. L. Ward, K.C., Picton was the host at a turkey dinner to members of that organization.

Many and varied were the stories and anecdotes of the "hunt" that regaled the diners, with Mine Host Ward entertaining the gathering with a sparkling yarn of the shooting of a two hundred pound buck last year.

Members present came from Frankford, Wooler and Picton. A highlight of the party was the declaration of "One-Shot" Kelly, famous nimrod as to where and when he would shoot the biggest bear in the north country, next year. The club expressed appreciation of Mr .Ward's hospitality.

NET OPERATING PROFIT $357,454 SHOWN BY CBC

Fixed Assets of Corporation Increased by $364,561 in Year to March 31, 1939

PROGRAM OUTLAY

Ottawa, Jan. 29.—(CP)—A net operating surplus of $357,454 for the year ending March 31, 1939, is shown in the annual report of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation released by the Board of Governors of the C.B.C. today.

Fixed assets of the corporation were increased by 346,561, due largely to the construction of new transmitters in the Maritimes and in the Prairies. These transmittess, CBA at Sackville, N.B., and CBK at Watrous, Sask., incomplete at the end of March, 1939, cost approximately $500,000 and were financed out of the government loan already voted.

The Corporation paid $50,000 off the first government loan.. The income for the fiscal year, derived from the sale of licenses and a limited amount of commercial revenue, totalled $3,311,440.

Uses Made of Revenue

The production of programs and the improvements and upkeep of facilities are the only uses made of revenue by the corporation. Operating costs showed that during the year under review 50.77 per cent of the budget was used for programs, 20.45 per cent for wire lines for transmitting programs, 16.73 per cent for the operation of CBC stations; 7.05 per cent for depreciation 4.86 per cent for administration expenses and .59 per cent for interest on loans.

Comparison with figures of the previous year shows that administration costs were reduced, 6.77 per cent having been expended for this purpose during the period under review. An increase in expenditures on programs was noted, 50.27 per cent having been used for this purpose during the preceding year.

Other costs in percentage terms for the previous year showed that 24.77 was used for wire lines, 14.03 for the operation of CBC stations, and 4.93 for depreciation. No interest on loans was paid that year.

POLICE COURT

Clifford Bouchard, alias Frenchy Belanger, former flyweight boxing champion, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. in local police court today charged with common intoxication. Bouchard pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve 14 days in the common jail after revealing he could not meet the assessed fine. Bouchard's term was dated from the time of his arrest on Saturday at his request.

Mrs. Anita Dillabough, Toronto, pleaded guilty to eight charges of obtaining goods and money by fraud, to wit by the issuance of worthless cheques. The cheques were issued in Belleville and cashed by local merchants for goods and cash during the past six weeks.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., introduced Mrs. Dillabough's list of previous convictions, which revealed to the court the woman had been convicted of similar charges and had served jail terms for issuing worthless cheques in Toronto.

"This young lady is willing to make restitution and I might add she has an eleven-months old baby at home", pleaded Robert Pringle, local barrister, who appeared on behalf of the accused.

"I cannot condone her acts and suggest a Reformatory sentence", interrupted Mr. Donnan. His Worship remanded the woman for sentence, stating he desired time in which to consider the entire matter.

In all six men appeared charged with drunkenness, three of whom paid the assessed fine of "ten and costs", while the remaining trio were given 14 days in default thereof.

WALK 18 MILES ON LAKE ONTARIO

U. S. Coast Guard Patrol Members Start Back on 18 Mile Trek

Sackets Harbor, N. Y., Jan. 29—(AP)—Two members of the United States coast guard patrol at Galloups Island, who walked 18 miles over frozen Lake Ontario in subzero weather yesterday to collect mail accumulated here since New Year's, were on their homeward trek across the ice today.

The two patrolmen, Garret Gregory and Elroy Stevens, both 21, are believed to be the first coast guardsmen to cross the ice by foot to the mainland in mid-winter.

They covered the 18 miles to Sackets Harbor on Eastern Lake Ontario in six hours yesterday. Both suffered second degree frost bites. The patrolmen took a shorter route —10 miles—on the return trip, starting out on the ice from Snowshoe Point near Henderson.

War Service Club Entertains Soldiers

The newly-formed War Service Club of the local Y.M.C.A. and city service clubs lost little time in going into action after its formation and organization in which P. C. MacLaurin, was elected president; Joe Shortt, secretary; Gardner Duff, chairman of entertainment; and Norman Edwards, chairman in charge of the "Soldiers Cosy Corner".

The latter is a corner in the main lobby of the "Y" building which has been equipped and set aside for the use of His Majesty's Forces on leave or when they are in the city. Ping-pong, checkers, chess and other games have been provided while free writing materials are available for the use of the troops.

Inaugurating a series of concerts which will take place every Wednesday and Sunday evenings, the concert company of the club went to the Royal Canadian Air Force base at Trenton last night where they were royally received by the personnel after a musical evening that was greatly enjoyed by the airmen and officers.

Under the chairmanship of Gardner Duff, the octette composed of Messrs. Moorman, Burrows, Howard, Colclough, Duff, Jobson, Evans and Bankier gave three numbers while the Belleville Male Quartette of Messrs. Moorman, Bankier, Howard and Evans sang several selections.

Instrumental solos by Leo Riggs, piano, received vociferous acclaim to which Belleville's star artist generously replied, and Reg. Wardle whose trombone mastery brought him well deserved applause rounded out a highly enjoyable program.

BREAK OCCURS IN WATER MAIN

Tweed Users Without Water for Nearly Two Days

Tweed, Jan. 29.— (Special)—Tweed Waterworks System suffered a two-day disruption on Friday and Saturday when a break occurred in the water main on North Victoria Street. Difficulty in locating the trouble until Saturday afternoon, despite continuous effort on the part of the Waterworks Commission, resulted in the town being entirely without water from early Friday morning. The water-users on Victoria will be without water until repairs have been effected. Meanwhile service has been restored to the remainder of the town.

Mrr. Edwin Foster's milk truck suffered considerable damage on Saturday afternoon when it collided with Mr. W. H. Sayers' automobile on No. 37 north of the narrow bridge at Chapman's Corners. Chief C. Hayes investigated the accident and found that the slippery condition of the road was responsible for the accident.

WEE SAN MARINO 'KEEPS IN RIGHT' WITH ITALY

San Marino, Jan. 29—(AP)—If Italy should get into the war she is sure of the full moral support of the world's smallest republic—San Marino—and perhaps a couple of dozen San Marino soldiers.

San Marino lies in Northern Italy a few miles inland from the Adriatic port of Rimini. Its 14,000 inhabitants speak and act like Italians, although they have their own dialect. They are proud of their 16 centuries of independent existence.

Twenty-one San Marinese fought for Italy during the first Great Africa to fight in Italy's Ethiopian Afria to fight in Italy's Ethiopian campaign. There were two volunteers in Spain.

The country's foreign policy is simple — keep in right with Italy. The latter practically supports to the republic with an annual payment of 3,500,000 lire ($175,000). In return, San Marino buys almost everything from Italy.

Czech Dairyman Seeks Information in Canada

Officials of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association have other work on their hands beside the arrangement and promotion of dairy shows and cheese exhibition.

Indicative of the widespread fame of this organization, Chief Dairy Grader James L. Irwin received a letter a few days ago from a Czech, now resident in London, England, inquiring about possibilities in the dairying industry.

According to the letter, D. R. Wittmann, the Czech in question has been associated for many years with dairying interests in his native country and has been employed as a tehnical expert of the Cheesemakers' Association of Czech-Slovakia.

Intending to emigrate here as soon as possible, the writer naturally wished to associate himself with the work with which he is mostly familiar.

The bride, Miss Alice Smith, said after the experience:

"I was clasping my hands as I knelt and clenched them tightly when I heard the siren. I was a bit afraid but kept my head down and the minister went on with the service."

The bridegroom, Colin Weston of the Royal Artillery, said he was not disturbed by the siren.

GERMAN PLANES RENEW RAIDS ON ENGLAND

Nazis Attempting "Lightning War" Against Shipping

Two More German Planes Fly Over English Coast Today but Both Driven Off by Machine-Gun Fire

NO WARNING SOUNDED

15 to 20 German Planes Take Part in Yesterday's Onslaught Which Extended for 700 Miles—Neutral Shipping Suffers

London, Jan. 30 —(CP)— Germany today renewed widespread air attacks on shipping along the east coast of the British Isles and Britain announced one of the raiders had been shot down.

Shore watchers saw one British patrol vessel attacked and escaped unharmed. Jets of water rose from either side as she zigzagged to dodge two bombs dropped from a low-flying plane.

Invaders Chased

British fighters then chased the invader into the clouds where the pursuit continued. Fighters were in action against other German planes over several east coast towns.

The attacks on shipping were preceded by scouting flights which were fended off.

Radio listeners heard an SOS from an unidentified steamship saying "we are being attacked by enemy aircraft."

The heaviest attacks seemed to be centred on the east coast near Yarmouth.

Results "are not yet known", said the Air Ministry's first announcement. The attacker was pursued by a Royal Air Force fighter plane and coastal patrol machines.

In addition to a continuation of the war on shipping—it was estimated that from 15 to 20 German planes took part yesterday, attacking 14 vessels with bombs and machine gun fire—German planes flew low over British coastal towns today.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Effective temperature! People often say that it is warmer or colder when the mercury has not budged. And they are right in a sense, as they are speaking in terms of personal feelings. The thermometer, let us say, stands at 20 degrees and the wind is blowing 15 miles an hour. If the wind drops to a calm, it feels appreciably warmer; but if the wind speed rises to 25 miles an hour, it feels much colder. There are many combinations of air temperature, humidity and wind speed which feel comfortable. The ventilating engineers call this combination "effective temperature". The ideal effective temperature indoors is that combination of temperature, humidity, and air movement when the loss of body heat just balances its production. It differs from person to person.

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett Justice of the Peace For Surrey County

Dorking, Surrey, England, Jan. 30—(CP Cable)—Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett today was appointed a Justice of the Peace for Surrey and will be attached to the Dorking Bench.

It was understood the title would be purely honorary in Mr. Bennett's case although Justices of the Peace frequently rule on minor offences in Britain.

The former Canadian Prime Minister's residence is at nearby Mickleham. Record searchers said it was believed to be the first time that a former Prime Minister of any Dominion had been appointed a Justice of the Peace in Britain.

FOUR MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT GO TO SENATE

Hon. J. C. Elliott, Former Post Master General, is Ontario Nominee

LONG PUBLIC CAREER

Ottawa, Jan. 30 (CP)—Four Liberal members of parliament, a Prairie farmer and a doctor have been elevated to the Senate. Four vacancies in Quebec and three in Ontario still remain unfilled.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced last night that the six new Senators are J. Fernand Fafard, Quebec; Hon. J. C. Elliott, Ontario; Arthur L. Beaubien, Manitoba; Donald MacLennan, Nova Scotia; John J. Stevenson, Saskatchewan; and Dr. Aristide Blais, Alberta.

Other appointments probably will be made before the March 26 general election to bring the Upper House up to its full membership of 96. Liberals now have 38 members and Conservatives 51.

Mr. Elliott, member for Middlesex West, was Postmaster General from 1935 until a year ago, when ill health forced him to drop the portfolio. The Prime Minister said in the announcement, however, that "in 12 months since his release from the arduous duties of office his health has been almost wholly restored."

U. S. PRESIDENT 58 YEARS OLD

"Fit as a Fiddle" According to His Physician and Ready for Any Task

Washington, Jan. 30 — (AP)— President Roosevelt is 58 years old today, and "fit as a fiddle" for either another hard political campaign or the tapering off of a spectacular career in the United States' highest public office.

Which course he will choose remains a mystery. Whatever the decision may be, his physician, Rear Admiral Ross McIntire, says that Mr. Roosevelt is in as "perfect condition as any man of his age could be" for the years ahead.

Mr. Roosevelt celebrated his birthday anniversary in a quiet and traditional manner. Throughout the nation, however, the day was observed with parties and programs to raise funds for a campaign to fight infantile paralysis. The President was taking recognition of that campaign, in a brief broadcast address tonight.

Quintuplet Girls Born in Cairo Says Report Which is Unconfirmed

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 30 — (AP)— Unconfirmed reports were received here today that quintuplets, all girls, were born yesterday to Sayeda Gehessa, wife of an Egyptian clerk. The mother has seven other children, six of them sons.

The Cairo report of quintuplets lacks authoritative confirmation. Since the birth of the Dionne quintuplets in May, 1934, there have been many reports of such births.

London, Jan. 30—(CP) — The Reuters News Agency today reported birth of quintuplets to the wife of an Egyptian baker named Sayed Hamda Geheza. The report, dated at Cairo, did not say whether the children lived.

FRENCH ARTILLERY SHELL GERMAN LABORBATTALIONS

Renewed Snowfall, However, Clamps Wintry Hand on Military Activities

NATION WARNED

Daladier States Total War With Germany "Cannot be Long in Breaking"

Paris, Jan. 30 (AP) — Renewed snowfall along the western front today again clamped a wintry hand on military activities.

French artillery, however, was active in the Vosges Mountains and along the Rhine, military sources said, shelling German labor battalions which apparently were strengthening the Siegfried Line fortifications.

Characterizing Adolf Hitler as a destroyer and Germans as slaves, Premier Edouard Daladier warned the French nation last night that total war with Germany "cannot be long in breaking".

His broadcast address, on the eve of the seventh anniversary of Hitler's rise to power in Germany, was "one of the most terrible indictments of any man ever muttered", said the continental edition of the London Daily Mail.

Domination Different.

Daladier said, "Germany is seeking to establish a domination of the world which is absolutely different from all that history has known so far.

MINISTER PULLS MAN TO SAFETY

Tries for Hour to Dissuade Him From Jumping From Building

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 30 (CP)—D. C. Vandercook, an executive of the International Correspondence Schools, was pulled to safety today by his minister who had tried for an hour to dissuade him from jumping from a building.

Vandercook was found at 2 a.m. by a watchman, hanging over the staircase well on the fifth floor of the building.

Police and firemen were summoned. They climbed to a floor below Vandercook and urged him to abandon his avowed intent to leap.

Then Reverend Harold Case appeared. He approached Vandercook and entreated him to get back.

Suddenly Vandercook swung back over the railway and dashed up a flight of steps to the roof. While police trained a searchlight on him, he stood on a ledge until Dr. Case edged close to him and then half led, half dragged him to safety.

Story From Zurich Also Says Fuehrer May Proclaim Self King of Britain and Poland on His 51st Birthday—Correspondent Says Nazis Predict Terrific Offensive When Weather Clears

Paris, Jan. 30 —(CP—Havas)— Adolf Hitler will celebrate his 51st birthday April 20 by proclaiming himself Emperor of the Reich and Austria, King of Poland, King of Great Britain—with Field Marshal Herman Goering as Viceroy— according to a Zurich dispatch published today in Le Journal.

The correspondent, George Blum, said Great Britain would be administered after a Nazi victory by three statthalters, one each for England, Scotland and Wales. They would be assisted by 96 gauleiters. All appointments already have been made, it was said

(A statthalter is an official of the Reich government serving as governor of the federated provinces of which Germany is composed. He is the link between national and local governments. A gauleiter is a regional leader of the Nazi party. These two offices are often held by the same man.)

"In Berlin Nazi party agents go about nowadays saying a terrific offensive will be launched as soon as weather conditions permit," the correspondent said. "They predict that in three months Great Britain will have been brought to her knees."

Arctic Cold Grips America, Europe: Weather Unbalanced

Washington, Jan. 30—(AP)—The world's weather has gone off balance.

While Canadians and Americans may think they have been having a severe spell of cold weather, it has not been as disagreeable as they might have expected, judging from past weather performances.

The people of northern Europe have been having their coldest storms in half a century. Ordinarily when severe cold strikes that part of the globe, similar conditions prevail in the northern section of North America, according to R. H. Weightman, official forecaster of the United States Weather Bureau.

Even the bitter cold experienced here has not equalled the record set by the cold spell in Europe. The northeast has been having comparatively mild weather.

Cold Out of Arctic

Both North America and Europe get most of their cold weather from the winds which whistle down out of the Arctic and Sub-Arctic. Most of the storms over the British Isles, such as th e of the last week, Weightman explained, come from low pressure areas arising in the vicinity of Iceland.

Usually the icy temperatures of the winds are greatly modified in sweeping over North Atlantic seas, and the blasts, reaching England and Northern France, cause the foggy weather of London. However, under extreme conditions they fail to lose their frigidity over the ocean and carry violent icy storms across England and France and as far south as Northern Italy.

Mackenzie River Basin

In much the same way Canada and the United States get most of their snow and freezing weather from air sucked in through the giant funnel of the Mackenzie River basin in Canada's northwest territories. The weather of the two continents frequently balances as the Arctic air masses sweep southward.

"These storms over North America seem to break out of the Mackenzie basin as the pressure of air increases throughout that area," Weightman explained. "Then they sweep southward, sometimes as far as Alabama and Mississippi, as they did in recent weeks."

The recent extreme cold which has aided Finland in its defence against Russian invasion is probably due to northeast winds sweeping down from the Arctic, Weightman said.

REPORTS OF ATTEMPT TO SINK FREIGHTER DENIED BY COMMISSION

Philadelphia, Jan. 30—(AP)— United States Maritime Commission officials and spokesmen for the Sun Shipbuilding Company today denied reports published here that an attempt had been made to sink the freighter Mormacmail when the vessel was launched at Chester Jan. 11.

The statements contradicted the reports that saboteurs had opened the sea cocks of the 11,735-ton ship a short time before it was to slide down the ways, only to have the attempt discovered at the last minute.

EASIER CREDIT URGED BY BANKERS TO HELP PRODUCTION

London, Jan. 30—(CP)— Easier credit arrangements for British manufacturers of munitions, clothing and food products were urged on bankers today by Colin F Campbell, Chairman of the National Provincial Bank, at a general stockholders' meeting.

Emphasizing the need for building up the export trade, Mr. Campbell said that Franco-British cooperation, coupled with world sympathy for the Allies in their fight against Germany, made the prospects of British commerce brighter than they were during the last war.

DUTY ACT DEBATED

Col. George Drew Charges Magna Charta Rights Denied by Bill as Drafted

Toronto, Jan. 30 —(CP)— Debate on the two-year term for municipally-elected bodies will be resumed in the Ontario legislature today. The bill, which provides the term will be effective Feb. 1, 1941 unless a municipality votes itself out of its provisions, is in committee stage where it has met determined Conservative opposition.

As the House rose yesterday, Premier Hepburn announced the measure would be called again today. When it is disposed of the House will proceed with committee work on the legislation to amend the Succession Duty Act. The amending bill passed second reading yesterday with division.

No Changes in Bill

The government has announced its determination to see its two-year municipal term bill go through without major changes. The bill in its present form is acceptable to Liberal caucus and when it was last debated in the House, provincial secretary Harry Nixon said the government was not disposed to accept any opposition-sponsored changes.

Butter by Tons Salvaged From Sea On British Coast

30-MILLION EXPANSION PLAN OF COMPANY

Pittsburgh, Jan. 30—(AP)— With the demand for aluminum at an all-time high, the Aluminum Company of America today disclosed plans for a $30,000,000 expansion supplementing the recently completed $26,000,000 building program started in 1937.

President Roy A. Hunt said the program, like the one just completed, was based on anticipated increases in markets for aluminum.

Young Latvian Awakes to Find Self Alone in Hulk of Bombed Liner

London, Jan. 30 (CP). — The bombed hulk of the Latvian steamship Tautmila, victim of German aerial attacks in the North Sea yesterday, floated ashore near an east coast city today.

Watchers along the shore were astonished a few minutes later when a strange figure clambered down the hull and came toward them. It was a young man dressed, apparently, in every stitch of clothing he owned. He had on pajamas, two shirts, overalls, and an overcoat. Around his head a napkin had been wrapped like a turban and another encircled his waist in lieu of a belt.

Standing before a warm fire, he gave his name as Bruno Adlers, his age as 23, and said he was a Latvian. Yesterday at about 9 a.m. the vessel was bombed by German planes and four missiles fell directly on the ship's deck. Adlers was knocked unconscious. When he awoke he was alone in the drifting hulk.

Fifteen survivors of the Tautmila, including the skipper and his wife, were landed at a British port last night. Seven others were believed lost.

Young Adlers simply waited while the ship moved slowly toward shore and this morning when its keel crunched on sand, he let himself safely down to the feel of ground beneath his feet.

Train is Delayed 28 Hours in Run Due to Storms

British Government Warns People to Use Coal, Gas, Electricity Sparingly

WORST IN 46 YEARS

Transport System Remains Partially Paralyzed as Result of Weather of Past Few Days

London, Jan. 30 (CP)—A "lost" train arrived from Scotland 28 hours late today as Britain was bogged down by the worst winter storm in 46 years. The government warned people to use coal, gas and electricity sparingly.

Although railway companies reported that conditions on the main lines were slightly better than yesterday, when the tie-up was described as the worst in Britain's history, transport system remained partially paralyzed by the freak weather.

Train schedules in most London suburban areas were near normal, although it was said that in some sections traffic conditions had "deteriorated."

Buses, taxicabs and subway trains in London were running almost normally.

The roof of a Southampton garage collapsed, burying 100 vehicles.

Brothers Introduced After 30 Years As Mess Entertains

Halifax, Jan. 30—(CP)— Members of the Royal Canadian Artillery Sergeant's Mess at Halifax were playing hosts to visting Royal Navy men.

Introductions were being made. Quartermaster Sergeant C. P. Collicott of the Royal Canadian Ordinance Corps, was introduced to Petty Officer Ralph Collicott of the Royal Navy.

The two men looked at one another hesitantly.

"I say," queried the naval man, "you wouldn't happen to be my brother, would you?"

"Gosh, I believe I am," said the Quartermaster Sergeant.

And he was. The men hadn't seen each other for 30 years.

Waterway Project Too Costly Now Says Montrealer

Montreal, Jan. 30—(CP)—Canada cannot afford to embark on a project as costly as the St. Lawrence Waterway Plan under present conditions, President Ross Clarkson told members at the annual meeting of the Montreal Board of Trade here today.

The board opposed the plan "vigorously and consistently" after a careful study of the question, he said. He believed the possible navigation and Hydro benefits had been overestimated and the cost of the plan underestimated.

"No power requirement anywhere in the central provinces during the present war is likely to develop that cannot be met entirely from Canadian sources, if public and privately owned sites are included," Mr. Clarkson said.

He believed the proposed seaway would take traffic from railways and ocean ports on the St. Lawrence where facilities have been provided "at great cost to the country."

The anniversary was not a holiday as in other years. German workers went to offices and factories as usual. Residents were told not to hang out German flags.

47 Resolutions Advocate Roosevelt For Third Term

Columbus, O., Jan. 30 (AP) — Forty-seven resolutions advocating a third term for President Roosevelt became the liviest issue at the United Mine Workers convention today.

Speculation on what action the convention would take on the proposals, especially since they conflict with John L. Lewis' stand, preceded the resolutions committee's report.

The U.M.W. President not only predicted "ignominous defeat" for a third-term campaign, but urged his 2,400 delegates to withhold immediate endorsement of a presidential candidate.

There were many, however, who believed Lewis, despite his denunciation of the Democratic party for "breaking faith" with labor, was not terribly angry with Mr. Roosevelt.

They believed their leader still had great admiration for Mr. Roosevelt and would support him for reelection if the Democrats granted the Congress of Industrial Organizations' requests for more concessions to labor.

21,460,000 Coppers Issued By Canada in 1939

Ottawa, Jan. 30—(CP)— More than 21,000,000 one-cent pieces were issued at the Royal Canadian Mint during the calendar year 1939 a report from the mint showed today.

Total value of all coins issued was $3,329,632, including 1,220,732 $1 pieces, 288,000 50-cent pieces, 3,469,600 quarters, 5,619,000 10-cent pieces, 6,420,000 five-cent pieces and 21,460,000 one-cent pieces.

The output of one-cent pieces was stepped up late in the year as the mint worked overtime to meet the demand for bronze coins needed for change in the Christmas retail trade.

HELEN EURETTA BUSH
(Contributed)

On Monday, January 22nd., the oldest living resident of the village of Frankford, in the person of Helen Euretta Wright, relict of the late William R. Bush, died in her 92nd. year.

Born at Picton, on Jan. 3rd., 1849, a child of Dougall and Mahally Wright, the deceased came to Frankford village at the age of three, with her parents, occupying the home known to the older residents as the John McCullough property, now rebuilt and occupied by Mrs. Matilda Hinds, where the family remained for a year, Mr. Wright having obtained a contract in the construction of the road from Trenton to Frankford, now Highway No. 33, on the west side of the river. Following the completion of his contract, Mr. Wright purchased government grant land in the 9th. concession of Murray, the land now owned and occupied as the Bird and Lennox farms, and where the family resided until the year 1869, when her parents moved back to Prince Edward County, near Rednersville, where Mr. Wright passed away at the age of 66, in 1876, her mother surviving to the age of 86, passing away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Irvine, then of Melville. Mr. Wright might be remembered by some of the oldest residents in his capacity of local minister, officiating in many of the local parishes of Frankford and vicinity. Of a family of twelve children, the late deceased was the youngest, and survived to the greatest age.

The deceased was married, in Dec, 1869, to William R. Bush, who, with his brothers and family occupied adjoining farms to the Wright property in Murray, and who predeceased her eleven years past, passing away on the 20th. of Feburary, 1928, at their home in Frankford, following a stroke. To them were born four children, Herbert, now occupying the parental farm in Murray; Asenath, (Mrs. H. B. Preston) of Kingston; James, deceased January, 1928; and Jennie, (Mrs. H. R. Nugent) who, with her daughter, Clute, resided with her mother in Frankford.

About 26 years ago, the deceased with her family retired from the farm, and moved to Stockdale village, purchasing the building now used as the United Church parsonage, and which, in 1923, they exchanged for the parsonage dwelling in Frankford village, on North Trent street, which the deceased occupied until her death.

The deceased had been in poor health the last two years although not confined to her bed until very recently. On the Thursday evening preceding her death she slipped on the stairs leading to her room, and although no serious injuries were inflicted, the shock, with her advanced age resulted in her death, which came very suddenly, on Monday morning following.

The funeral obsequies were held at her late home, on Wednesday afternoon, services being rendered by Rev. J. F. Lane, United Church pastor, after which the remains were interred in Stockdale cemetery.

The bearers were G. W. Arnott, W. C. Morrow, Wilmot Scott, H. J. Madill, P. N. Bell and C. R. Turley.

"Dear Lord—Thou art my helper, me sustain,
Sooth Thou my spirit's longing, and the pain,
Bring Thou invited sleep, though long delayed,
As on Thy breast I rest,—all unafraid."

MRS. M. E. (JOLLIFFE) DENIKE, (Havelock)

Mrs. Minnie E. Denike, wife of Mr. A. C. Denike of Havelock, Ont. and daughter of the late Rev. T. W. Jolliffe, died at the family residence in Havelock on Monday, Jan. 29th.

New Composition By Reg Hinchey To Be Played

While it may be a far cry from designing garments for the company with which he has been associated for a large number of years, to writing band arrangements and composing overtures and other pieces of music, Mr. Reg. Hinchey, one of Belleville's best contributions to the world of music will shortly enjoy the thrill that must come to hearing one's composition played for the first time.

Author of many compositions, Mr. Hinchey has composed an overture for orchestra and band, that will shortly be heard over the air waves. But first, Belleville will have the opportunity to hear the composition that, according to critics who have played and heard it, is the best to come from the Hinchey pen in some time.

In writing it, Mr Hinchey paid tribute to another of Belleville's famous musical sons. The new overture is called "Riggsonia" and is dedicated to Belleville's own Leo Riggs, famous pianist and musician. The new score will be taken to Toronto this week where it will go into rehearsal with a large musical organization, before being played in Belleville for the first time.

Incidentally, Mr. Hinchey's arrangement of the famous "Liebestraume" was played over a nation-wide network of Canadian radio stations last Sunday evening by the Toronto Symphony Band.

Daniels led in prayer, Mr. Manly Mitchell read the Scripture, Miss Lorena Haight read a missionary poem.

Miss Helen Thompson presided and Don Alexander was secretary. Miss E. Thompson and Mr. Gonsolus submitted the auditors report for 1939.

Miss Mary Kerr convener of the missionary committee then took charge of the meeting and after reviewing the preface to E. Stanley Jones' book on "Moving Millions" called on Miss Dorothy Wannacott, Miss Betty Redfern, Miss Bedal, Miss Marjorie Sykes, Miss Eva Smith, who very ably presented different parts of Life in India.

After games ably directed by Miss Jean Matthews the meeting closed in the usual way.

BRITISH RAILWAY SERVICES RESPOND

Unprecedented Demands of War Crowd Railways and Bring Changes

London, Jan. 30—(CP) — Trust the British to handle this business of wartime train inconveniences with their customary politeness.

On the high iron fence in front of Charing Cross station this ingenious sign appears: "Food, shells and fuel must come first. If trains are crowded, do you mind?"

It's another way of pointing to the manner in which the railways have been affected by wartime demands. More than 5,500 special trains for the conveyance of troops and munitions were run during the first three months of the war but passenger service of a sort still was maintained.

Take the London North Eastern Railway, for example. The line is running 80 per cent of the pre-war service. The morning rush of commuters has compressed itself from 7.30-9.30 to 7.30-9 and that means bigger loads for fewer trains.

"The early morning service is affected adversely by the blackout and one late train may mean many late trains," said Col. H. H. Mauldin, divisional general manager for the L.N.E.R. southern area. He held out the hope for more punctual trains in spring "but it all depends on what other conditions may be like by then."

War conditions have brought some new wrinkles in the freight business. For instance, transport of gas cylinders for barrage balloons has created an entirely new type of traffic. The railways use special cars, known as "lowfits" whose sides and ends drop. Road vehicles are run directly on the cars with their load of cylinders and this obviates load transfers.

A large number of freight cars—called good wagons over here—have been converted to carry explosives. Much ingenuity has been displayed in the methods adopted in designing and adapting fittings, such as special racks for shells and bombs.

Mother Surprised At Public Interest

Central City, Pa., Jan. 30—(AP)—Propped up in a bed, Mrs. Roy Custer expressed surprise today that anyone should be interested in her and her two-day-old baby.

"Why it was nothing—it was all over in less than an hour," said the 28-year-old mother, explaining about the stork's visit at 5 a.m. Sunday when only her husband was in their snow-bound, windswept hillside shack to help.

"We wanted to get a girl to come in but no girl wants to come up here because they all have fellows and they're afraid the fellows can't get up the drifts to see them," interrupted the 38-year-old husband.

He was still grimy with coal dust from a mine where he had just returned from work.

"There are no neighbors near here who could get through the snowdrifts," went on Custer. "I done everything I could. I washed it and dressed it and then it slept after it ate."

YARNING BETWEEN BATTLES IN FINLAND

Two Finnish soldiers lie on the straw of the barn in which they are billeted between battles and tell each other of their experiences in fighting the Red Russian invaders. They laugh and joke about their adventures at the front, but behind the laughter is the grim determination to die rather than see the banner of the hammer and sickle over Finland.

FINNISH CITIES DIG SELVES OUT

Russian Air Raids Seen as Attempt to Offset Major Defeats on Land

(By Wade Werner, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Helsingfors, Jan. 30—(AP)—Mass air attacks deep within Finland were viewed by Finns today as Soviet Russian strategy to offset reverses on the land fronts.

A half-dozen cities dug out from the wreckage of the war's heaviest aerial assault in which more than 1,000 bombs were dropped yesterday on southern areas.

At least 53 persons were known to be dead and casualties were expected to go higher. Thirty persons died at Abo (Turku), target of a three-hour bombing.

A field hospital behind the Finnish lines at the Karelian Isthmus front was wrecked by a bomb and four women and 19 wounded soldiers and hospital attendants killed.

"I lost consciousness and I don't remember how I got out," said a wounded soldier who escaped from the second floor of the wrecked building.

Estimate 50 Killed

(Reuters News Agency said 50 persons were killed and 200 injured in a raid on the Finnish naval base of Hangoe).

Fires flared in a half dozen cities including Hangoe. Casualties were reported in raids on Tammersfors (Tampere), industrial centre north of the capital, Borga (Porvoo) and other centres.

The Finns reported five of 50 planes were brought down over Abo and one at Helsingfors, where raiders were beaten off four times by pursuit ships and anti-aircraft fire.

8 Hospitals Bombed

The known dead of yesterday already exceeded the total reported by the Finnish high command killed in enemy raids last week. In a review of last week's air raids, the Finns said 24 persons were killed and 56 wounded. The Review charged that eight hospitals "clearly marked with the international emblem" (Red Cross) were attacked with bombs and machine-guns.

(The Russian high command in a report of yesterday's activities said "Seven enemy planes were brought down in various districts" and that "Soviet aviation made reconnoitring and bombing flights.")

Reporting new successes on the Lake Ladoga front, the Finnish high command yesterday said 1,250 Russian soldiers had been left dead on the battlefields.

(Finnish communiques have not listed Finnish war front casualties).

REICH INSULTED, NAZI DECLARES

German Ambassador to Holy See Denies Polish Persecution Charges

Berlin, Jan. 30 (AP).—Diego von Bergen, German ambassador to the Holy See, has called attention of the Papal Secretary of State to what he termed "prejudiced broadcasts, insulting to the Reich" on Polish conditions, informed sources said today.

Wilhelmstrasse circles said the German diplomat's stand amounted to a "demarche"—a formal diplomatic move.

(The Vatican radio station last week broadcast accounts critical of German treatment of the civil and clerical population in the conquered areas of Poland, and the Polish Embassy at the Vatican has issued similar charges. Vatican officials have withheld comment, and their newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, has not carried the stories.)

Not Church Pronouncements.

(The Vatican radio station is under church control, but the Polish accounts broadcast were not official pronouncements of the church.

(The Polish Embassy produced its charges in a pamphlet, said by Embassy officials to be based on reports to the Vatican from August Cardinal Hlond, Primate of Poland. The pamphlet charged that Catholic Poles were suffering mass shootings, religious persecution and expulsion from their homes.)

Arthur Greiser, German Governor of Posnon, Polish district annexed by Germany, claimed Poles are "much happier under German rule than they ever were under the Polish regime."

So long as they do not meddle in politics, priests have not been molested, he said, and only one priest has been shot in the district, this execution following a court martial.

(The Polish Embassy's pamphlet said fourteen priests had been shot to death.)

The priest mentioned by Greiser was identified as the Vicar of the Cathedral at Gnesen, formerly Gniezno. A military court found him guilty of inciting other Poles to sniping.

Polish Jews no longer will be permitted to emigrate, authorities of the Jewish community have been informed, because such emigrants have been joining the Polish Legion in France.

Previously, Polish Jews in concentration camps have been released on producing evidence that their immediate emigration was assured.

Jewish leaders reported that since Jan. 8 they had received 465 urns containing the ashes of Polish Jews from the Buchenwald Concentration Camp.

Since the total of Polish Jews in this camp was estimated at 1,500, this indicates a death rate of 30 per cent.

Says Germany Plans Protectorate.

Hans Frank, Governor General of the German-occupied part of Poland and not formally annexed by Germany, intimated in an address at Krakow last night that Germany intends to make a protectorate of what is left of Poland after Germany and Russia have completed annexation of large sections.

Frank told his audience at the Deutches Theatre that "the population will be taken under the protection of the Reich."

"The working population of Poland," he said, "will be able to pursue its chosen callings peacefully. The family, property and the honor of the population stand under the protection of the German Reich."

COAL SHORTAGE ACUTE IN JAPAN, INDUSTRY SUFFERS

Munition Factories and Railways Carry on, 3 Millions Idle in Other Plants

WATER SUPPLY LOW

Tokyo, Jan. 30—(AP)—Industrial centres of Japan were virtually at a standstill today with a shutdown of electrical power caused by an acute shortage of coal.

Electrical service upon which scores of factories depended was shut off this morning in 14 prefectures including Osaka, Kobe and Kyoto.

The suspension, likely to continue 14 hours or possibly until tomorrow, was ordered by the Osaka division of the communications industry.

The war-time burden of railway and shipping lines has caused the scarcity of coal in Japan for some time.

A three-months drought that brought the water supply to a critical stage, was another factor in the suspension of hydro-electric power production.

Railways, telegraph and telephone systems remained in operation as did factories engaged in "urgent" production of war materials.

In other industries, however, workers took their places at machines and then were told to return home. More than 3,000,000 were affected.

Tension at Tientsin

Meanwhile, Japanese newspapers reported the foreign office had anticipated Britain's reply to Japan's protest against seizure of 21 Germans from the liner Asama Maru and said that publication of the British note, possibly today, would be accompanied by an outline of the Toyko viewpoint

It was expected the foreign office would contend that search of neutral vessels plying between neutral points is "quite unusual" under international law.

Tension increased in the blockaded British and French concessions at Tientsin, China, after Japanese military planes flew low over the area. Barbed wire around the concessions has been electrically charged since Sunday.

Food was running short in the district. The Japanese had renewed a ban on importation of supplies after Anglo-Japanese relations became strained over the Asama Maru incident of Jan. 21 but Japanese have denied any connection.

The orchids worn by Mrs. Spreckels are black and extremely rare—so rare that these were the only four in New York.

WINTER OF 1940 WILL BE REMEMBERED

The war-lords who chose this winter for warfare chose a cold one. Hitler selected the autumn of 1939 to herald his war against Poland and perhaps he did not pick the winter as he may have thought there would be no Allied intervention, but his act brought his Nazis into war for the winter of 1939-40. In Finland King Winter, with more than ordinary ruggedness and severity, is on the side of the Finns while he looks at Stalin's forces who are amazed and puzzled by it all, the cold and the Finns being too much for Stalin's armies.

But the rigors of winter are not confined to warring areas. The peaceful southern United States has been chilled to the marrow. In east Europe cold and storm have reigned.

In many lands the winter of the war will not soon be forgotten.

FINN STRATEGY IS SUPERIOR

The Finns are having a series of victories over the Soviet invaders. Fierce battles in icy temperatures have gone to the glory of the Finlanders and to the discomfiture of the Russians.

Finland is guided by master-minds, who know military strategy as their foe evidently does not know it. Modern war has shown a number of things but one of the main observations is to be drawn from the string of successes which have come to the small armies of the Finns. Finnish strategy is overcoming the obstacles of the vast armies of the Reds overwhelming in numbers but not in victory. The winter itself is under the command, it might be said, of the leaders of the Finns, because they make such use of it.

Belleville folk had a Finn in their midst on Sunday evening when Vice-Consul Sven Stadius of Finland, resident at Toronto ,told of his country. His was no bombast but calm statement of fact. Mr. Stadius's remarks were characteristic of the moderation and determination of the Finns. His address was thorough and it was moderate. In it one could see clearly why the Finns have achieved so much advance in peace time and so many victories in war.

The fact that stands out is that Finland is united that the people are one in their attitude to the war. The people who would harm no one if they were left alone, have proven that they can use their great talents, so manifest in peace, to great effect in war. They can conquer economic problems and if forced to it, do not fear the large armies of their eastern neighbor.

The victories must be credited to the genius and courage of the Finns. The winter has helped because they have known how to use the winter.

'WILLINGNESS TO ENCOUNTER THE UNKNOWN'

"The willingness to encounter the unknown and to face and endure whatever might be coming to us by the whole mass of people of this island in discharge of what they felt was their duty" was dealt with by the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill in his address at Manchester on Saturday.

Britain entered the war for right and justice among nations. It was for Britain, he said, no planned war for they had striven for peace. For all she knew her cities might have been attacked within a few hours, but five months have rolled away and that form of terror has not been experienced. What the future holds no one knows, except in a general way, that the Allies will fight on to the end and they are confident that the end will be victory, and that right will triumph.

This comes because Britain and France are strong in the justice of their cause. The enemy that carries on the war of frightfulness at sea which strikes at British ships and neutrals alike has no such soul in this war for to the Nazi Germans it is greed, power lust, envy and revenge, the spirit of the jungle and the rending of civilization by tooth and claw.

Britain's crusade for justice in international relations means that the time will probably come when Britain and France will not wait for Hitler's move but that the Allies will let Hitler do the wondering what is to happen next. Why the Germans have hesitated Mr. Churchill said no one could say for certain but it was not for any false sense of delicacy nor is it out of love and kindness, he said, because in Poland the Nazis proved what brutal and bestial massacre of civilians they were capable of.

To those who speak of German resources, Mr. Churchill pointed out that Germany has been at war strength for years and possibly has no untapped source of man-power. Britain on the other hand has had vast labor power to turn over from peace to war footing. He pressed Britain's need for expansion in labor for munitions for he said millions of new workers and more than a million women must come forward into the war industry.

Mr. Churchill made it clear that with the powers granted democratic executive governments in time of war, there was no danger as they were under the watchful eye of Parliament and subject to free debate.

Nazis could not understand Mr. Churchill's praise of criticism as a necessity as pain is to the human body. Where would we be without it? he asked. The Nazis have none of this. Here he said was the Nazi and Bolshevik dictators' greatest risk. Scandals, corruptions and shortcomings are not exposed because there are no independent voices in dictator states. Instead of being exposed they fester behind the pompous frontage of the state, he said, and the men at the top in dictator countries cannot feel their feet as they move forward in the fog.

One of the outstanding statements was that of his feeling that the Imperial Germany of 1914 was a stronger community than the Nazi Germany now at war, and that the Allies intend to put the Nazis to the test.

The speech was a little different from Mr. Churchill's usual run of speeches on the war as it was addressed to an audience before him instead of to a radio audience of the whole world.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Although the Russian forces are not doing well in Finland they are still attacking and always in the same direction. They still are striving for the objectives set before them at the start of the war.

The persistence of the Russians emphasizes the need of assistance to Finland. With Russia's great reserves of manpower and material the Soviets, barring internal troubles, can probably keep up the war indefinitely no matter what disasters their armies suffer.

Finland, on the other hand, is limited in men and material unless generous help comes from outside. Brilliant victories in the field do nothing to improve its position.

There can be little doubt the cost of the Finnish campaign is much greater than Stalin expected when it began. The cost of a Soviet victory is bound to be enormous and the ultimate consequences of it unpredictable.

So far there is no indication that Stalin is unwilling to meet the cost whatever it may be rather than accept the humiliation of a stalemate or a complete failure.

The Germans would like to see the Finnish war ended either in a Russian victory or a compromise. It is using up a lot of Russian fuel, metal and railway rolling stock which the Nazis could use nicely.

Moreover it threatens to disturb the orderly transport of iron ore and other supplies to Germany from Norway and Sweden. Those countries become increasingly concerned about their own position, use more and more of their raw materials in strengthening their own defences, against a possible Russian attack.

The Navy of France

The vast size and importance of the French army naturally tend to overshadow the French navy, even for its own countrymen, and it would not be surprising if the British people, conscious of their own enormous strength at sea, had so far failed to realise the immense value of the French effort in this sphere writes the Paris correspondent of the London Times.

First-hand contact with men and ships of the French fleet brings home their splendid quality. It is after a visit which afforded the opportunity of seeing almost every kind of naval unit at work, from submarine to flying boat, that this article is written as tribute to the courage, devotion, and efficiency of those who form part of a magnificent fighting machine.

A visit to the Ecole Navale at Brest revealed the sound preparation which young men who have chosen a naval career receive. The men I saw on parade were a fine example of physical and mental alertness.

A visit to a 26,500-ton battleship of the Dunkerque class disclosed France's answer to the German pocket-battleship, with a speed of more than 30 knots and eight 13-inch guns capable of piercing the armor of any ship in existence, as I was later to see for myself at a gunnery proving-range. The hours spent on board this splendid ship have left an unfading memory of the intelligence, gaiety, and wit of her officers.

With them was a young British liaison officer, who spoke with real and warm affection of his French comrades, some of whom in their turn took me aside and told me how glad they were to have such a chic type in their midst. Such evidence of genuine comradeship made one feel that both parties were to be envied.

I was able to see a ship of the same class at sea and admire her graceful lines and rare turn of speed. Officers and men were rightly proud of their ship, and one had no doubt as to her ability to give a good account of herself if ever she met her destined prey. As her captain said, "It's a fine feeling to have command of a ship which one knows can stand up to anybody and anything." Like all his ship's company, he was pround of their association with other British vessels in certain recent operations.

Next after this sample of French naval power came a period with the naval air force, which is completely under control of the French Admiralty. I was shown a number of types of airplanes which operate from aircraft-carriers, ranging from reconnaissance machines to vicious-looking dive-bombers with beautifully clean lines. Best of all was a flight in a three-engined flying boat on anti-submarine patrol. To lie almost prone in the transparent nose of the hull only a few feet from the water during a take-off is to know the exhilaration of speed as never before. Our flight was relatively short, though we carried a store of sinister-looking bombs ready for release if a submarine were sighted. These machines can and do stay in the air for 20 hours. Although a severe strain on their crews, this enables them to patrol hundreds of miles out to sea and entails a serious reduction of the area in which German submarines can range without fear of detection. Other even larger machines now in commission have a cruising range in time of 30 hours.

From this glimpse of the navy in the air I passed to the contrast of the navy under the sea, represented by a 570-ton submarine of the Diane class. Her commander, in the early thirties, had the panache of his race—a kind of devil-may-care swagger which gave a tang to the grim courage underneath. From the first it was clear that he knew how to get the most out of his men by an affectionate familiarity which in no way impaired his power of command.

In company with another submarine we were to give some new warships the opportunity of testing their under-water listening apparatus and to profit by the occasion to carry out a torpedo attack on them. There was a fair sea running and we pitched a good deal as we sat down to an excellent luncheon — we had a long way to go for our rendezvous — but the commander explained that usually, if the weather got too unpleasant, they just went to the bottom and sat and ate in comfort while far above them the waves went rolling on their way.

We crept closer and closer until suddenly the commander began uttering the warning signal "Top-top-top-top" like a human metronome. Then "Fire!" came the shout, followed by an exultant "Got her!" as the periscope whirred up once more and he saw the track of his torpedo. The Diesels took over, and as we emerged into the open air there still was the smooth streak where our torpedo had gone on its way. Now we had to locate and recover our expensive toy. Soon the commander saw what he was after — a thin wisp of smoke and flame as a special composition in the head of the torpedo began to burn. In a remarkably short time—though the commander would have liked it shorter — we had secured our torpedo and lay wallowing while the boat that was to take me to a patrol vessel drew up alongside.

I left with something more than formal expressions of regret, for to share the lives of these brave men for even a few hours is to realize a little their true worth. But already the patrol vessel a new type of ship, 630 tons with two 3.9-inch guns and eighty heavy machine-guns, was preparing to provide her own special quota of interest, since she and a sister ship had been told off to sweep a channel for an incoming convoy. After taking up stations, one ship on the starboard quarter of the other, we streamed our sweeps and our work had begun.

These escort vessels, though they roll horribly, are doing splendid and arduous work, convoying ships, mine-sweeping and performing all sorts of unpleasant but necessary tasks, with no more leisure than the brief period required for taking in fresh fuel and provisions.

Everywhere throughout my visit French officers spoke with obviously genuine respect and admiration of the British navy, produced by intimate contact and co-operation with admittedly the finest armada the world has ever known. But there can be no doubt that the British navy for their part have learnt to reciprocate that respect and admiration. It will be no small thing if the British public, too, can be brought to realize how worthily their ancient and always honorable enemies at sea are now playing their part in the Allied cause.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Insomnia—Sleeplessness

It would seem that the matter of sleep and relaxation is now the subject of much thought and conversation because, during the past few years and at present, more and more individuals are finding it difficult to get "sufficient" sleep.

How can sufficient sleep be obtained? When there is pain or discomfort present, these conditions must be corrected, but what about those free from pain or discomfort?

A study of the sleep habits of fifty women who had recovered from slight mental or behavior disturbances and who did not complain of insomnia, were observed for three months in an observation hospital and reported by Dr. Louis J. Karnosh, Cleveland, in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The period of sleep varied from six and one-half to eight hours. Age, temperament, menstruation, and diet did not seem to influence the amount or degree of sleep.

"On the other hand, excitement due to visits by relatives, arguments or disagreements with other patients or attendants, and holidays with the emotion or excitement which occurs at these times, were definitely to blame for breaking the regular rhythm of sleep."

This shows that it is the nervous or mental side of us that "can't take" blows or disturbances and not so much the physical disturbances that prevent us from sleeping.

Another fact found, and this same fact has often been found before, is that lack of sleep will not cause severe mental disturbances or insanity. The knowledge that lack of sleep will not cause insanity or serious body disturbances is reassuring to those who fear the terrible consequences of sleeplessness. Further, observations by nurses and physicians all agree that most of us sleep longer than we think, because sleepless hours pass so slowly. Even the "half sleep" in which we think we are really awake is of great benefit as it slows down the pulse and lowers the blood pressure and temperature.

What is the best method of bringing on sleep? A good bed, a quiet room, and muscular relaxation—keeping arms and legs in a half-bent position—are most important.

When anxiety causes tension of muscles and nerves and the cause of the anxiety cannot be removed or fought successfully, the physician may give a quieting medicine. However, in the majority of cases the "anxious" individual does better and gets more sleep by trying to get problems or conflicts settled in some way during the day.

White Rule in Saravak Beneficial to the Natives

A land in which head-hunting is only a spasmodic affair now (one hundred years ago most of the inhabitants were frankly cannibalistic) is Sarawak, whose charming representative, Her Highness the Ranee, spoke to the Women's Canadian Club in Hamilton as reported in the Spectator.

The story of how there came to be a white rajah is one of the most romantic in modern history, and according to Her Highness, the absolute monarchy thus established is more than satisfactory, and is the most personal rule possible. Her husband, the rajah, is, according to her own description, "a simple man sitting among simple people." They come to him with all their problems and he squats down with them and discusses the wisest course to take.

The present rajah is descended from James Brooke, who later was knighted in Queen Victoria's reign. One hundred years ago, an ordinary Englishman, born in India, he inherited enough money from his father to buy a schooner, and his adventurous spirit led him to seek some country in which no Englishman had ever set foot. He came upon Sarawak, when the young ruler had a rebellion on his hands, and with one gun put down the rebellion. They made him absolute monarch, and, after winning his case in England, he settled down to rule the natives. Next in line was Charles Brooke, whose French wife had three sons, and it is to one of these sons that the ranee is married. She is the daughter of Viscount Esher, and has helped her husband to rule wisely and justly the natives to whom they are friends and benefactors, as well as rulers, one gathers from the simple story she unfolded.

Sarawak, on the north coast of Borneo, is 50,000 square miles in area and has a population of half a million. Of these 100 are white people, all connected with the royal staff.

The ranee showed a series of coloured films to illustrate her remarks. Some of these she had taken herself, and they were beautifully coloured, and gave fascinating glimpses of the country and the people, with their grace and gentle manners, including the head-hunters, who seemed to intrigue the audience more than any other single phase of the lecture.

In her informal talk the ranee allowed pauses for questions.

"What's the difference between head-hunting and murder?" some one wanted to know.

The ranee, thoroughly steeped in the traditions which lie at the root of this practice, was rather casual in her reply. She said there was a great difference. It appears that the women are partly to blame for head-hunting, as they will not marry a man until he has three heads to his credit. There is no ill-feeling, however, no motive of hate in the business.

One man took his father's head, and when the ranee asked him why he had done it he gave the following matter of fact reply:

"My father is very old and I did not think he would be wanting his head much longer."

So that's the spirit in which it is done, but apparently it is not done very often now, and some of the ex-head-hunters are part of the military guard.

Simple Education

Some one else asked about education, and the ranee replied that there were their own native schools and the mission schools, but that the greatest education was teaching them to keep free from disease, and to do their own work well.

"There is not much use civilizing them," she remarked laconically. "I don't think much of civilization myself."

Civilization? The ranee described her country as one unspotted, peaceful, with no political strife, no beggars, no wars, a country where one sees only happy faces.

There is only one exception to this, and the ranee showed one film in which the pitiful forms of lepers made their silent appeal to the audience. The laws of Sarawak decree that all lepers must be segregated either in camp or in suitable houses, free from contact with relatives or friends. These relatives, through inborn fear of the disease, invariably dispatch them to the Kuching camp where they are cared for by the Sarawak state. When a case of leprosy becomes burnt out—no longer infectious — he is allowed to return to relatives and is obliged to leave camp. Even then relatives do not wish to receive them, and it is for these people that the ranee is endeavouring to establish a colony.

A Major in a Minor Regiment

From a Letter to the Editor of the London Spectator

Sir:—Mr. Harold Nicolson, in the Spectator, informed your readers that a private soldier, who was eating a carefully chosen meal "at a table in a remote corner" of "a famous restaurant in Piccadilly", received a note from "a major in some minor regiment", who happened to be dining with "a party of ladies at a distant table", reminding him "that private soldiers are not supposed to eat in the presence of their superior officers", and instructing "him to leave the restaurant forthwish". The private soldier, "blushing deeply", departed into the darkness, leaving his dinner almost untouched, but not before he had indited a reply to his major, in which he quoted Greek to him.

As pretty a story as I have read for some time, Sir. How, one wonders, did the soldier, sitting "in a remote corner", detect the rank of an officer dining "at a distant table", and ascertain the fact that he belonged to "some minor regiment"? Were the deep blushes an artistic addition made to the tale by Mr. Nicolson? . . . You will have observed, Sir, the delicate snobbery of the reference to "some minor regiment". How incorrigibly suburban these Tories-turned-Mosleyites-turned-National - Labor men are! In whatever milieu they find themselves they retain their ancient sense of form.

We are expected to regard this "major in some minor regiment" as a typical officer; for Mr. Nicolson assured your readers that "before Mr. Hore-Belisha issued his ukase, men in the uniform of private soldiers were constantly asked to leave restaurants by superior officers of an inferior type". Constantly! Every day? I take it that Mr. Nicolson is not repeating a story told to him by a chap who had it from a chap who knew a chap who was related to the chap who was ordered out of the restaurant, and that he has some evidence to support his astonishing statement. Your readers have a right to know what that evidence is. The word, Sir, is "constantly", not "occasionally" or "rarely".

I was a private soldier and an officer in the last war, and I dined, when I had a chance, in "famous" restaurants. I was never, as a private, ordered out of any restaurant by any officer, nor did I know of any soldier who was. Never, during the whole period of my service, did I meet anybody who had either suffered this experience or heard of it being suffered by any private soldier known to him.

I have friends who are private soldiers in the present army, but I have not heard of them being "instructed to leave" an restaurant "forthwith" by "a major in some minor", or, indeed, any other regiment. When I dined in a restaurant off Piccadilly some six or seven weeks ago, I saw private soldiers and officers dining in the same room, not at "remote" or "distant" tables, but at tables contiguous to each other, even at the same table. The officers must have been remiss in their duty, for not one of them ordered a single soldier out of the room while I was in it.

Yours sincerely,
ST. JOHN ERVINE.

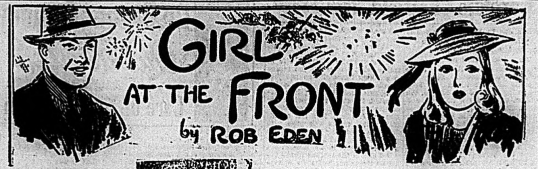
WELCOMED HOME AFTER EPIC VOYAGE

Capt. J. A. Gainard, who piloted his vessel the City of Flint through the vicissitudes of its latest and most adventurous voyage to a safe haven at Baltimore, was greeted by his wife on his arrival back home. The City of Flint was captured by Nazi sea raiders and then released by Norwegian authorities.



GIRL AT THE FRONT

by ROB EDEN

He waved at a man who passed them, two tables away, headed toward the front of the cafe. Claire's eyes followed the man, and then went to her companion's face inquiringly.

"Fred Nestor, head of a big news service," Danny explained.

"German ancestry?"

She was surprised when Danny laughed aloud.

"His size and complexion, and his hair cut inthat style do suggest it, don't they? As a matter of fact, I believe he's a native son of California. His family originally came from Scotland. I'll have to tell him you mistook him for a Nazi. He'll probably be furious."

"Please don't, Danny. I'll admit that as a detective I'm terrible. That's why I wanted to see you. I hoped you might be able to help me. Mr. Cameron has disappeared!"

"What? I thought both of you were leaving today on the St. Croix!"

"So did I, but Bill—I mean, Mr. Cameron—didn't show up, and I got off at the last minute and hurried back to Paris to look for him."

Briefly, she told him of discovering the extra overnight case among her baggage. Of turning it over to the Surete. Of the discovery that it contained enough incendiary powder to destroy the big liner.

"Boy, what a yarn! If I could only get it past the censor!"

"Please don't, Danny—at least not until we find out what has happened to Mr. Cam......"

She stopped suddenly, her eyes fastened on the group across the room, the group made up of the Rolands, Maria Herczek and Captain Martin.

"Why, what's wrong?" Danny demanded.

"Maybe it's just imagination," Claire answered, slowly, "but I just suddenly had the idea that Maria Herczek was reading my lips!"

CHAPTER 6

Maria's Invitation

Danny Brooks looked at Claire Dutton in amazement.

"Whatever gave you such an idea?" the correspondent demanded. "And why should Maria want to read you lips?"

"I don't know. But that's what I thought. Perhaps it's just because I'm nervous, after what I've gone through today. I'm seeing spies behind every potted palm."

Brooks questioned her about Cameron's plans—covering the same ground she had gone over with Welles Sanford and Pierre Bornet—but she told it eagerly, hoping that somewhere she would strike a responsive chord. Remind Brooks of something Cameron might have told him when they were together. But apparently the girl's employer had not confided in his old friend. The newspaper man knew nothing about where he might be.

"What I can't understand," he said, finally, "is why the deuce you didn't stay on that boat when you were there?"

"And then it probably would have caught afire in midocean, and I would have been turned out like a nice crisp piece of bacon," she retorted.

"I don't mean that—of course, that was serious. You did a great job in taking that stuff straight to headquarters. But you didn't really know there was anything wrong until you got back to Paris. Why did you come back?"

"I —I don't know," the girl confessed.

"Don't tell me you're in love with Bill Cameron?" Danny demanded suddenly, and Claire felt the color surge into her cheeks. "How about it?" he persisted as she didn't answer.

"Perhaps—maybe that's it, Danny," she admitted, slowly. "But I knew I couldn't leave France without knowing where he is."

"You realize, my dear girl, that this is war. That your boss— my good friend Bill Cameron — has been engaged in highly dangerous business. It is very likely that he had made himself a marked man. And things happen to marked men. Did that thought ever occur to you, Claire? I don't want to be cruel, or brutal, but facts are facts and you must be prepared to face them."

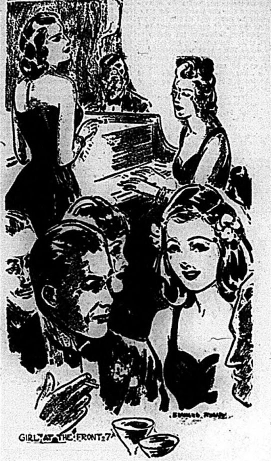
"I've thought of that, too," the girl answered. "But I'm sure that he is alive. I'd bank my life on it!"

She had been doubly reassured by what the mysterious man who signed himself "Z. Y." had told her. His words sung in her brain. "Cameron is alive." She didn't mention him to Danny, though.

"I surely hope you're right—that your hunch is a good one."

Danny sipped his wine, contemplatively.

"Boy, what a yarn! I'd get banner lines in every paper in America! 'U. S. GIRL FOILS PLOT TO BURN LINER.' That would be one story. The other one, 'FAMOUS U. S. SECRET DIPLOMAT VANISHES.' Two knockout stories in one day, and clean scoops at that. If I could only get them past the censors!" He scowled at his plate



GIRL AT THE FRONT—7

Claire could sense a tenseness that suddenly developed in the room. George Roland was intent on lighting a cigar but she was certain he had not missed a word.

for a moment, and then suddenly his brow cleared like the sky after a thundershower.

"I've got it!" he exclaimed. "They've just reopened the Italian border. I'll phone Miles, our man in Nice—give him the lowdown. He can slip across into Italy, find a cable station and flash the stuff direct to New York. It'll be terrific!"

"Please, Danny, don't!" Claire begged. "It may jeopardize everything. If Mr. Cameron is alive — and I'm sure he is—it may mean his death sentence. Pierre Bornet told me it was a very delicate situation. Don't you see?"

Danny reluctantly agreed finally that he did see, and salved his professional conscience by saying that he didn't believe the Italian censors would pass the story anyway.

They had been so intent on their conversation that neither had noticed that the Rolands, Maria and Captain Martin were approaching their table. They looked up in surprise as the Russian girl spoke.

"We're all going to my flat," Maria said. "Why don't you two come along? The cafe closes, shortly, you know."

"I'd be glad to," Claire spoke up and Danny said he could come for a time.

"I may have to leave early," he said.

Maria's place, it turned out, was only a short walk on the Rue du Colisee, and in a few minutes they were mounting the stairs to the third floor by a dimly lighted stairway. As in every place in Paris, even the inside lights had been replaced with tiny blue globes. Any stray beam that might escape outside was immediately lost in the blackness. Only within homes and apartments were bright lights permitted, and then only if the windows were properly curtained and painted. Paris was taking no chances on night raids—leaving no gleam of light to indicate a target on which to unload bombs to an enemy circling high above.

Claire looked curiously about the flat and found it unusually attractive. There was a small entrance hall with a parquet table beneath a large mirror. It was on this table that they all placed their gas masks. Claire was a bit self-conscious yet about hers, but the others accepted them as a matter of course and placed them where they could be snatched up on a moment's notice if an alarm sounded.

There was a large, comfortable salon, one corner of which near the large front window Maria had converted into a little studio. A screen, heavy with Chinese brocade, cut it off into a little alcove. It was there she kept her easel and her drawing and painting materials.

"The north light is best," Maria explained as she showed the American girl about the place. In addition to the salon, there were two small bedrooms, with a bath between, and at the rear a tiny kitchen.

"It's very comfortable," Claire approved.

"Perhaps you'd like to move in here with me," Maria suggested. "You see, I've just recently lost my tenant. An American like yourself. She is a musician and had been studying here for a year. She left just a week ago.

"I haven't any too much money" Maria went on, "and I need some one to share expenses. I'm sure you could live much more cheaply here than at a hotel. Besides, I don't know just what the war will do to my business. People are not much interested in fashions, I'm afraid, when men are killing one another by the thousands almost within hearing distance of Paris."

"Sounds like a swell chance, Claire," Danny spoke up, "if you intend to stay on in Paris for awhile. The place is close to everything—near the subway, within walking distance of many places. You couldn't do better. Besides, I'd feel a lot more satisfied if I knew you were with some one I know, instead of by yourself, you know, especially in times like these."

The offer seemed attractive to Claire, and she fell in love with the bedroom that Maria said would be hers if she should decide to come in with her. It was fitted up like a luxurious boudoir, with an embroidered silk spread that the girl knew must be worth thousands of francs.

"What a beautiful cover!" she exclaimed.

"One of the few things I was able to bring with me when I left Russia". Maria explained. "That is one of my assets, or was until the war came along and knocked down the price of everything. I probably couldn't sell it for enough to pay a month's rent now if I had to part with it. How does my suggestion appeal to you?"

"I—I'll have to think it over', Claire said, hesitantly. She suddenly remembered what the man who called himself "Z.Y." had said. That some of the people she might meet tonight would be friends, some enemies. It was just as well to be cautious and not rush into a situation that might prove difficult to get out of later.

"Who is that playing?" she asked. While she had been talking with Maria and Danny, she was conscious of music, but for the first time she realized it was in the apartment.

"Julie Roland", Maria answered. "Doesn't she play beautifully?"

Claire walked toward the piano and stood leaning against it as Mrs. Roland played softly, and hummed.

"My husband loves it", Julie smiled up at her.

"It's awfully silly, but I just can't seem to remember the title", Claire said. "It sounds quite familiar".

"It is rather characteristic of Schubert", Julie answered, "But it is not very well known. It's from one of his less frequently played sonatas".

Her hands, beautiful and delicate, rested idly on the piano keys as she finished playing.

"How about something Polish?" Captain Martin suggested. "Chopin's Polonaise, for instance?"

Claire thought she saw a quick glance flash between Julie and her husband, but a moment later the American woman plunged into the composition' Just as she finished, there was a knock at the door and Maria went to answer it, saying, "Perhaps it's Noel, come at last'"

She heard voices, Maria's raised in greeting, and the answering voice of a man. It had a familiar ring, a peculiar vibrancy and she instantly recognized it.

It was the voice of the man who had shared her taxi earlier that evening—the man known to her only as "Z.Y."

CHAPTER SEVEN

Noel Yorke—"Z Y"

Shouts of "Hello, Noel!" Welcome to our city!" greeted these new arrival, and Claire looked eagerly toward the doorway as he followed Maria into the room.

"Noel—Noel who?" she demanded in a low tone of Danny Brooks. He shook his head.

"I don't know for sure, but I think it's Noel Yorke—he's a painter. Very wealthy American who's lived over here for years—if he's the same one. Rene has mentioned him to me several times but I've never met him, although I've seen some of his paintings. Not bad, either. Much better than you'd expect from a sort of professional playboy, as I gather Noel Yorke is".

Claire's eyes eagerly swept the figure of the man who approached the group about the piano with a frank, friendly smile lighting up his face. He was of medium height —his features seemed to fall into curves rather than sharp angles—and his dark hair was brushed sleekly back from his forehead.

He seemed perfectly at home in the flat, an greeted his friends with a quick word or two and a slight widening of his smile. As he approached Claire, his features settled into a graver mould and he bowed stiffly as Maria introduced him.

"Miss Dutton", she said, "may I present a countryman of yours—a very charming countryman I should have said—Mr. Noel Yorke. Mr. Yorke, Miss Dutton'.

Claire nodded pleasantly and waited for the man to speak, but after a murmured acknowledgment of the introduction he turned to Brooks and shook hands with him when Maria presented him.

"I've read a lot of your dispatches, Brooks", he said. "I've been getting several American newspapers for years, until recently. The transatlantic mails are not what they used to be now, with things as they are".

Claire examined him closely, now that she was certain of who he was. There wasn't the slightest doubt in her mind that he was the "Z.Y." of the taxicab, but he gave not the slightest hint that he ever had seen or heard of her before as he moved easily about the circle.

"What's new about the war?" Yorke asked, turning back again to Brooks. "You know we private citizens are terribly uninformed, with censorship so rigid in Paris. I looked over all the papers this evening but got very little from them".

"You know just about as much as I do about it, sir," Brooks answered. "I wasn't old enough to get in on the first World War, and it doesn't look as if I'll get much chance to become famous as a war correspondent in this one. Most of us are kept right here in Paris—with just an occasional visit to the front where we're very carefully kept from seeing anything. Even if we did discover a big piece of news, it probably wouldn't do us any good. One of the censors would head us off".

"How about you, Rene?" Yorke went on. "You're an officer connected with the War Ministry. What do you hear? Anything exciting?"

Claire could sense a tenseness that suddenly developed in the room. She glanced quickly at Julie Roland. Her hands were straying idly over the piano keys, making soft, melodic chords. Her eyes on her hands, but Claire knew she heard every word that was said. George Roland, seated across the room, was intent on lighting a cigar, but Claire was certain that he too had not missed a word since Yorke entered.

The aviator officer shrugged his shoulders.

"You know as much as I, Noel", he said. "Even if I really knew anything —which I don't—I could not tell you, if it had any particular significance. You can't be too careful these days, you know. There are spies everywhere. We are all forbidden to even discuss the war."

"Any special assignments?" Yorke persisted.

"I had one today, but it didn't come off", Rene answered. "I was to have flown a man to Le Havre—I waited most of the day at St. Cyr, but he never did show up".

"What happened to him"? Yorke asked, quickly.

"That I don't know".

"Strange, isn't it" Maria said.

"Why, strange?" Roland put in. "I don't see anything much in that. Rene was ordered to fly a man down to Le Havre, but the man just didn't show up. Perhaps he met a young lady somewhere and forgot all about his date with you, Rene." He looked with mock severity at his. "Julie, you weren't out flirting today, were you, while I was busy in the shop?"

Julie Roland's cheeks suddenly were suffused with red, and they all joined in the laugh at her expense.

"Poor Julie", Maria said, patting her shoulder. "She's so easily teased, and George never misses an opportunity".

"Perhaps we can get something on the radio," Danny Brooks suggested. "Do you mind, Maria, if I turn it on"?

"Of course not. There might be a new communique".

Danny switched on the radio and a moment later a voice, shouting in German, came roaring out of the loud speaker. Danny hastily toned it down as they all listened intently.

The silence was broken by a sudden sharp laugh, and all eyes turned toward George Roland.

"That's a Frenchman, talking German", he said, "or I'm a Chinaman. You can spot them every time".

"You're probably right", Noel Yorke agreed. "That's about all you hear on the air these days—Frenchmen talking German, aiming broadcasts at the German people, and Germans speaking French, intended to weaken our morale".

Danny turned the radio off.

"I've heard more talk and less news in this war than any I ever had any part in before," the correspondent said. "Now when I was in Spain, and before that in Ethiopia. . . . "

"They were mere preliminaries to this one," Captain Martin put in. "We learned then the necessity of masking all movements behind a verbal smoke screen".

"And also the value of propaganda," Roland suggested. "We used to amuse ourselves during the Spanish affair by listening to the radio, turning on first one side and then the other. Until the last week or two it was impossible to figure out just who was winning. Both sides claimed sweeping victories in exactly the same localities. Poor Julie almost went mad trying to keep the pins on our war map straight."

Claire looked up to see Noel Yorke's eyes on her, and she fearlessly looked deep into his. But there wasn't the slightest answering flicker of recognition.

Whoever he really was, whatever his mission, he apparently had no intention of revealing anything here. She had felt her heart leap suddenly in her breast when his casual question had brought the information from Rene Martin that he was the aviator who had been assigned to fly Cameron to Le Havre to catch the St. Croix, but she had noted, too, how quickly he dropped the subject and asked nothing further.

She determined to ask Captain Martin about it if she ever had a chance to speak with him alone. Perhaps he had had some word which he didn't care to reveal at a general gathering like this. If he did, he might tell her about it when he learned who she was, her relationship to the missing Cameron. She'd try to make the opportunity, later on, to talk with him alone.

The opportunity did come soon after, when the Rolands suddenly decided it was time for them to go home, and the party broke up.

"If you're walking, I'll trot along with you," Yorke said. "I feel the need of some outdoor exercise. I've been cooped up at home most of the day, working."

"Who are you painting, now?" Maria asked. "I'd think that wartime would be pretty poor time for portrait work unless you get a lot of officers for clients".

"Finishing up on old Mrs. Van Harpen," Yorke answered. "She left for New York two months ago, and I'd forgotten all about her until I got a cable yesterday demanding to know when I was going to send her her portrait. "I'd put it aside, having marked it down as a dead loss."

He shook hands with Claire and Danny and called a cheery good night as he followed the Rolands down the stairs. Claire and Danny, with Captain Martin, followed a few moments later.

"We'll have to walk over to the Champs Elysees to get a cab", Danny said, "and I doubt if we can find one even there at this hour".

"Fine", the officer said. "That's my direction, too, and I'll go with you at least as far as the boulevard. I feel like a walk after my tiring day of sitting around waiting for a man who never appeared."

"Did you have any word at all from Mr. Cameron?" Clair asked, and then added, hastily, "Don't think I'm asking out of idle curiosity. You see, I'm Mr. Cameron's secretary—I was to have sailed on the boat with him, but when he didn't show up I came back to Paris. I must find out what has happened to him."

"I'm sorry," Martin answered. "I can't tell you a thing about him". They walked along another half block in silence, and then the officer suddenly stopped. "Guess I'll turn off here", he said. "It's a bit shorter to my flat if I go down this street."

After they had said good nights, and Claire and Danny were headed again toward the boulevard, it suddenly dawned on the girl that Capt. Martin har evaded her question. He hadn't said he didn't know what had happened to Cameron. He simply said he couldn't tell her a thing about him.

Did that mean something had happened to Bill Cameron? That Martin knew what had happened and didn't want her to know? She shivered and drew her wrap more closely about her as she tightened her hold on Danny's arm.

WHILE THE faculties and energies may be under excellent astral stimuli on this day, there are certain equivocal or dubious factors to cope with. The inherent forces and predispositions, mental, psychical and emotional, seem to be in conflict, causing perplexity or anxiety that will be detrimental and taxing, as well as disturbing to relations with employers or superiors. Be alert to intrigue and be careful with writings.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which there may be much accomplishment if a tendency to overstrain the mental and nervous forces is averted, and they are able to shun worry, doubts and perplexities, as well as duplicity, equivocal entanglements and indulgence in expediency rather than principle. These might incite trouble with employers or superiors. With care there may be surprising gain and personal gratification.

A child born on this day may have characteristics and trends difficult to engineer into constructive and worthy channels. It may be versatile, skilful and have much ingenuity, but overwrought nervous and emotional energy may incite unpleasant activities. Early careful training and discipline are recommended.

The report card is your regular check on the progress your child makes at school. Is it satisfactory? Is there some point at which he falls below?

Adenoids are a frequent cause of poor grades, of unsatisfactory marks. Many children are handicapped by this difficulty, easily, reasonably, corrected.

Arrange for a physical examination. The most routine check-up of your child's health will reveal this minor yet serious condition.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Crasher at the Gate

From every angle, a gate crasher is regarded as an objectionable person. Not only is he lacking in good breeding to butt into a party to which he has not been invited, but his methods brand him as a cad.

But here's an amusing story of a gate crasher, and I haven't it in my heart to condemn him. The girl's letter is so refreshing.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"The other night I went to a University dance, which was very exclusive. I'm just 18, and it was my first important dance. I was scared blue for fear I wouldn't get many dances; because I went with an older cousin who didn't want to take me anyhow. He's an old grad who happened to be in town, and his mother, who's my aunt, insisted that he must take me.

"Well, I danced 'round with Cousin Willie twice, and thought I was going to have a rotten time and be a wallflower for the rest of the evening. Then a stunning looking young man cut in, and we danced a number of dances and he was absolutely charming and I had the time of my life. And like Cinderella I had to go home at midnight, because Cousin Willie is that way.

A day or two after the dance there was a terrific explosion 'round my aunt's tea-table. (It is that; she doesn't believe in cocktails). It seems that the glamour boy had not been invited to the dance at all; he was that monster of ill manners—a gate crasher.

"He braved Aunt Susan and came to call, and I asked him how he crashed—it was a scream. It seems he knew the plan of the University pretty well because he had been there for one semester, but had to leave because he hadn't the money to keep on. He knew that a certain little half window opened on the coal bins, so he slipped through the window and lighted on the coal.

"It was farther down than he imagined, and he went into the coal about a foot and got very dirty. But he found a water tap somewhere, washed up and came up the cellar stairs. There the other students recognized him for the crasher he was, wouldn't speak and paid no attention when he tapped for a dance with their girls.

"He thought I was a safe bet as he saw I was having a rotten time with Cousin Willie. So that, Miss Fairfax, was why I had the time of my life.

"To Aunt Susan's way of thinking a gate crasher is a felon in the class with safe crackers, train robbers and other malefactors. So of course, this delightful young man can't come to call again.

"I've begun to think about him

"I've begun to think about him He couldn't help it that his father went broke and he had to leave the University, and I think it showed loads of imagination and brains that he got into a dance when the fates tried to keep him out.

"I don't intend to sneak out with him while I'm visiting Aunt Susan, but when I go to my own home town, which is 125 miles away, I'm going to ask him to call, and don't you think it would be o.k. But then the poor fellow might not have the carfare. He has no motor.

Sally D."

Don't worry about that young man not getting to see you, in a town 125 miles away. As he had the enterprise and ingenuity to jump through the coal hole and come up charming and a "glamour boy", as you describe him, I have no fear but that he would discover ways and means of seeing you if you were on the other side of the world.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Doctor Dafoe Tells How to Be Good Parents, Good Children

The essence of good manners between parents and their children were in the inspired New Year's resolutions suggested by the Quintuplets' beloved Doctor Dafoe. In his ten resolutions for parents and ten resolutions for children are contained the substance of the answers to the searching Biblical questions, "Is it well with you? Is it well with your husband? Is it well with the child?" These twin sets of resolutions are worthy of repetition, if the repeating serves to fix them in your minds.

I wish that Doctor Dafoe's guiding sentences, so simple and so humanly understanding, could be hung up in every home as a daily reminder of wise thoughts and courteous living.

Parents, here are Doctor Dafoe's resolutions for you to make:

1—We will place the maintenance of a peaceful household before all else.

2—We will not involve our children in our quarrels and we will not disagree in their presence about what either of us asks them to do. We will settle our differences concerning them in private.

3—We will not whisper or have confidences in their presences.

4—We will encourage them to tell us their troubles, and we will listen patiently and sympathetically to everything they say, however uninteresting it may be, always remembering that to them nothing is more important than their own thoughts and problems, no matter how trivial they may seem to us.

5—In deciding anything for them we will consider first similar situations in our own childhoods.

6—We will consider it as much our duty to encourage and train them to be industrious, self-reliant, kind, helpful, and honest as to provide them with a home, food, clothes and schooling, and we will not shirk any responsibilities involved in this, no matter how unpleasant they may be.

7—We will not nag them. We will keep in mind that they can be diverted from bad habits by being complimented on good ones, and remember that if we tell them they are the kind of children we want them to be, they'll try to live up to it.

8—But we will deal with them firmly and discipline them when necessary. We will not spoil them ourselves and leave it to servants, school teachers and others who are participating in their upbringing to teach them good manners.

9—We will see to it that they have congenial playmates and companions of their own age. We will encourage and make provision for these to visit our home, but we will maintain an unobstrusive supervision over this visiting, as we will expect other parents to do.

10—We will expect and demand of them unquestioning respect and consideration for us and for all elders with whom they come in contact, and we ourselves will do all that we can to deserve it.

Children, here are Doctor Dafoe's resolution for you to make:

1—I will say my prayers morning and night.

2—I will respect the rights of others.

3—I will try to do what those who are bringing me up want me to do, and remember that age and experience give adults wisdom that children do not have.

4—I will try to eat slowly and only at regular hours and I will not eat too much.

5—I will brush my teeth and wash myself night and morning, and I will get at least an hour's exercise in fresh air daily.

6—I will wear warm clothes and protect myself from cold winds and wetness in winter, and avoid getting badly sunburned in summer.

7—I will be kind to animals.

8—I will not wilfully destroy or waste anything.

9—I will try to finish each task I am asked to do.

10—I will try to remember that my body is the house in which I must live all my life, and that it will always be the kind of house I build when I am young. I will keep it tidy, strong.

Macaroni's Magic

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

PASTE foods such as macaroni and spaghetti are nourishing and form the basis for some tempting dishes. Here are a few suggestions for some macaroni dishes, among them several selected with an eye to Lent. The secret of cooking macaroni is to have the water boiling hard and salted, and so plentiful that the pieces of macaroni can almost swim in it.

There are many versions of macaroni and cheese, but this is our favorite. Break four ounces macaroni into small length, quickly cook in boiling salted water, then strain. Arrange in a buttered dish, cover with grated cheese and two or three peeled, sliced tomatoes. Pour over three-fourths pint white sauce and sprinkle with bread crumbs and grated cheese. Dot with butter and bake in moderate oven for 20 minutes or so.

Used With Shrimps

Macaroni with Shrimps is a favorite Italian dish. Boil macaroni and place it in a dish. Cover with a rich white sauce that is flavored with a little anchovy essence and enriched with one-half pint cooked shrimps, either whole or cut in pieces.

For an interesting salad have ready eight ounces cooked macaroni and a large cooked beetroot. Cut up the beetroot and mix with the macaroni. Pour over French dressing, sprinkle finely-chopped onion over and serve with a border of endive.

For Macaroni and Bacon Pudding take a medium-sized cupful of macaroni. Put this into a buttered baking dish and over it spread a mixture of a cup of chopped bacon, one-half teaspoon salt, a good pinch each of celery salt and pepper, and a few drops of onion juice. Beat up slightly two eggs and add to one and one-half cups of milk and pour this into the dish. Bake in moderate oven until firm.

Baked Macaroni is next. Alternate layers of cooked macaroni and minced meat in plenty of gravy in a buttered baking dish. Use fowl, beef, veal or ham, all well seasoned, or chopped, stewed mushrooms in a tasty sauce of their own liquor, slightly thickened.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Wife's Job to Keep in Heart The Husband Who Has No Job

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

We've had terrible luck since we were married and it has about wrecked our romance. In a few months after we began to keep house my husband lost his job. We had saved but a few dollars and when they were gone we had to shut up and move in with our two families, I went back to my home and he to his. His parents are lovely to me but they aren't well to do and we decided that they shouldn't have the burden of feeding both of us when my parents wanted me to come to them. My husband was too proud to come with me, and here we are, separated.

The worst part of it is that my husband hasn't been the same to me since. He is cold and doesn't seem to care whether or not we ever get together again. I have tried to overlook things because I know he's worried but you can take just so much and then you can't take any more. Please tell me what to do.

B. E. R.

Maybe you young things are to be excused for the unwise plans you've made But not your two pair of parents who are old enough to understand what this sort of a separation can eventuate in. So my advice to you is to get together at one home or the other and make the necessary financial adjustment. There's no reason why your parents shouldn't give you money to pay board at the in-laws' table; or the other way around if paying his way will relieve your husband's embarrassment at putting up on his wife's family.

Pretty hard for a young wife to realize what loss of his job means to a young husband who has just promised love and support to his bride. His pride is hurt; he's humiliated. He can't strut before her as the big, strong man on whose arm she can lean. He's flat on his face, asking mama and papa to give him something to eat and a place to sleep, and he's sending his wife back home to do likewise.

Yet only if she realizes what's going on inside her husband's unhappy mind can she give him the sympathy he needs and at the same time the pat of encouragement that makes him believe in his ability to get a job and reinstate himself. It's a queer thing that women belonging to the so-called weaker sex have always, in emergencies, to furnish the courage for their beaten and discouraged men of the so-called strong sex.

Another queer thing: When a man is reduced in purse and wounded in pride, you'd think he would be doubly affectionate with his wife. But no, he's frequently in a state of irritation with her because she's the reminder, always before him, that he has failed; and angry with himself and feeling a trifle guilty toward her he's cold and cross and careless.

You hold the trump card, young wife. Now play it well.

Caroline Chatfield.

A Three-Minute Journey to:

Uruguay's Montevideo

By TEMPLE MANNING

IN THE REPUBLICS of Central and South America one could travel a lifetime and always discover something new and something beautiful. One of the most interesting of the east coast lands is Uruguay, a land filled with wonders and beauty. There one finds enchanting coastal resorts, fertile valleys, rich plains, rolling hills, low mountains and enchanting lakes.

But the chief attraction is Uruguay to most travelers is Montevideo. From a tiny settlement Montevideo has become one of the greatest cities of South America, a popular resort in the summer, a center of art and culture and commerce in winter. Its spacious, tree-bordered boulevards, its plazas and parks, contrasting with modern skyscrapers, and its beaches make up a fascinating picture.

Lovely Rose Garden

The Prado, Montevideo's rose garden, is just about the loveliest scene that nature has ever painted. The rosairium is set in a park of beautiful glades, gardens, grottoes and lakes. Some 800 varieties of the rose have been artistically set out in bushes, clumps and arches. A picturesque little stream meanders through the park, which in summer seems to play host to the whole city. The perfume of the roses is well-nigh overpowering.

Saunter down the Avenida 18 de Julio, or down the Calle Sarande and the Plaza Constitution and you'll find lovely buildings, sumptuous palaces, clubs, smart shops, brilliant cafes, gorgeous hotels and all the other thrilling things that make up a city of progress and beauty. But always there are trees and flowers, especially roses.

One of the marvels of Montevideo—and, indeed, it would be a marvel in any city—is the Legislative Palace, built entirely of native stone, marble, granite and woods of various kinds. The rose and gray exterior and the interior, with its columns, its friezes in gray mother-of-pearl, its polychromous marbles, bronze decorations and mosaic murals, its richly-done salons and chambers comprise a grand sight. From the upper floor there is a grand view of the harbor, the beaches and the city itself. At night the lighting of the exterior gives it a gala aspect. Then there is the lovely old cathedral, as well as various legislative palaces. A modern palace is the thirty-one story Palacio Salvo, tallest office building in that part of South America, a city landmark.

Parks and Beaches

Montevideo has many parks and beaches. Back of Ramirez Beach is the Parque Rodo, with beautiful walks and a lovely lake. The drive through the grand boulevard named for President Wilson, which follows the coast line, is a nice introduction to the park and beach. In the parque is a beautiful hotel and a most imposing casino.

Pacitos Beach is the gathering place of the elite of the city and so there are some grand villas and smart spots. About 100 miles from Montevideo is Piriapolis Beach, a veritable paradise of thousands of shade trees and waterways. Much nearer to the city in Carrasco, largest and most famous of all the beaches of Uruguay. It has a sumptuous hotel, a grand casino and lovely villas. Yes, life is easy in Uruguay.

More Superstitions

Many of the superstitions to which mankind clings are helpful in getting individuals over rough spot in life. They are "It's darkest before dawn" ideas in which many find comfort, and as long as they remain harmless in their potentialities I see no reason for disturbing anyone's faith in them. But there are some superstitions capable of working great harm on individuals, that I feel I must take a shot at everytime I encounter them.

One is belief, apparently widespread, that the sicker the mother is during pregnancy, the healthier will be the child she bears. That to me is a dangerous belief for any one to hold. Actually the reverse of this is nearer the truth. The well-being of the child depends almost entirely on the health of the mother during pregnancy. An idea that encourages a mother to endure great discomfort in the mistaken belief that she is thereby benefitting her child, is something to be combatted.

I had a concrete example of this in my own practise. A man called to tell me that his wife was about to have a baby. At this home I found the poor woman in a critical condition. Her legs and arms were swollen from self-poisoning, and her labor brought the most terrible pain. The baby died, but I managed to save the mother's life after working with her for hours.

Her condition had been bad enough to have been alarming for a number of weeks, and I naturally asked her and the husband why they hadn't sent for me sooner. Her answer was pitiful: "Neighbors all told me it was alright for me to be sick, that my baby would be all the healthier for it". When I told her that her dependence on this utterly ridiculous superstition had probably cost the life of her baby, she was heart-broken.

Another superstition, fortunately less dangerous, is that every child is born with a birthmark—if you search for it you'll find it. None of the Quintuplets had birthmarks except Marie—that is, she seemed to have a birthmark. But as she grew older and we examined the mark on her thigh further, we found that it was a tumor. It was removed with radium. Here were five children born at once, not one with a birthmark.

Another superstition that annoys me is "bad, disobedient children grow into the best citizens". That, I consider, is just a facesaver for parents having disobedient children. Allowing children to be disobedient is a good way to insure that they won't grow up into good citizens. Good citizens aren't born, they are made by careful training. Particularly in respect for the rights for others and in obedience. If this weren't true the best thing to do would be do away with all schools and all home training and let children run wild.

"If a child cries a lot it is good for him because it means he is developing healthy lungs". This is another common superstition. Now a lot of crying is done by spoiled children, and I wouldn't quarrel with such a belief except that the baby's cry may be a signal of something significant. He may be stuck by a pin, pinched by clothes, or discomfited by his stomach. Crying shouldn't be disregarded for the silly reason quoted above.

There is also a false belief, by the way, that very young children do not shed tears when they cry. They certainly do from the minute they are born.

Similarly annoying to me is the superstition that a child must have all the so-called children's diseases like measles, mumps, whooping cough and chicken-pox at some time and that the sooner he gets them over with the better. This might have some support by physicians a hundred years ago, in the days of larger families and before the discoveries of vaccines, anti-toxin and other control measures, but we know it is silly to believe it today. Fatalities from these diseases is nearly always greater in children than in adults. No child should ever have any disease from which it can possibly be protected.

Soft Pedal the Blushes

WOMEN PILE on colors to make themselves vivid, but often succeed only in making themselves lithographic, which does not particularly enchant the public eye. It isn't possible to carry bright shades in clothes and on the celestial countenance. One has to give way in dress or make-up, one or the other.

Heavy spots of rouge, smears of bright lipstick, black crayon to accentuate the eyebrows do not create an illusion of loveliness. They make the face look hard or they create an expression of fatigue. Furthermore, my little chickadees, they are no longer fashionable. Make-up, according to today's rule, must be subtle. Match powder carefully, selecting a shade slightly darker than the skin. Don't buy powder sight unseen because it has a pretty name and is put up in a stunning container. Make a test.

If you have natural coloring, don't use rouge. Pink your cheeks before powdering, have an ice rub twice a day, friction your face at night with cream, all smart treatments for keeping the blood streams skipping and dancing.

Tone down the lip pigment. If you must use an eyebrow pencil, select a dark brown instead of black. Keep eye shadows for the merry evening; they are not suitable for daylight wear.

Keeping Watch on Movements Of Shipping and Aircraft Main Job of Air Command

Planes Aloft at All Hours Watching Shipping Between Bay of Fundy and Strait of Belle Isle

ONE CONTROL ROOM

By JACK TRACY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

An Eastern Canadian Port, Jan. 30 —(CP)— Keeping a close watch on the movements of shipping and aircraft is one of the main jobs of the eastern air command, the eyes and ears of Canada's Atlantic defence.

Planes are aloft at all hours, watching shipping between the Straight of Belle Isle and the Bay of Fundy. Information they obtain is relayed to the control room of the air command, nerve centre of the whole defence system.

Location of the room is a secret, but a word from there can start air raid alarms whining, blot out street lights and swing anti-aircraft batteries into operation.

Indicated on Map

Every ship within that area is indicated on the map with a marker and a pointer showing its course. From information provided by naval authorities and patrol planes the ship's exact position on the map is checked every 20 minutes. Royal Canadian Air Force officers told a group of newspapermen who visited the room that sometimes the chart is almost black with the little markers.

Planes ranging up and down the coast and as far as 300 or 400 miles at sea watch every ship. Often they swoop down to ask by blinker signal the name and nationality of the ship. This information, with a description of the craft, is furnished naval authorities.

May Travel As Neutral.

Air force officers explained there is danger an enemy vessel may be travelling under the guise of a neutral. If such is found to be the case, after a check of naval records, either the navy or the air defence "deals with it".

Some aircraft sent up by the air command have a solely protective task. They carry out anti-submarine patrols and convoy ships past dangerous waters. They communicate with their base by radio. Teletype and telephone systems convey the messages to the control room.

Control of civil aviation is also vested in the command of this eastern division of the R.C.A.F. Since much of the region is classified as a restricted area, no civil plane may fly over it without permission from the air command. Even R.C.A.F. planes are forbidden to fly over what are known as "dangerous" areas.

Receive Cue From Control Room.

Air raid precautions squads within the area receive their cue from the control room. A second map in the control centre is divided into squares each marking the location of a ground observer whose duty it is to inform headquarters of the movements of planes.

Other telephone calls are shunted to one side to allow the ground observer a clear line through to the control, for he may be reporting the approach of enemy bombing planes. When several observers report, airmen check their locations from the map to determine the speed and direction of the aircraft. Similar precautions are taken to detect the approach of planes by sea, but air force officers did not disclose what these were.

Must Know Weather.

Airmen who brave the hazards of the North Atlantic climate must know how the weather is going to turn out. To supply them with the most accurate weather information, the air force works hand in hand with the Department of Transport.

To show the importance of accurate meteorological information, an air force officer told of an incident that happened several weeks ago. The weather changed more quickly than experts had predicted. A snowstorm moved in, blotting out the air base while planes were patrolling far at sea.

Directions to land at another base were radioed immediately to the fliers. Two reached the designated landing places but a third ran out of gasoline and had to set his ship down on a beach.

ROTARIANS PLAN TO COMMEMORATE FOUNDING OF CLUB

"Rotary Observance Week" Will be Held in Week of February 18th

3 NEW MEMBERS

Belleville Rotarians are making plans for the commemoration of the 35th anniversary of the founding of Rotary. The week of February 18th to 24th will be "Rotary Observance Week" throughout the world, and particulars of the event were received at the regular luncheon meeting of the Belleville Rotary Club yesterday.

A message from International President Walter Head said, in part: "Rotary, during the thirty-five brief years of its existence, has grown from a single club to more than 5,000 clubs in some eighty countries and other geographical regions and with a membership of more than 200,000. We view with just pride our record of achievement in the fields of fellowship, of community service, of vocational service, and of international service."

What do you read BETWEEN THE LINES?

Between the lines of every advertisement you see, you can imagine these words:

"Thousands of people had to believe in this product — AND BUY IT — before it was ready for advertising!"

The fact that a product is advertised regularly means that a lot of people buy it regularly. The fact that a storekeeper or manufacturer will join his name with it in public proves that he thinks it is good, honest value.

Time was when the slogan, "Let the buyer beware," governed buying and selling. But advertising has reversed that. Today it reads, "Let the seller beware!"

For if his goods don't measure up, he loses out to advertised products that do!

SHORE JOINING AMERKS TO MAKE TURNSTILES CLICK

Venerable Defenceman Will Appear in N.Y. Against the Canadiens

HOOLEY SMITH OUT

Defenceman on Sidelines for One Game for Drawing Match Penalty

By the Canadian Press

Venerable Eddie Shore, still hockey's greatest drawing card, joins the Americans tonight to make the turnstiles click for their game at New York with Montreal Canadiens.

Shore comes back to the National League, too, when the Americans need him badly. Deprived of Al Murray through injuries, the New York club is scheduled to play minus another defenceman, Hooley Smith, who is liable to a one-game suspension for drawing a match penalty Sunday night.

So old Eddie, still a great rushing defenceman and team leader, will play the first game he ever has played for any National League club besides Boston Bruins, with whom he spent 13 seasons. If they lose tonight the Americans will tumble into last place behind the Canadiens, so Shore couldn't have arrived at a more opportune time.

Manager Red Dutton, who got Shore from the Bruins last week in a deal for Eddie Wiseman, managed yesterday to convince Maurice Podoloff, President of the Internationa-American League, that Eddie should be in New York tonight. Shore was to have appeared as owner - manager - defenceman with his Indians at Springfield in an Int-Am game with Pittsburgh.

The Bruins will be involved in the night's other game, opposing Chicago Black Hawks at Boston. The home team can narrow the gap existing between itself and the league-leading New York Rangers to three points, while the Hawks seek to make their hold on fourth place more secure.

McCOY SIGNED FOR $45,000

Connie Mack of A's Expects to Have Championship Team in 1941

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 30 — (AP)—Connie Mack's dream of one last great championship team may be realized in 1941, Earle Mack, son and assistant to the 77-year-old leader of the Philadelphia Athletics, predicted today.

In the younger Mack's pocket as he left for home was a contract signed by Benny McCoy, the free agent second baseman, obtained at a cost of a $45,000 bonus and an agreement for a $10,000 annual salary for 1940 and 1941.

McCoy signed for the record-breaking amount yesterday 15 days after Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis declared him a free agent along with 90 other Detroit Tiger chattels.

The previous high amount paid a free agent was $25,000 that catcher Rick Ferrell collected from St. Louis Browns in 1928.

Assurances that he would play regularly was the factor that swung him to the A's, McCoy said.

Cincinnati Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates, both of the National League, were the other teams McCoy considered joining when a show-down was reached.

"Acquisition of McCoy completes what should be a grand young infield," said Earle Mack, "and we certainly should be pennant contenders by 1941."

At first base Philadelphia will have Dick Seibert; McCoy will hold down second while Bill Lillard, classy recruit from San Francisco, will be at shortstop, Mack said. Al Rubeling, for whom the Athletics paid Atlanta a healthy $35,000, is due to play third.

HOSTAK BEATEN BY TONY ZALE

Middleweight Champion Sprains Left Hand and is Easy Prey for Zale

Chicago, Jan. 30—(AP)— The middleweight boxing title picture, muddled these many months by twin claimants to the crown, appears destined to remain so far for some time to come.

The championship situation cannot be clarified under present circumstances until Ceferino Garcia, recognized as titleholder by the New York and California Commissions, and Al Hostak, the National Boxing Association champion, get together in the ring.

Last night the setup was muddled even further when sturdy Tony Zale, Gary, Ind., boy, outpointed Hostak, Seattle, Wash., slugger in a non-title fight in the Chicago Stadium. Zale and Hostak put on a rousing show for five rounds until Hostak suffered a badly sprained or broken left hand which left him virtually helpless.

Zale, rated the No. 5 challenger by the N.B.A., projected himself into the middleweight picture by his hardy showing against Hostak. Battered around the ring and knocked down in the first round, Zale came on to give Hostak a stiff test in the first half of the fight and then proceed to win easily when his rival was injured.

League Accepts Millionaire as Loop Umpire

Amsterdam, N.Y., Jan. 30—(AP)—The application of a millionaire who loves baseball to umpire in the Canadian-American baseball league this year has the approval of circuit officials.

He is William Hayes, 22, of Rochester, N.H., certified as one of three new umpires. He officiated in the Piedmont League last season.

At his Rochester home, Hayes said he had not signed a contract but expected to work with "some league" this spring.

The arbiter, who inherited his fortune from a grandfather, Orrill H. Hayes, of Philadelphia, owns a semi-pro team in Rochester.

He recently announced he would be a candidate for the New Hampshire Legislature in next fall's primaries—but emphasized he did not plan to forsake baseball in general and umpiring in particular.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Jan. 30—(AP) — Col. John Reed Kilpatrick of Madison Square Garden engineered the deal that put Mike Jacobs into Detroit's Olympia Club and sent Jack Kearns out in the cold... When former President Hoover makes the principal speech at the New York baseball writers' dinner Sunday night, he'll tell of the booing he got in Philly at the opening game of the 1931 World's series between the Mackmen and a guy named Pepper Martin.

Today's guest star: Tom Meany, N.Y., World-Telegram — "The very least Benny McCoy should do with his bonus money is to buy Judge Landis a new hat."

Simple enough—
Listen, my children, to Benny McCoy,
The Grandville, Michigan, country boy,
Who rose overnight from a poor farm hand
To a plutocrat with forty grand.
If you'd achieve success, says he,
Just get the Judge to set you free.

By the way, if the Judge has any more blasts in his system he might level off at these baseball dole takers... Gene Tunney authors a piece in one of the picture magazines (Look) this week and describes just how Jack Dempsey would have kayoed Joe Louis in 2 1-2 minutes of the first heat.

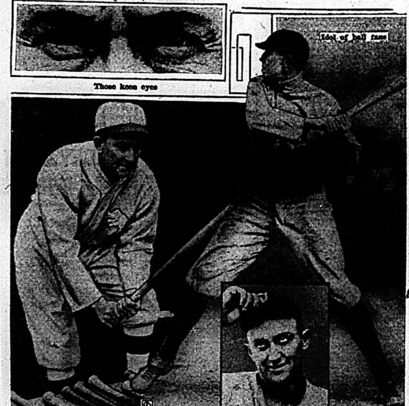
Diamond Meteors!

COBB CALLED GREATEST STAR OF ALL TIME.



Those keen eyes

In late years with A's

Cobb in 1926

Ty Cobb, probably the greatest ball player of all time, swept upward from farm boy to millionaire on the wings of baseball.

There was no fluke in Tyrus Raymond Cobb's rise to riches. "Take it easy" was a phrase he never used in his life.

The poor boy from Banks county, Georgia, playing hard, relentless baseball at top speed. He battled his way into the big money and invested it wisely. Baseball has its wealthy men, but Cobb is almost its only player millionaire.

Was Farm Boy

Baseball was 47 years old when Cobb came into this world. Cobb is 52 now and is retired from the diamond. But the "Georgia Peach," like many another farm boy, played a large part in brightening the century span of baseball.

Young Ty Cobb decided early that baseball would be his career. He went from the farm to the Royston, Ga., baseball team in 1903. He joined the Annison team a few years later,

A Detroit scout soon heard of him and then and there Cobb suffered one of the toughest breaks he ever had. His father was killed in an accidental shooting. Family responsibilities fell on the broadening shoulders of young Ty. He was just 19 years old.

Base Running Excels

Ty went north. Detroit liked him. Cobb's dash and cunning on the base paths, his terrific punch at the bat and his brash, unfailing aggressiveness brought higher salaries and immense popularity with the fans. Before Babe Ruth reached his zenith, Cobb was the biggest drawing card in baseball.

Ty Cobb's incentive to make good in baseball was the same that impels other young men to diamond stardom, wealth and the topmost places in the game's great history. Ty Cobb knew there were rewards at the top for ball players good enough to get there. Other small-town boys had done it before. Cobb duplicated their skill, stamina, courage and sportsmanship and excelled others who were struggling upward alongside him.

Holds 90 Records

Detroit's Tigers were scrappy ball players. When Cobb became their manager in 1921 they had to get scrappier. Cobb drove them and led them, always hard and relentlessly for six years. Cobb was making big salaries and he salted away his earnings in automobile stocks and industrial bonds. When Ty Cobb quit baseball the boy from the Georgia farm had collected 4,000 base hits and more than a million dollars.

The records held by the "Georgia Peach" are fictional. He played the most years, 24. In the most games, 3,033. He was at bat most times, made the most runs, most hits, most stolen bases, has the highest grand batting average .367, led the league in batting 12 times, nine of them in succession, tied for the highest average, .420, and many more.

Cobb held or tied 90 baseball records when he retired. No ball player can match that great mark.

BATA SHOE TEAM BEATS MARMORA IN OVERTIME

"Acey" Reid Scores Tying Goal Just Before Regulation Time on Solo Effort

SCORE IS 6-5

Stojan and Foster Score Two Goals Apiece in Smart Contest

Foxboro, Jan. 30 (Special).—With "Acey" Reid, their star centre player skating through the entire team on a beautiful solo effort to score the tying goal just before the bell went to end the regular playing time, the up-and-coming Bata "shoemakers" had enough fight left in them in the overtime to eke out a close 6-5 victory over the Marmora lads in a fast and evenly played game at the Frankford Arena Monday night.

Presenting a squad of fast skaters who were adepts in the art of somehow or other getting the puck over to a team-mate when their own way to the goal was barred by an opposing player, the Marmora sextette turned in an entirely different game than the "cobblers" who were rather inclined towards individual efforts. Using this short passing game to advantage, the northern lads worked right in on the goal and Lawrence, pinch-hitting for Rogers in the "shoemakers'" nets, had to be more than good as they swarmed around his citadel and peppered rubber at him from all angles. The play was very even however and from a scoring standpoint could not have been closer as at no time during the game did one team ever get more than a one goal advantage. Marmora took the lead in the first and second periods by one goal margins but in both cases before the canto had ended they were again battling on even terms as Bata came back hard to get the equalizer. Bata took the lead for the first time shortly after the third stanza got under way but the northerners came right back to score two and it looked as if it was all over when Reid soloed through the entire Marmort team to get the tying goal just as the bell went.

Foster Comes Through.

Stojan put the Bata lads ahead again shortly after the overtime started and appeared as though they would hold their advantage but Johnston got loose and tied it up again only to have Foster come through with the million-dollar goal as he batted Reid's rebound in the net just as the period ended.

Stojan and Foster with two goals to their credit were the best on the offensive for the winners with Reid getting one goal and assisting in two others. Pollard also went well, getting his team's first goal and until he was rendered "hors de combat" in the past period when he crashed into the boards, proved invaluable with his tenacious back-checking. The visitors' scoring onus was more evenly divided with G. Leonard proving the most dangerous on the attack scoring two of his team's counters. Only five penalties were handed out in a very clean game, although two rival defencemen, N. O'Neill and Guay got into a wrestling match and were banished for five minutes.

Old Man "Flu" is still getting in with his dirty work among the players of the Bata team with their regular goalie and coach now on the sidelines as well as Foster, out with an injured knee. Coach Brydon has been missing for two weeks and while he is away, Dore, who learned his hockey with the Hull "Volants", is taking over the coaching duties for the time being. The boys don't seem to take his instructions to heart but the sooner they learn the all-important art of covering up in their own defensive zone, the farther they will go in the hockey wars. The teams:

Marmora—Goal, Callery; defence, N. O'Neil and C. O'Neil; centre, G. Leonard; wings, Reynolds and E. Leonard; subs, Johnston, Buskard, Kerr and Neal.

Bata—Goal, Lawrence; defence, Guay and Stojan; centre, Reid; wings, Mayette and Foster; subs, Rose, Pollard, McDonald and Dore.

Referees—Cousins and Finnegan.

V. COMPOLO BEATS ROBINSON

"New Wild Bull of the Pampas" Glutton for Punishment

Newark, N. J., Jan. 30—(AP) — Mr. James Joy Johnston, the old "boy bandit" and ballyhooer of heavyweights, was overstating just a bit in billing Valentin Campolo as a "new wild bull of the Pampas" but he wasn't kidding when he said his new importation was a glutton for punishment.

As a heavyweight sensation, the "Wild Bull" was no Luis Angel Firpo in making his big league United States debut in Laurel Gardens here last night. But in stopping big Jim Robinson in nine rounds before a crowd of 2,500, he showed a world of courage, a decided liking for rough going, and considerable ability once he warmed up to his task.

For eight rounds, Robinson punched him around as though he were going to send the bull right back home to pasture in the Argentine. Then, in the eighth, Valentin tossed a few bombs at the body, which the 218 pounder from Philadelphia didn't like at all.

Out came Valentin in the ninth, dropped Robinson in a neutral corner for a nine count with two rights, and, when big Jim got up again, belted away with both hands until Referee Paul Cavalier stepped in and halted the hostilities.

To give him more time to acclimate himself to conditions in this half of the western hemisphere, Johnston decided to give Campolo another bout in this same arena in two weeks, with an opponent to be decided later.

STIRLING BOMBS WAY TO 5 TO 3 WIN OVER MADOC

Roughest Game of Season With Spectators Joining in the Free-for-All

JUVENILE HOCKEY

Stirling, Jan. 30 — (Special)—Stirling "Bombers" bombed their way to a five to three victory over Madoc at the Stirling Arena on Saturday night in the roughest game of the season. Referees Watson and Wallace tried hard to keep the game under control but things broke loose completely near the end of the final period with every player choosing a sparring partner and several spectators swarming onto the ice to make things tougher.

Hayworth put the visitors in the lead after nine minutes and five minutes later Armstrong tied the score on a pass from Jones. Walker scored on Ingram's rebound right after the face-off and Ackey tied it up just before the first rest period. There was no score in the fast moving middle period but four minutes after the last period started Hayworth beat Hart on a pass from Ackey. The tieing goal bounded from Ingram's off a defenceman's skate into his own net. With only five minutes left Stirling turned on the pressure and Morton scored two fast ones. Tempers flared and two players began to mix it. Each player then selected an opponent for a brief and exciting wrestling show with several spectators climbing the boards to get themselves into trouble. The last two minutes of play after things settled down found the Stirling lads holding tight to their two-goal lead. It was one of the most exciting games of the year and a splendid crowd was on hand to witness it.

Stirling Hockey Club are convinced that Saturday night is the best hockey night in Stirling but skating enthusiasts of the district strongly object to having Saturday skating limited to a mere hour after the game is played.

With both teams at full strength the play maintained a sizzling speed throughout the sixty minutes with Hayworth, Ackey, Kellar and Hawthorne looking the best for the visitors. With both front lines of the local squad playing a bang up game and the "bomber" defence greatly strengthened by the presence of H. Ingram. The score is a fair indication of the play, with the honors or "dishonors" for roughing about equally divided.

Summary:

Juvenile Hockey Popular in Stirling

Future prospects for Stirling hockey teams both senior and junior are coming into light through the recently organized juvenile league in the village. One night a week about sixty promising boys get a chance to display their talent and competition and support is particularly keen. Many favorable comments on the ability of several of these youngsters are heard during the games. Four teams have been organized and play their game in double header fashion. The line-ups and league standing up to the present time are as follows:

Black Hawks — Goal, Hulin; defence, Megee and Bailey; centre, Farrell; wings, Pyear and Tucker; subs, Dafoe, Wright, Scott, Morgan, Jandrew and Eggleton.

Canadiens — Goal, Lowery; defence, Utman and Pedley; centre, Lummiss; wings, Ashley and Rodgers; subs, J. Armstrong, J. J. Ackers, Richardson, Campbell and Montgomery.

Maple Leafs—Goal, Morgan; defence, McIntosh and R. Walker; centre, Whitehead; wings, Murray and Donohue; subs, Tulloch, McGowan, Beckel and Woodbeck.

Americans—Goal, Lovell; defence, Thompson and Moshier; centre, Foster; wings, Scrimshaw and Bastedo; subs, D. Bastedo, Cranston and Woods.

The teams are carefully divided to give each boy the best chance of development and all games result in close scoring. Below is the present league standing:

	P.	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
Maple Leafs	4	3	0	1	7
Americans	4	2	1	1	5
Black Hawks	4	1	2	1	3

Actually, the truth in the matter is the fact the Petes are just "too fast." If Skipper Holway entertains any hopes of his charges ever beating the Petes, he'd better charter the speediest Fairey bomber up around Trenton and scour the entire Dominion air bases in search of hockey talent. However, in defeat last night's game had its moments as a real old-time Air Force battle broke out in the third period when "Mush" Higgins and "Bun" Kingdon commenced fisticuffs in the penalty box and players accepted the spark to drop their sticks and pretend to stage what was supposed to be a fight. Actually the fight didn't have any more sting than the Flyers' attack despite the fact a couple of Petes needed patching up via the medical route, but their injuries weren't the result of any pugnacious or fiery Air Force attack, merely accidents, that's all.

Whatever happened to keep Referee Joe Smith from officiating is not known, but from the outset the individual players last night seemed to sense the fact that Bill Steen wasn't exactly the man to handle the situation, that was about to ensue. Bill is a fine chap, but unfortunately he wasn't acquainted with a Petes-Flyer feud, which had been brewing all season and reached the boiling point last night. The rest is history, but getting back to the game the Flyers lack that much-needed scoring punch that makes a winner. Gibson is tending better goal than he displayed even when the Flyers won the provincial title, "Pop" Irvine is always a threat, but aside from these two we can't see where the Airmen are playing the hockey they allege they are capable. All along the line the Petes carry too much speed for the Flyers, so much so, that even when the Liftlock sextette was handicapped on account of penalties, they were actually carrying the play to the Air Force and skating back to set up a four-man defence, before the Flyers could get organized.

From what we hear neither city basketball or hockey clubs can hope to use students, who play sports in the senior Interscholastic circles of the C.O.S.S.A. The Belleville "Y" Intermediate O.B.A. hoopsters had planned to use Max Vechter, elongated Collegiate centre player, but last week it was announced that student-players participating in the C.O.S.S.A. could not play sports in other branches. This newly instituted ruling from the Interscholastic C.O.S.S.A. headquarters won't be any too well received in the camp of the Belleville "Quintes" either. Skipper Toots Holway had visions of using "Lefty" Lougheed and Partridge of Albert College, as the local juniors are seeking additional defensive strength, as well as left wing assistance. In the meantime, however, both Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate are sponsoring Interscholastic sports and if their C.O.S.S.A. regulation, regarding the abolition of outside participation of sports, is put into practice —the local cagers and pucksters can look elsewhere for their talent for this year at least.

Secretary Harry Knott, of the Belleville Softball Association, announced yesterday that the annual meeting of the local "mushball loop" would be held in the Y.M.C.A. this evening. It is necessary to hold the district annual conclave somewhat earlier this year, as the Ontario Softball Association holds its annual meeting on Good Friday, which is slightly earlier than usual in 1940. Local team representatives should come to this evening's meeting prepared to submit any proposals of changes to the O.A.S.A. constitution deemed necessary or for the benefit of the game at large. Whether intimations of the meeting were felt previously or not, we cannot say but Dame Rumour informs us that Maestro Gerald Barriage of the Corbys A. C. has been in close communication with Johnnie Bawden, that is since Frank Sedore departed to join the Canadian army. With Barriage allegedly angling for Bawden's services for 1940, others are wondering what kept Coach Chuck Barnett under cover so long?

Every time the Picton "Stars" lose a game (and they haven't won one this year) Coach Larry Goyer and his henchmen put up the cry "we wuz robbed, the referee beat us, etc." Every referee to work in a Trenton-Picton game has found himself the target on attacks from one or both camps until today we hear that all O.H.A. officials in this section of the country are taboo, insofar as Trenton and Picton are concerned. In the future these clubs have agreed to use former hockey players and have named two players who never refereed hockey before in their varied hockey experience. Actually if the management of the Picton and Trenton clubs would pay more attention to coaching their players in hockey and less to criticizing the games' officials, we are confident their dividends would be increased and better hockey would result.

Do you remember when—The prize ring's Cinderella man, James J. Braddock, announced his retirement from boxing two years ago today. A week earlier the New Jersey fighter had won his first victory since defeat for the heavyweight crown by Joe Louis, when he staged a comeback success over Tommy Farr, British champion.

SPORT SPICE—The Gananoque "Combines" made it five in a row at the expense of Walt Gerow's Gibbardville sextette last night, which should remind us that the Queen's "students" make their only appearance of the season here Thursday.....What chance has an ordinary working gent, now that millionaires are taking up the umpiring business...See there was a surprise win in Kingston last night when Wally Elmer's Kingston team beat the fast Queen's juniors 5-2...Mebbe Wally's efforts are again bearing fruit...Benny McCoy should always thank Judge Landis for his present financial success...After being declared a free agent, McCoy signed with the Athletics for a cool $45,000 per...Apparently the veteran Connie Mack entertains hope of living to a riper age and heading another team to dethrone the Yankees, to which all will add an "amen."

Father Coughlin to be Investigated by Justice Dep't.

New York, Jan. 30—(AP)— Rev. Charles E. Coughlin has been marked for investigation "in due course" by the Department of Justice following the filing of formal complaints against the Michigan raido priest by the Jewish Peoples Committee.

This was confirmed by O. John Rodge, Assistant United States Attorney General, before he left last night for Minneapolis and Chicago to gather evidence in an inquiry stemming from the arrest of 17 Christian Front members here on charges of seditious conspiracy to overthrow the government.

Bob Davidson

Bob Davidson is the "unknown" member of the "Apps-Drillon line" with Toronto Maple Leafs, playing in the shadow of his two great teammates, although this year he has come into his own to a greater degree than in the past. "Rugged Robert," he is dubbed by home town scribes, as he mixes in all types of play, game after game, in the dogged, determined way that a few other players in the league also do without getting their names in the headlines from day to day. He's a product of the city he is playing for and is going through his fourth complete season with the Leafs, after seeing part-time service in two previous seasons. He'll be 28 years old 11 days from today. Played all his amateur hockey in Toronto and on signing a pro contract went to Syracuse, then the Leafs' farm team. One of the most valued members of the team —the only one that hasn't missed a game this season. Looks after the left wing beat of the "Apps-Drillon line" and takes care of most of the back-checking, although his scoring punch has improved this winter. In a pinch he can handle a defence assignment Mathematical totals for his career until the start of the present season: 19 goals, 38 assists for 57 points, with 162 minutes served in penalties.

BRIDGE AND EUCHRE THOROUGHLY ENJOYED

Members of St. Thomas Laymen's Association were hosts at a delightful bridge and euchre in St. Thomas Parish Hall last night. A number of tables were in play and the large crowd that attended enjoyed the function to the utmost.

After play had been in progress for some time and delicious refreshments served, the following prize winners were announced. Bridge, Mrs. A. B. Payne, and Miss Alice Potter; Euchre, Ladies, Mrs. J. W. McKay, Mrs. Alfred Evans; Gentlemen, J. W. McKay and E. W. Johnson.

A novel departure of the affair was the fact that members of the host organization served refreshments to the lady guests. A draw for a basket of fruit, following the lunch, resulted in Mr. B. Hanks winning the handsome prize.

FRUIT VENDORS FINED IN COURT

More severe action will be taken in the near future with those vendors of fruits, who insist upon making breaches of the law, which covers sales on markets or other places, Senior Fruit Inspector C. T. Stevenson said today.

While vendors in this district have observed the law much better than those in other places, any tendency to drift away from the proper paths will be met with court action, he added.

Inspector Stevenson has just returned from Bowmanville where he had preferred charges against members of a Toronto fruit company for trucking apples away, while the fruit was under the detention of government inspectors, and overfacing.

In court, the men were fined $30 each and costs amounting to a total of $55.50.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

BRIDGE STREET Y.P.S.

Bridge Street Y.P.S. held their regular weekly meeting in the Ladies' Parlour with a good attendance.

The meeting opened with a sing song led by the President, Perry Everett after which the remainder of the evening was in charge of the Christian Culture group. A short worship service was conducted by Marjorie Lashbrook.

The special speaker for the evening was Bill McVean of Albert College. His topic was "The Events leading up to the Present Situation in Europe". His four principle reasons for this were: the balance of power; the rise of Germany; the Versailles Treaty; and the rise of Hitlerism and Nazism in Germany.

A lively discussion followed this very helpful talk after which the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

AT THE McCARTHY

"A Girl Must Live."

A picture playing to full houses for four weeks in a suburban theatre in Toronto must "have something". That is the attitude of motion picture exhibitors towards "A Girl Must Live", now showing at the McCarthy Theatre, and the public appreciation appears to confirm that it "has something" that is highly appealing. Ray Lewis of the Canadian Motion Picture Digest sums it up in this sentence: "'A Girl Must Live' is as naughty as the English can make them, naughtier than Hollywood would perhaps dare to make them."

Anyway, it is naughty in a nice way, plus a succession of chuckles which keep the audience amused and sends them away happy.

AT THE BELLE

"Everything Happens At Night."

Story value and acting performances are counted on in "Everything Happens At Night" more than in any of Sonja Henia's previous five productions. A completely different type of story for the famous skating star and queen of the ice, the screen play by Art Arthur and Robert Harari is filled with love and laughter, and mysterious danger, too. It's a timely tale of modern intrigue, with the added attraction of Sonja's matchless artistry on silver blades and slippery skis.

Ray Milland and Robert Cummings are featured as Sonja's leading men in the attraction which opens next at the Belle Theatre. Because it is essentially a story picture, Irving Cummings, known as an "actor's director", was selected by Darryl F. Zanuck for the megaphone. The cast includes Maurice Moscovich, Leonid Kinswey, Alan Dinehart and Fritz Feld.

Signed by 20th Century-Fox originally just for her skating genius, the studio asked no real acting talent from Sonja Henie in her first few pictures where they were content just to have her perform on the ice. But it was soon apparent that a real dramatic talent was possessed by the ice champion. Never, however, has Sonja had a part as demanding upon her new-found ability as in "Everything Happens At Night".

"Blackout In Paris."

Blackout in Paris!—But there's no blackout for crime!

So Charlie Chan is commandeered to serve in a great human emergency in "Charlie Chan In City In Darkness", the thrilling new 20th Century-Fox melodrama is announced as the companion feature attraction. Here's timely and unforgettable screen fare.

Sidney Toler again plays the famous Earl Derr Biggers detective, caught like so many others in the tense city in those terrible days of crisis, and he is able to help the Paris Chief of Police by solving a baffling crime, commited under cover of darkness.

Lynn Bari, Richard Clarke, Harold Huber, Pedro de Cordoba, Dorothy Tree, C. Henry Gordon, Douglas Dumbrille and Noel Madison are featured in Toler's supporting cast.

True — False Game.

A special extra attraction on the Belle Theatre stage, one evening each week will be Ken Sobie's new True—False Game.

Here indeed is fascinating entertainment for everyone, it is easy to play and you'll enjoy it. For it is lots of fun. Everybody's doin' it, and splendid cash prizes are awarded to the winners.

AT THE CAPITOL

"We Are Not Alone"

Paul Muni and Jane Bryan were doing one of the most impressive scenes from James Hilton's story, "We are Not Alone" now showing at the Capitol Theatre. It was the climax of the film, where Muni, playing gentle, kindly Dr. Newcome, and Miss Ryan, the trusting young Austrian girl, Leni, meet in prison for the last time before being executed for the crime of killing the doctor's wife. Both are innocent.

Sobbing out her fear of death, breathlessly declaring that she loves him, Leni falls into the doctor's arms. He, bewildered by all that has happened in the short space of the last few weeks, is still able to comfort this gentle girl, the girl with whom he might have really found a happy married life instead of the troublesome existence he led with his neurotic wife

"They won't believe us. They have to blame somebody," he tells her.

"They are going to kill us, though we have not done any wrong at all," Leni says.

"I know," he confronts. "We are not alone...." She looks questioningly at him. "These things are always happening. They're happening now.. every minute, every second ....out there. Thousands....thousands....they've done no crime. but they've got to die. Don't be afraid of death. It isn't the worst thing to face, only the last." He refers to the World War, which has just begun.

And so he reassures her. It is their last meeting, for on the next day, they will both be executed. But before they part, the doctor expounds his belief that somewhere, someday, the two of them will meet again and lead a happy life. Surely, he says, the world cannot be as wrong as it seems right now to him. Even wrongly sentenced to death, the doctor's faith in the eventual decency of mankind does not fail him.

Clinging to him, at last in his embrace, Leni, overcome, suddenly faints. The aroused matron and guards rush into the room, and the doctor bends down, kisses Leni on the forehead, and then motions to the guards. "Fainted, that's all..." he says, gently. "Don't wake her up too soon. I've said my goodbye ... it's better this way." And he goes to the door. "If only she could sleep and never wake at all."

Director Goulding snapped his fingers, and the spell which Jane Bryan and Paul Muni have woven with their artistry was broken. But one of the most moving, sincere and tender love scenes ever made was recorded on film.

SYLVANUS APPS LIKELY TO RUN

Nominated Conservative Candidate Some Time Ago — Smythe Agreeable He Should Run

Toronto, Jan. 30—(CJ)— Syl Apps, star centre ice player with Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League, was not available here today for comment on a report from Galt, Ont., that he definitely had decided to contest the March 26 federal election as Conservative candidate in Brant constituency.

Apps received the official Conservative nomination some time ago. Present member is G. E. Wood, of Cainsville, Ont., a Liberal.

Conny Smythe, manager of the Maple Leafs, however, said he considered the Galt report to be correct.

"I have talked to Apps and I have told him definitely that I believe he should run and that he should continue to play hockey," Smythe said. "I believe Apps is the type of young man we need in our politics.

"His remuneration from hockey makes him independent to vote as he pleases and not be bound by party routine. I know of no other business a man could be in which permits him more time to attend to his political duties and interfere less with his regular business than that of a professional hockey player."

RED ICEBREAKER IS SAFELY HOME FROM ARCTIC AREA

Sedoff Blasted From Floes After Being Carried Within 300 Miles of Pole

ARCTIC ICE SAGA

Moscow, Jan. 30 (AP)—A saga of the perpetual Arctic ice ended on a note of triumph today as the northern sea route administration reported to Joseph Stalin that the icebreaker Sedoff, blasted from the grip of Polar floes, had been brought safely home after drifting at the top of the world 27 months.

The rescue was accomplished by the 11,000-ton icebreaker Joseph Stalin, after the Sedoff was carried within 300 miles of the North Pole, a new record for ships, and then drifted slightly southward.

The Sedoff, in tow of the Joseph Stalin, came back to Murmansk last night, to a flood-lighted wharf where relatives waited to greet the crew of sixteen, whom they had not seen since the voyage began June 15, 1937.

Helpless In Ice Since Oct. 1937.

Since Oct. 23, 1937, the Sedoff had been helpless in the ice with a broken propeller. Supplied with food and fuel, Captain K. S. Badigan and his crew engaged in scientific observations and had hoped to drift across the Pole.

When perverse ice currents prevented this, the Joseph Stalin went on a voyage of rescue, the Soviet News Agency Tass reported.

Commander Ivan Papanin, head of the northern sea route administration said:

"The sea met the icebreaker (Joseph Stalin) with a gale raging for several days.

"We confined ourselves to deep reconnoitring and proceeded to Bartensburg, where we bunkered and again sailed northward. On Jan. 3, the Sedoff crew saw the beams of our searchlights. Two days later, the lights of the Sedoff gleamed.

"For ten days our flagship stubbornly and methodically, now by frontal attack, now by flanking movements, forced its way through three-year-old ice.

"Next day the ice conditions changed, and on Jan. 13 we approached the Sedoff."

Difficult Task.

But freeing the trapped vessel was an even greater task, he related.

"The Sedoff," he said, "was frozen into a cup of ice weighing several thousand tons. But by heating the hull and blowing up the ice, we gradually freed the ship of part of the ice.

"With great difficulty the flagship forced its way toward the edge of the ice. Thick towlines could not stand the unbearable strain, and burst one after another.

"The ice cup finally was born off only on our way to Bartensburg."

Petes Carry Too Much Speed For Flyers and Win 5 to 0; Players Engage in Fisticuffs

Police Needed to Clear Ice After a Third Period Melee on Penalty Bench

TWO MISCONDUCTS

'Bun' Kingdon Leads Scorers With Two Goals and an Assist

Flashing too much speed throughout, the Peterboro "Petes" practically assured themselves of first place in the district Intermediate "A" O.H.A. group with a well-earned 5-0 win over the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" at the Hume Arena last night. Although the home crowd was deprived of victory, the patrons were treated to a thrilling contest, when fistic outbreaks added to the color of the pastime as the contesting players dropped their hockey sticks at the least provocation and entered into fisticuffs, without much damage resulting, however .

Police ultimately stepped into the picture in the third period as the game got far from the control of Referee Bill Steen of Kingston, when players, Higgins, of the Flyers and Kingdon of Peterboro, entered into a mild state of pugnaciousness after being banished for a minor tangle on the ice. The outbreak in the penalty box proved the spark to inspire the players, who in turn squared off on the ice and commenced a general bedlam, that resulted in police entering the picture to quell matters.

Petes Take Early Lead

The Petes took a first period lead, when Heal scored after the period bell had sounded, Referee Steen failing to hear the timers' bell and allowing the score despite O.H.A. rulings to the contrary. The sound of the bell was very faint, however. Sparked by their good fortune on an unearned goal in the first period, the Petes added a second goal in the middle session and ran wild in the third period to score three and white-wash the Flyers at 5-0. The game was not without its moments, however, as two Peterboro players required medical attention, Eddie Starr requiring two stitches in his forehead to close a wound.

Bun Kingdon, with two goals, and an assist, led the scoring Petes, as Tompkins collected a goal and an assist. Harding was in rare shape in the Petes' nets and was given sterling support by Crowe and Jopling, Kingdon, Starr, Tompkins and Blewett carrying considerable punch for the winners. Goalie Gibson and "Pop" Irvine stood out as the best for the losers.

The shots on net by periods were—Peterboro—10, 8 and 7; total, 25. Air Force—6, 5 and 4; total —15.

The line-ups—Peterboro—goal — Harding; defence—Crowe, Gardner and Burton; centre — Kingdon, wings—Tompkins, subs—F. Jopling, Crowe, J. Jopling, Coughlin, Blewett and Starr. Air Force— goal — Gibson; defence—Deryer and Irvine; centre—McLeod; wings—McNab and Lemieux; subs—Higgins, Cameron, Baldwin, Legris, Gathercol and Dunning.

TWEED WINS OVER NORWOOD BY 9-4 SCORE

Fastest Game of Trent Valley Seen as Tweed Ties Loop Leaders

Tweed, Jan. 30 (Special)—In the fastest game of the season, Tweed defeated Norwood by a score of 9 to 4 at the local arena on Monday evening. The win puts the locals right up with the leaders with seven wins and four losses for fourteen points. In amassing this point total the locals have scored 55 goals, while allowing their opponents 38. The locals were strengthened by the return of Joe Courneyea their centre star, who had been unable to play for the past three previous games owing to illness.

Tweed opened the scoring early in the first period when Orr's sally into Norwood territory was successful. The advantage was short-lived, however, as Brady beat Reeves from close in. Tummon's shot from the wing forced McMaster, Norwood goalie, to his knees, but he was unable to clear the puck and Storms batted in the rebound. A typical Courneyea-Prevost passing attack netted another goal as this clever pair penetrated Norwood territory for the prettiest goal of the game with Prevost on the scoring end. Puffer made the score 3 to 2 shortly before the period ended on a pass from Rodgers while Orr drew the only penalty of the period.

Five goals were scored in the second period with Tweed again collecting three counters. Another Courneyea to Prevost play put the latter in the clear and McMaster had no chance to save as his defence was being split wide open on nearly every Tweed rush. Only his good work in goal saved a record score. Hill of Norwood, who played a smart game along the right boards, beat Tweed goalie with two successive goals, the first on a lone rush and the second on Puffer's pass. Wagar scored one of the prettiest goals of the evening after a clever bit of passing with Leal to score what proved to be the winning goal. Prevost gave Tweed a safe lead when he counted on a pass from Long as the gong sounded. Score at the end of the second period Tweed 6, Norwood 4.

The final period was featured by some beautiful stick-handling and shooting by Storms who scored three goals in this frame. His solo effort was a treat to watch and proved to be the blow which took all the heart out of the visitors. Although they tried hard they seldom got the puck out of the centre zone and Reeves had an easy time. McMaster on the other hand was called upon to make a dozen stops, and could not be blamed for the three which beat him. Storms scored the last two goals on passes from Wagar. Leal also drew an assist on the first. While Tummon and Orr left the scoring pretty much to the forwards, they gave Reeves excellent protection, assisted by sub-defencemen Woodcock. For Norwood, Puffer, Rodgers and Hill looked best with Brady also turning in a nice effort.

Tweed: Goal, Reeves; defense, Orr, Tummon; centre, J. Courneyea; wings, Wagar, Prevost; subs, Storms, Leal, A. Courneyea, Long, Woodcock.

Norwood: Goal, McMaster; defense, Rothwell, Webb; centre, Puffer; wings, P. Rodgers, Hill; subs, Davis, O'Leary, Richardson, Brady, Aboud, W. Rodgers.

Referees: Innis, Norwood; Sayers, Tweed.

Truth for Ruth

By DAPHNE A. M'VICKER

"Give me," the pretty girl in the gray tweed suit ordered, "a head lettuce beanwich with baked sands."

The waiter stared. The other girl at the table choked. The one in the gray tweed was staring with smoky violet eyes at a couple that had just entered.

"Ruth," the second girl admonished, "come back to earth. The young lady," she added turning to the waiter, "wants a head lettuce sandwich with baked beans. And, my dear, even if Clayton Chambers is over there with another woman, you mustn't lapse into spoonerisms again."

The gray tweed girl flushed scarlet.

"Oh, Joyce, did I?" she wailed. "It's my besetting sin. Whenever I get the least bit excited my words hop around into the wrong order and my initial tetters turn somersaults. It's the reason I never could take dictation."

Then seeing the significant glance from her friend at the words "get excited" she flushed rosily again. But she could not keep her eyes from the couple down the aisle and the man suddenly spied her. With an exclamation he sprang to his feet and came toward her.

"Miss Sinclair," he exclaimed. "What grand luck. Would you come over to be introduced to my mother? I've so hoped you two might meet."

A moment later, looking down into the pleasant patrician face of the older woman, Ruth felt her heart jump. If he wanted her to meet his mother, it must mean something, mustn't it?

Her dream had built a little brick cottage and installed the elderly woman in a chair in a sunny living room and all but tucked a grandchild on a stool at her feet when she finally smiled back into Joyce's knowing eyes and rose to go. The other couple had left first—the man was just helping his mother into a taxi.

He spoke to the taxi driver. And all the color left Ruth's face at the overheard words. Her eyes widened in amazed incredulity. Then, to everybody's astonishment, she stepped forward.

"J—just a moment," she said. "I—I'd love to have you come to see me, Mrs. Chambers. To stay for awhile and visit my mother and me."

The woman's face was perplexed.

"That would be very nice," she said distantly. "Good afternoon, Miss Sinclair."

The telephone in the Sinclair hall was never quite silent. A romping flock of brothers and sisters all had their own calls.

For many, many days, there was no call like that.

Then finally one day there was such a call. But the voice that answered was a strange one.

"Yes?" it said. "Mr. Chambers? Why thank you, I'm so sorry but I have an engagement. Yes, tomorrow, too. Yes, every evening next week."

But on one of those evenings the engagement seemed to be with the apple tree in the garden. She was perched on one of the lower limbs, swinging her feet idly. And she slid down in vast confusion when the gate clicked.

"Mr. Chambers—"

"In person," he answered, unsmiling. "Miss Sinclair, I had to see you. I just located your house this evening—I had been looking for you on this street in town; I didn't know you lived in a suburb. I know you don't want to see me but I talked to your friend and she says she's sure there's some misunderstanding."

Purple twilight was laying a soft curtain about the wide yards and pleasant vistas of the little suburb. It reflected in Ruth's dreamy eyes.

"But why did you wait so long before calling?"

The man flushed. "It's an asinine thing to say—but I was a little surprised at your being so enthusiastic over my mother—on such short acquaintance."

Ruth nodded. "You thought I was chasing you? And when you found I didn't want to see you, you thought it was a better game than you'd supposed? Well—" She whirled to look directly at him. "Well, I didn't like what I heard you say to the taxi driver. You spend money very freely, Mr. Chambers. You have the name of being a very successful business man. So I was a little surprised to hear you tell the driver to take your mother to the Old Ladies' Home. That was why I asked her out—a foolish gesture, but I made it."

Clayton Chambers stood still, his face a blur of astonishment. Then he suddenly gave a roar of laughter. He seized Ruth by the arm and led her to the street. He pointed at a sign in the window of the white house next door.

"What does that say?"

Ruth stammered a little. "Tombs for Rurists—"

The arm went on around her.

"You little nut! Your friend told me about that way you have of tangling up your sentences. 'Tombs for Rurists', indeed! I didn't know you could even hear cockeyed. My mother has not lived in the city for some years. The taxi driver is an old employee of ours. And what I said was this—" He shook her a little. "Now listen carefully. 'Jones,' I said, 'take her to the lady's Old Home'."

"Ruth," her sister's voice demanded a moment later, "what is that man doing?"

Ruth's answer was prompt.

"Missing Key," she said, dimpling.

New York, Jan 30 —(AP)— Attempts to give the stock market a feeble boost today fell flat as Steels, Motors, Aircrafts and other leaders generally refused to catch hold. Near the fourth hour declines predominated. Bonds and commodities were mixed Stocks inclined to give ground included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, J. I. Case, American Telephone, Westinghouse, General Electric and American Smelting.

Rails, Utilities and Oils kept to a fairly steady course.

Canadian issues, on the whole, were steady. Fractional improvements were registered by Canadian Pacific, Dome and Lake Shore Mines and McIntyre. Distillers Seagram inched back and Canada 4s, in the bond market, slumped 1 1-4 points.

APPS TO DISCUSS FUTURE PLANS

Prominent Hockeyist and Young Politician Says He's in Quandary

Toronto, Jan. 30.—(CP)—Hockey player and budding politician, Syl Apps said today his future plans will be discussed tomorrow night at a meeting in Paris with officers of the Brant Conservative Association.

Star centre with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League and nominated as Conservative candidate in Brant riding in the Federal general election March 26, Apps admitted he was in a bit of a quandary.

"Right now I don't know how I'll play hockey and conduct an election campaign at the same time, but we are going to talk it all over in Paris tomorrow,"he said.

And what if he were successful in the election?

"Well, I don't know about that either", Apps said. "I guess we'll discuss that phase in relation to hockey at the meeting too."

On the way to a practice at Maple Leaf Gardens with the Leafs, Apps said he had not heard a report that Conny Smythe, Leafs' manager, would accompany him to Paris for the meeting.

Smythe said yesterday that he believed Apps should run for the riding seat and that he should continue to play hockey.

NAZIS ATTEMPTING

town, in southeast England, at a height of less than 100 feet.

A boatman of the Kentish town said of the invader:

"We heard a roar overhead and saw a greyish silver monoplane swooping down towards the harbor. It banked steeply around the lighthouse and went off along the sea front.

"In a couple of minutes it came back again and circled the lighthouse before disappearing. It was so low I thought it must hit the top of the lighthouse."

Captain Stumbles Ashore.

John Sanders of Yarmouth, sole survivor of the crew of a coastal lightship machine-gunned by a German plane yesterday, struggled ashore at an east coast town today as the bodies of his seven shipmates were found on the beach near a wrecked dinghy.

The bomber, he said, sprayed the lightship with bullets and dropped nine bombs, one of which struck the craft.

Sanders said the attack came at 9:30 a.m., whereupon the crew launched a boat. At 2:30 a.m. today, when only two of the eight men still were able to row, they heard waves breaking on the shore, but at this point the boat capsized. Sanders stumbled ashore while his seven companions were drowned.

Informed sources estimates that 15 to 20 German planes took part in yesterday's onslaught — the broadest of the war — extending over 700 miles, from the Shetland Islands south to the Kentish coast.

None Attack Inland

None of the attackers penetrated inland and of 13 British merchant ships and one Latvian vessel bombed and machine-gunned, not one was sunk, although there were several casualties among crewmen. The Germans also were said to have struck at two lightships.

(The Nazi News Agency circulated a claim that seven "enemy-convoyed armed merchant ships and two patrol boats" were destroyed in yesterday's operations.)

Seven of the crew of the Latvian freighter Tautmila, 3,724 tons, were killed while the only known British fatality was the death of a man aboard the steamship Gripfast, 1,109 tons. There were several wounded on these and other ships.

Clouds Assist Enemy

On the northeast coast air raid warnings were sounded as far as 40 miles inland and thousands of persons entered raid shelters, emptying schools, factories and shipyards .

Low clouds enabled the German planes, mostly Heinkels, to escape the British fighters. Germany apparently gambled that low ceilings and cold would keep defence airmen on the ground.

From Captain Dreimann of the Latvian freighter came a graphic account of the attack. He said a direct hit shattered the Tautmila's engines and another bomb struck "almost on top" of a lifeboat being lowered from the stricken ship, killing several men and hurling others into the sea.

Still another bomb "fell right on top of the cook," the Captain said. Fifteen other men including the Captain and his wife escaped injury.

Vessel Machine-gunned

The Captain of the 4,867-ton Oteerpool, one of the 13 British merchant ships, said his vessel was machine-gunned after 10 bombs fell nearby. Two of the crew were reported wounded.

The Captain said he met the machine-gun attack with rifle fire, lying on his back on the bridge to fire at one bomber. Three British fighters appeared quickly and put the bomber to flight.

An official account said that "in spite of the severe weather conditions and poor visibility Royal Air Force aircraft wer able to engage and drive off the enemy at many points."

The Times called yesterday's raids, along with submarine and mine warfare an "unmistakable answer" to those who ask "what are we fighting for."

Ships Attractive to Nazis

The Times said that the lightships attacked were "attractive to the Nazi no doubt for not only are they motionless and defenceless, but they are beyond all dispute noncombatant."

The Daily Express citing the raids in a plea for aid to Finland, said "Britain's defences save us from the fate of Finland. Hitler's bombers only nibble at our coast."

Royal Air Force fighters took to the air in weather so severe that one train was 28 hours late on a 400-mile trip, and the government cautioned householders to use coal, gas and electricity sparingly.

Transportation was severely disrupted in the worst January storm in 46 years. Thousands of Londoners walked to work yesterday, many of them hours tardy.

The latest report of mine warfare came from the 298-ton Netherlands ship Nora, towed ashore by a salvage tug. Her stern had been blasted away.

The Daily Telegraph said that when Germany announced the intention to resort to unrestricted warfare at sea, "she was in effect declaring war on all seafaring nations."

Denies Sea to Commerce

"In effect, Germany designed to deny the seas indiscriminately to all seaborne commerce, whether bound for British ports or neutral," the paper said. "She has attempted to carry out this piratical campaign by dropping mines wholesale outside territorial waters, and by torpedoing every ship coming within range of her U-boats.

"To wreak her wrath more effectually, she has been entirely contemptuous of the international agreements to which she is a party —agreements which forbid sinking of non-belligerent vessels and for warning and making provision for the safety of the crew."

The Daily Express said the nation should not allow its senses to be numbed by the repetition of U-boat attacks on neutral ships and defenceless lightships. "Every one calls for atonement. Every one reminds us of the ruthlessness of our enemy.

"But remember always that Nazi barbarians are not the same as the German people."

PREMIER HEPBURN

Lt. Col. George Drew, Conservative leader, protested clauses in the Succession Duty Act by which arbitrary valuations placed on various items in an estate by the treasurer, are removed from the jurisdiction of any court.

"We should add to the bill that the legislature of Ontario hereby rescinds Magna Charta and the Bill of Rights," said Col. Drew.

Morass of Litigation

Attorney-General Conant said he yielded to none in his abhorrence of bureaucracy. Yet were all the decisions of various boards, commissions and officials subject to review by the courts, the result would be a morass of costly litigation.

"The cost of litigation to the poor man has become absolutely prohibitive," said Mr. Conant. "It is beyond all reason or justice. The poor man can't enter the courts to prosecute his rights with any idea of when finality is to be reached."

Premier Hepburn and Col. Drew yesterday condemned Mr. King's surprise calling of a Federal general election.

Action of the commander of the German pocket battleship, Graf Spee, in scuttling his ship rather than face three British warships was more reputable than that of Mr. King in dissolving Parliament rather than face Conservative Leader Manion and his 38 followers in the House of Commons, said Mr. Hepburn.

"His conduct is shameful and I rise to protest it," he said.

Justifies Position

Col. Fraser Hunter (Lib. Toronto —St. Patricks) justified his action in walking out on the division in the legislature last week when a resolution was passed condemning the Federal Government for its "so little effort" in prosecuting the war.

"I was sure the resolution would give Mackenzie King the opportunity to betray Canada and I was right," said Col. Hunter. "The chief business of the legislature is to get on with winning the war. I'll follow any leader who will devote every energy to that purpose."

In placing the onus for the Federal election on the Ontario Legislature because of the resolution, Mr. King betrayed the first principle of the democracy for which Canada is at war, Col. Hunter said.

Question of Privilege

Col. Drew rose to a question of privilege to introduce discussion of Canada's war effort. He said that Prime Minister King gave as the first of his reasons for refusing to face parliament an alleged political campaign against him in the Ontario Legislature.

In so doing, Col. Drew said, Mr. King attributed to him the seconding of the Ontario censure resolution. This was untrue.

"I had no intimation of any kind that such a resolution was to be introduced until it was read by the Premier," he said.

Equally untrue was Mr. King's statement that Col. Drew had called for an immediate election. He had not called for a vote right away. Instead he had said it wasn't necessary to wait for an election to adopt the slogan "King must go."

I wish to place it on record in this House that those two hastily invented excuses of Mr. King's for not facing parliament were without any color or shadow of truth," Col. Drew said.

Recalls Delegation

Col. Drew recalled that a committee specially named by the legislature went to Ottawa to discuss with the Federal government the organization of Ontario's resources for war. If it was the opinion then of the Prime Minister that discussions of war measures were out of place in Ontario, he should have said so before receiving the delegation.

"When he thought it might serve his purpose, he welcomed our discussion of every phase of Canada's war effort," he said. "When we reported to this House the unpleasant fact that the Dominion government had failed to offer your committee any opportunity of co-operation whatever, then for the first time Mr. King made the startling discovery that we had no right to discuss the very subjects he had asked us to discuss."

Refrained From Criticism Claim.

Col. Drew said he had refrained from public criticism of Canada's war effort until the legislature met, though he wrote to the prime minister "outlining a number of scandalous contracts with the most minute detail."

"He stated in reply that he was referring these matters to those charged with the responsibility for dealing with them," continued Col. Drew. "He said that he would be prepared to deal with them in the House of Commons. Nothing has been done to remedy the situation in any case, and the abuses still continue. Mr. King has had exact and complete details. He has had that information for three months while I refrained from comment in hope he would act."

Premier Hepburn said he had been indicated along with Col. Drew despite the fact that both had a perfect right to speak their minds in the legislature and that the House itself had a perfect right to petition the federal government.

The legislature on several occasions had passed resolutions and petitions for the federal government. The fact Ottawa ignored them didn't deprive Ontario of her rights to pass them.

Discounts King's Statement.

If the federal government had taken cognisance of the Ontario legislature resolution of Mar. 23, 1939, calling for a mobilization of resources for war, Canada today would not have half-clad soldiers and she might be producing munitions, said Mr. Hepburn.

The premier discounted Mr. King's statement that the Ontario censure resolution was one of the reasons for calling an early election. From the lips of Mr. King's ministers had come the statement that just as soon as Dr. Manion "opened his mouth" there would be dissolution of parliament.

Dr. Manion had been accorded "shameful treatment" during the Royal tour of Canada, said Mr. Hepburn.

"If ever a man prostituted his post it was Mr. King during the Royal tour. He stuck his head out like a mud turtle every time. To look at their Majesties, you had to look at him."

How could Dr. Manion level any indictment against the conduct of the war by the King administration, if he is not permitted to get the evidence in parliament, asked Mr. Hepburn. Dissolution of parliament throttled all possibility of getting the information to which Dr. Manion and the country were entitled.

Beyond all this was the latest Ottawa announcement that political radio speeches were to be censored, said Mr. Hepburn.

FRENCH ARTILLERY

"Hitler the conqueror does not deal with nations he has reduced to submission—he destroys them."

The premier described German workers and peasants as slaves of their Nazi masters. "Both worker and peasant of Bohemia and Poland have become in turn the slaves of these slaves."

"How can the world do otherwise than shudder before this initial realization of insane dreams?"

Appeals To Nation.

Daladier followed this with an appeal "in candid and even brutal" tones, to the French people behind the lines for "equality of sacrifices and equality of labor" to assure the triumph of Great Britain and France.

"It is essential that those of the interior succeed in making themselves respected by those at the front through work, renunciation and discipline."

It would be "criminal", he said, to underestimate Germany's formidable military strength, and he urged increasing arms production.

"We will win, but we must carry off also a victory far exceeding an armed victory."

Disseminators of German or Russian propaganda will be dealt with mercilessly, Daladier promised.

The Communist party was dissolved in France, he said, because "the men of Moscow placed themselves at the orders of Berlin".

ARITA DECLARES

In a 2½-hour conference, Arita and the Ambassador discussed "every angle" of the Asama Maru case. The vessel was halted by a British warship Jan. 20 near Yokohama and the 21 seamen returning to Germany were taken off. They have been interned in Hong Kong.

Sir Robert and Arita agreed to meet again tomorrow.

The foreign office statement was considered interesting because heretofore the Japanese government had simply "reserved the right" to demand the return of the Germans. Hence the new position was interpreted as a stiffening of Japan's attitude.

The foreign office statement said the ambassador requested today's conference. It was agreed that the British note replying to Japan's protest over the incident would not be published immediately.

The Japanese government "meanwhile is preparing a considered reply", it was stated.

The newspaper Asahi said the Soviet ambassador, Constantin Smetanin, had conferred for an hour today with Arita over the questions of Russian-Japanese trade and Japanese fishing rights in Soviet far eastern waters.

Industrial troubles also worried Japanese leaders. An acute shortage of coal brought a shutdown of electric power service in fourteen prefectures, including the important manufacturing centres of Osaka, Kobe and Kyoto.

Letter Sent From Montreal To Belleville Travels to England Before Delivery in This City

What is probably one of the longest detours for a letter to make while enroute from the point of mailing to that of delivery is reported by Mrs. B. W. Brown, of 107 Cedar Street.

On Jan. 27th, Mrs. Brown stared in surprise at a letter purporting to come from Montreal, yet which bore the cancellation marks of a British post office. Here is how it happened, or is believed to have happened.

Brigadier and Mrs. Ellsworth, Montreal Salvationists, and friends of Mrs. Brown, had written her a letter in conection with Salvation Army business. The missive was mailed in Montreal on December 11th.

Surprise number two happens in a little home in Hertfordshire, England. There a Mrs. Challoner, a Canadian who is in England with her R.C.A.F. husband, opened a letter containing Christmas greetings from friends in Montreal, and a fully addressed letter slipped out of the envelope. The letter was addressed to a Mrs. Brown, Cedar Street, Belleville, Ont.

Puzzled, Mrs. Challoner thought for a moment, then decided a mistake had been made. She forwarded the letter to Mrs. Brown here, together with a note of explanation.

It is believed the letter sent by Brigadier and Mrs. Ellsworth to Mrs. Brown, had become mixed with the heavy Christmas mail for the British Isles, and in some manner had slipped inside the unsealed envelope which contained the Christmas greetings sent by Montreal friends to the family in England.

BARBER CLIPS AS FIRE RAGES

$20,000 Blaze Next Door Does Not Bother Al Jones of Orillia

Orillia, Ont., Jan. 30 (CP)—Nero fiddled while Rome burned but he had nothing on barber Al Jones, who just kept clipping away for seven hours while a $20,000 fire raged beside his shop.

While a shoe store and a sports goods shop blazed fiercely yesterday, Al kept up his tonsorial artistry, stopping only to allow firemen to squeeze by in the narrow shop. Al explained that the firemen used his store as a shortcut, since it saved them a run of half-a-block whenever they wanted to get to the back or front of the burning buildings.

When the smoke became dense in his shop, Al opened the front and back doors which, incidentally, also cleared away the smell of burning rubber from the sports store.

HITLER MARKS

Nazis Attack Words of Daladier.

Authorized sources meanwhile bitterly attacked French Premier Daladier's speech last night, terming it "more hysterical even than (Winston) Churchill's." These sources viewed Daladier's remarks as an effort to frighten neutrals to join the allies.

They said his criticism of German treatment of conquered Poles came with ill grace from a nation which "showed decidedly sadistic tendencies in treatment of Germans during and after the first great war."

Because of the war, the anniversary of Hitler's appointment as premier by the late President Paul von Hindenburg Jan. 30, 1933, was devoid of the celebrations which marked it in the past.

Hitler's Appeal In 1933.

"Overwhelming is the task before us. We must solve it and shall solve it."

Writing in Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter, the editor, Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, described the situation as follows:

"An old, corrupt, but well-organized and militarily-strong world makes a last effort to put through against Germany, over and above all her rights in Europe, their so-called democratic principle, which in reality is the domination of brutal financial market speculations."

The customary annual promotions by the fuehrer in the army, police and civil service were published.

Police Blotter

Apprehended on a charge of forgery, William Minaker, Picton, was arrested in the city yesterday after allegedly issuing worthless cheques. Minaker was taken into custody by Detective Fred Isard after having spent the better part of $100.00 obtained by fraud, the officer revealed. The accused man was lodged in jail pending trial.

Following his own admission of having retained cash from collections received, Leslie Fraser, Belleville, was apprehended and held by police yesterday on a charge of theft. Police stated today the amount involved was $48.00.

Milder weather saw an increase of transients appear at the police station last night seeking shelter as an even dozen procured warmth and shelter.

ROBIN ARRIVES AT ABBEY DAWN

"A robin has arrived at Abbey Dawn", says the brief message received by the editor of the Ontario Intelligencer today from Mr. Wallace Robb. The message was written on January 28th. and was marked Kingston, January 29.

MERCHANTS REPORT GOOD BUSINESS MONTH

Appropriate aftermath of the fine volume of business done by Belleville businessmen in the Christmas season, was seen today in a casual survey of merchants of Front Street. In almost every case, business was reported to be well above the volume done in January of a year ago.

STREETS CLEANED OF ACCUMULATED ICE

In an effort to maintain their reputation of working for the "cleanest city" between Montreal and Toronto, city workmen and trucks went into action today removing accumulations of ice on thoroughfares near the business sections of the city. Bridge Street east rang to the sound of pick and shovel as workmen battled the stubborn ice. Other streets will be cleaned of the accumulation in due course of time.

RISE OF NAZISM

Says Crazy System of Reparations Was Invented and No People Experienced Results More Than Germans

Berlin, Jan. 30.—(AP) — (via radio) Adolf Hitler tonight declared that Germany's struggle under the Versailles Treaty had made her so strong that "nothing any longer will be able to defeat us."

Holding Great Britain responsible for the war, Hitler declared the true aim of "old Mr. Chamberlain" was the "complete destruction of the German Reich."

Hitler, making his first public address since November eighth, when he escaped the Munich beer hall explosion, assailed the Versailles Treaty, and said,—

Germany Nation of Have-Nots

"We are today a nation of have-nots. We are surrounded by those who have all and who refuse to surrender what is vital to us."

The dismemberment of Poland, he said, was the excuse Britain had been waiting for.

Claims Poland Forced to Fight

"Poland was forced into war by England," he declared. "But now it will also be England's turn to see what war is like."

Hitler, whose speech came as a surprise on the seventh anniversary of his accession to power, declared Germany's relations with Italy had "not changed."

"Close friendship binds us together," he said.

Turning to Russia, Hitler said he had succeeded in forming an alliance where Prime Minister Chamberlain had failed.

"Chamberlain, 'the pious, Chamberlain the righteous, tried to come to an understanding with the Atheistic state of Stalin," he said. "I can easily understand why the English are wild at the fact that I have succeeded where they failed."

As a result, he said, he no longer has anything to worry about from that direction.

He was introduced in the Berlin sports palace amid thunderous "heils" by Joseph Goebbels, propaganda Minister, as "the one voice" of Germany.

"On this Jan. 30, it is the sign of the union of the German nation" said Goebbels, "and our thanks will not be empty words but battle."

Hitler's first remark, as unofficially translated into English, was a reference to his seven years at the head of the Reich and a declaration that they had "seemed longer than many decades of the past".

Democratic Ideals Attacked.

"We hear much today about democratic ideals." Hitler said. "England has waged most of the wars of this world. A new Europe is supposed to arise and there should be general disarmament, this disarmament is then supposed to begin the economic prosperity of Europe, especially in free trade.

"Under this free trade civilization is to flourish," he went on. apparently referring to Britain's "peace objectives".

"In one word," he said sardonically ,"the golden age is to begin. This golden age has been skipped several times."

"All this was promised in 1918—the new justice and so forth. Already at that time there was a program of disarmament.

"It was expected that as a result of that disarmament in 1919 there would be universal prosperity.

Says Nations Not Consulted.

"In not one single case did they (the allies) ask the nations of Europe in the reorganization what their own wishes were.

"What had been formed through the centuries probably had been the better. Without any consideration for the self-determination of peoples, Europe was chopped to pieces.

Charges Nations Continued to Arm

"They did not disarm, but they continued to arm. The disarmed people were not in a position to defend themselves. The economic depression hit not only defeated but also the victors.

"When religion stepped into the background and no Englishmen in the 15 years before I came to power had any recollection of religion.

"And this treaty of Versailles was supported by the League of Nations—which was not a league of free nations. But they tried to force us to live up to the dictates of the treaty.

"This democratic Germany (of the post war period) was the product of the Allies—and how they maltreated it."

"Those were years of economic disintegration and enslavement.

"In all these years Germany hoped and begged and protested in vain. But they (Allies) thought there were too many millions of Germans in this world. They were unconcerned about the sufferers of our agriculture and our industry.

Rise of Nazi Party

"When all the pleading remained in vain, then the National Socialist party arose.

"When you no longer can beg and hope and protest, then something has to be done."

"Some placed their hopes on the Democratic nations, but finally we realized we could only do it through our own strength.

"This new rise of Germany did not in any way threaten England. A nation must help itself. They have to rely on their own efficiency and intelligence."

Hitler added that "in spite of years of protest" there was "nothing to do except to leave the League of Nations and start rearmament."

Hitler Blames Britain and France

"In 1938 we took over Austria and in 1939 we protected ourselves against any dangers from the east," he went on.

"If the other world had shown the slightest understanding for German problems all questions could have been negotiated."

"England and France, however. were resolved to take up the gauntlet of battle. When Chamberlain stepped up as a preacher and proclaimed his war aim, his own history contradicted him.

"They have always fought for God, and never had any material aims.

"But England did not want to be alone— the fighter for God— but they have always induced other peoples to join with them."

SOUTH FINLAND AGAIN BOMBED

Russian Planes Descend on Viipuri and Bombed for Two Hours

Viborg (Viipuri), Finland, Jan. 30 (AP)—Soviet bombing planes again appeared over southern Finland this morning after a day of disastrous inland raids yesterday.

Viipuri was under an air raid alarm from 11.50 a.m. until 1.30 p.m. (4.50 a.m. to 6.30 a.m. EST).

On the Karelian Isthmus artillery action increased during the night, suggesting the possibility the Russians were preparing a new thrust on this front, relatively quiet for the past fortnight

The Soviet Air Force has been particularly active during the past 24 hours, trying to disrupt Finnish troop and supply movements but apparently with little effect.

One Russian patrol of 20 men attempted to cross the ice of Lake Muola but were killed by Finnish machine gunners.

The attempted destruction of a hospital train by Russian fliers was described by an officer just returned from the Lake Ladoga front. He said that nurses and doctors remained aboard the train, reassuring their several hundred patients. The bombs missed the train, the doctor said, but some cars were struck by machine-gun bullets.

GRANBY MAN SENT TO TRIAL

Sweetsburg, Que., Jan. 30—(CP)—Clarence Hebert of Granby, Que. was ordered today to stand trial at the next term of the criminal assizes here on a charge of murdering his wife, the former Phyllis Upton of Guelph, Ont.

Hebert was arrested several weeks ago after the skeleton of a woman identified as his wife was unearthed near Granby. Hebert is accused of killing the woman last June.

Judge J. H. Lemay rejected a defence motion to have the Crown produce an alleged confession by Hebert at voluntary statement today.

Rat Goes Ariding on Cat's Back, Plays Hide-and-Seek With Puss

Denver, Jan. 30—(AP)—A rat that goes catback riding and the cat that packs the rat have a new home.

It rather confused Oliver Tuft, too, as Patsy Boland, 12, showed up with the white rat and six-months-old cat at the Bureau of Child and Animal Protection of which Tuft is secretary.

Patsy explained that the rat and cat are playmates. The rat sometimes crawls on the cat's back for a ride when they are not playing hide-and-seek or boxing. They belong to a friend of Patsy's who died Saturday.

Tuft let out word that the Bureau had a white rat for the asking. Tommy Jackson, 16, who came in for the white rat, was easily convinced that the cat should go where the rat did.

MANION REPEATS CHARGE AGAINST DEFENCE MINISTER

Refuses, However, to Name Officers From Whom He Secured Information

STATEMENT GIVEN

Ottawa, Jan. 30 (CP)—Conservative Leader Manion, in a press statement today, repeated his charge that many of those who enlisted in the Canadian Active Service Force became ill "because they had not proper boots, woollen clothing and blankets," but he said he would not divulge the names of officers who gave him this information.

In the House of Commons last Thursday Dr. Manion made a similar charge with particular reference to British Columbia troops. Defence Minister Rogers took this to mean the Seaforth Highlanders, as the only British Columbia unit to cross Canada for embarkation with the First Division, and in a statement to the press, gave unit sick records to deny the charge.

Defence Minister Criticized

Dr. Manion's statement today criticized the Defence Minister and said "the trouble with Mr. Rogers is that he knows as little about his present department as he did about the labor department when he presided over it."

The statement fellows:

In yesterday's statement by the Minister of National Defence he says I stated that many members of the Seaforth Highlanders had to go to hospital on their way overseas. I not only did not say that, but I did not mention the Seaforth Highlanders, as Hansard report will bear me out.

Declares Statements True

Hansard clearly shows my meaning namely—that information came to me "from doctors in charge of militia regiments" that many of their men were sick, and that large numbers had been sent to hospital because the men who enlisted had not proper boots, woollen clothing and blankets, due to the lack of preparation by this government, despite its huge expenditures on defence.

That statement is absolutely true. My information comes from military and medical officers of a number of battalions in whom I have very much more confidence than I have in the Minister of Defence.

Even Mr. Rogers must know that men who are insufficiently clothed and who have little or no night covering in our cold winter climate will have colds, influenza, bronchitis and intestinal troubles, and some of them will have their health permanently affected. This is especially true of young men who have been for months or years unemployed and so are under-nourished, even debilitated.

Many thousands of our enlisted men were of that group — young chaps who loyally enlisted though they had been out of work for long periods, through no fault of their own but in large measure because the same Mr. Rogers, as Minister of Labor, did nothing whatsoever to solve our grave unemployment problem, thus, through his supreme incompetence, doing more than his share to earn the title "do nothing" for the King Government.

Won't Give Names

The trouble with Mr. Rogers is that he knows as little about his present department as he did about the Labor department when he presided over it.

To save him challenging me to give names of officers, let me say I shall give no names as I have no intention of placing these officers in the hands of the government for petty political revenge.

Mr. Rogers also suggests that my statement will give comfort to the enemy. Well, if the enemy wants real comfort it has only to ponder on the strange, almost unbelievable fact that the same gentleman who made such a miserable failure of the Labor department is now, as Minister of National Defence. in charge of all Canada's governmental war efforts.

Perhaps since the electors will hear much from Mr. Rogers during the election—— though I think very little afterwards—they should know something of him.

1—He is the gentleman who persisted throughout his Labor ministry in publishing wholly misleading unemployment statistics, though he could have used—as we repeatedly urged—proper ones from our capable Statistics branch.

Took Refuge in Silence is Claim

2—He is one of the gentlemen who accused the Premier of Ontario of being in a conspiracy—a criminal charge—but who, when challenged to give any proof, took refuge in deep silence.

3—He is the gentleman who, as Minister of Defence, refused to give allowances to the thousands of mothers of enlisted men for many months—in fact, until most of the press of Canada was deploring the scandal, and until some time after I put out two appeals asking the government to remove this disgrace on Canada's war effort. There are still very large numbers who have not yet received justice.

Asks Many Questions

If this gentleman must use his literary talents, let him answer these questions:

(a) Why did he, as one of the ministers in this inefficient government, not insist on at least some preparation being made by the government in case of war?

(b) Why has he not stopped the patronage, favoritism and extravagance of the Defence Department over which he now presides?

((c) Why did he sit still in 1937 or 1938, while Mr. King refused to permit the British government, at their own expense, to establish air training schools for their pilots here in Canada, at a time when Britain was in sore need, because of congestion, fogs, lack of open space, and large number of air accidents, and at a time when Britain was in great national danger from the overwhelming air power of Germany?

(d) Finally, why did he remain silent while his leader torpedoed the parliament to which the said leader has all his life been paying lip-service?

Canada is waiting for some answer to these burning questions. Had the session not been dissolved, the people's representatives could have secured, through parliament. the information which is now denied to them.

84-YEAR-OLD MAN MISSING 4 DAYS

Search Party Fails to Find Trace of Hawkesbury Man

Hawkesbury, Ont., Jan. 30 (CP)—Anxiety mounted today over 84-year-old Hermidas Durocher, missing from his home since last Saturday.

A resident of Chute-a-Blondeau, eight miles east of this eastern Ontario town, Durocher was lightly clad when last seen some distance from the house where he lived with a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Helena Durocher.

A search party reported this afternoon it had covered the entire surrounding district without finding trace of the missing man. Provincial Constable J. H. Ferguson headed a search party of 75 villagers.

Contracts Awarded Will Be Listed

Ottawa, Jan. 30—(CP)—Tabulation of contracts awarded by the War Supply Board since the outbreak of war, is to be made public some time this week, it was learned today. Dissolution prevented the tabling of this information in the House of Commons.

The tabulation will give the file number of each contract awarded, and possibly the Order-in-Council name of the contractor, date of order, the amount of the contract authorizing the contract, it was said.

200 U.S.-MADE WARPLANES LANDED IN NORWAY FOR FINNS

Bergen, Norway, Jan. 30—(AP)—Two hundred United States-made warplanes for the Finnish Air Force were landed here from United States steamships today and started by rail for Finland. The planes arrived on the Mormacsun and Mormactide. It was impossible to tell what type the planes were as they were kept in packing cases with no revealing marks.

The Mormactide arrived Saturday and the Mormacsun a day later.

(With Washington's approval Finland was given prior right to purchase planes in the United States originally intended for the United States navy).

BRITISH OFFICER FIRST TO FALL

Lieut. Patrick Everitt, 23, Dies in Germany of Wounds Suffered Jan. 9

London, Jan. 30—(CP-Cable)—The first British officer to fall in a western front encounter, Lieut. Patrick Everitt, died in Germany of wounds Jan. 9, it was announced today. Lieut. Everitt was taken prisoner after the encounter. He was 23 years old and was born in Singapore.

Oliver Stanley, Secretary for War, told the House of Commons the first army casualty list to be published tomorrow will contain 40 names, including wounded, and also 720 deaths from accident or disease at home and aboard since the beginning of the war to Dec. 31, 1939.

"There has been no undue number of deaths from disease although there has been a regrettable number of deaths from traffic accidents," Mr. Stanley said.

Most of the traffic deaths have been attributed to the blackout which has taken a heavy toll of civilians.

In reply to a question Prime Minister Chamberlain assured the House that war cabinet members would not disclose secrets in private speeches and that "important statements on the progress of the war and war effort have been and will continue to be made by ministers in parliament."

Ontario Liberals Can Support Federal Candidates

Hamilton, Ont., Jan. 30.—(CP)—Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature have been informed by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn that they can support candidates in the forthcoming federal election as they see fit, John P. MacKay, Provincial member for East Hamilton, said in a telephone interview from Toronto day. He and George Bethune, M.L.A., for Wentworth, announced that they would give unqualified support to Mackenzie King federal Liberal candidates but explained that this had no significance so far as their provincial status was concerned.

"We have been given the blessing of our chief, Premier Hepburn to do what we please in the election," Mr. Macaky declared, "he has given all members that privilege. That is the way I am acting on it."

"I am going to give complete support to the Liberal candidate who gets the convention", said Mr. Bethune. "That doesn't have any bearing on provincial politics."

Mr. Mackay further clarified his position in regard to the forthcoming election by declaring that provincial and federal Liberal organizations "are so closely inter-related that we can't do very much else".

For instance, Mr. Mackay explained that "the same organization that put me across is the same organization that is behind Thomas H. Ross in Hamilton East and I am duty bound to get behind him and assist him."

RIOTING REPORTED

FLATTENS SELF AGAINST WALL, AVOIDS ROCK FALL

Steve Kish Uses Presence of Mind as He Sees 100 Pounds of Rock in Bucket Falling Down Casing

Toronto, Jan. 30—(CP)—Steve Kish looked up from the bottom of a 40-foot-deep casing today and saw 100 pounds of rock crashing down on him. The rock was in a bucket Kish was loading from the excavation in a Toronto factory.

The bucket slipped from its hook. Two men working at the top of the casement shouting warning. Trained mucker that he is, Kish flattened himself against the wall of the abutment, and escaped the full force of the blow. George Thompson, his foreman, went down in a bucket after him and fastened a rope about his body.

When they examined him they found only cuts on his upper lip and chin and an injured arm. Dr. J. A. R. Clancy ordered Kish to hospital where he is being kept under observation.

MRS. WM. ALLAN DIES SUDDENLY

Husband, Late Rev. William Allan of Toronto, Lost Life in Torpedoing of Athenia

William Allan, minister of Dovercourt Road Presbyterian Church, died suddenly last night while visiting friends in Hamilton. Death was due to a heart attack.

Mrs. Allan suffered a stroke late last August while her husband was visiting his parents in Scotland. Mr. Allan sailed for home on the Athenia, knowing that she was ill, but not aware of the seriousness of her condition, which was such that for a full month she could not be told of his death.

BRITISH FASCISTS ARE GIVEN TERMS

2 Members of Mosley's Union Admit Securing, Circulating Certain Information

Exmouth, England, Jan. 30—(CP)—Two members of Sir Oswald Mosley's Union of Fascists pleaded guilty here today to charges of securing and circulating information directly or indirectly of use to the enemy and were sentenced to six months' imprisonment each.

The two were Claude Felix Pierre Duvivier, a naturalized Briton of Belgian origin, who was also identified as a charter member of "The Link"—an Anglo-German cultural organization dissolved when war broke out—and William Alexander Crowle, a dockyard worker of Devonport.

Part of Session in Camera

It was established that the two men met in May of last year and had been corresponding since. One letter from Duvivier to Crowle, written Sept. 28, included the following passage: "Whenever you have an interesting spot of news, drop me a line. Yours till the day."

On Oct. 23 Crowle replied, referring to "Winnie" in a context which indicated he meant Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, and continuing, "You can draw your own conclusions from what I am going to tell now. The (battle cruiser) Repulse is at Devonport. My sister corresponds with a young sailor aboard her and she received two letters from him, but since the sinking of the Royal Oak has not received a line."

United Church Mission Compound Occupied by Japs

Shanghai, Jan. 30 (C.P. Cable) — Authoritative reports reaching here today indicated the Japanese army is occupying the entire compound of the United Church of Canada mission at Huaiching, Northern Honan, including the finest hospital in the province.

All Canadian missionaries have left Huaiching.

Chinese reports said the Canadian mission at Changeh in the extreme northern part of Honan province, while still officially sealed, is now gutted and robbed of all movable contents.

The property was left in the hands of the Japanese-dominated Chinese authorities when the Canadians departed in November during the anti-British campaign inspired by the Japanese army.

WAR BRIEFS

Copenhagen, Jan. 30 (CP)—Loss of the crew of 20 aboard the 3,000 ton Danish steamship Frednsborg when it struck a mine off the coast of Scotland was announced today.

London, Jan. 30 (CP)—Of 350 German merchant ships in neutral ports at the start of the war, 24 totalling 103,037 tons have been captured or sunk and 23 totalling 139,236 tons have been scuttled by their own crews, an informed naval source said today.

Twenty-nine per cent. of the German merchant fleet remains bottled up in neutral ports, the informant said.

Stockholm, Jan. 30 (C.P.-Havas)—Nicholas Beres, Spanish aviator who fought with the Republican air force in the Spanish civil war, arrived here today en route to join the Finnish army.

Rome, Jan. 30 (C.P.-Havas) — Dr. Karl Clodius, head of the commercial section of the German foreign office, who has been here since last Thursday, will remain for several days longer, it was learned today. Dr. Clodius was believed to be discussing sale or loan of Italian rolling stock to Germany and arranging transport for coal bought in Germany by Italy.

Amsterdam, Jan. 30 (AP)—The government press service announced today that the Netherlands had protested to Berlin against an alleged violation of Netherlands neutrality by German warplanes seen yesterday over northeastern and central Holland.

North Ireland Takes Option On Canada's Flax

Canada Will Send Its Surplus Fibre Flax Through Government Wartime Agencies to N. Ireland for Seed

London, Jan. 30 (CP).—Driving to obtain a minimum of 50,000 acres under flax in the coming season, the Northern Ireland Ministry of Agriculture has taken an option on the whole of Canada's certified crop, it was learned here today.

Well over 1,000 tons of seed is expected from the dominion. This, along with other supplies, will be distributed to farmers.

Ottawa, Jan. 30 (CP). — Canada will send its surplus fibre flax seed to Northern Ireland through government wartime agencies this year instead of through large seed dealers as in the past, Dominion Agricultural Department officials said today.

It was reported in London that Northern Ireland hoped to expand fibre flax acreage to some 50,000 acres next season, and expected some 1,000 tons of certified seed from Canada.

Agriculture experts here said Canada contributed only about one-quarter of Northern Ireland's flax seed requirements, and this year the amount might be less than usual because of the necessity for expanded flax acreage here for a "multitude of war needs".

Bulk of Ireland's flax seed comes from Belgium, France and the Baltic countries, with eastern Canada supplying only a small percentage Western Canada, the experts said, produces flax seed suitable only for linseed oil, as lack of heavy dew in the west means the flax is useless for fibre.

CHILD AWAKENS PARENTS

St. Thomas, Ont., Jan. 30 (CP)—Cries of three-year-old Jimmy Ball awakened his parents Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ball, Aylmer, at 2 a.m. today and they had barely time to escape from their burning home. They found refuge at the home of a neighbor.

The house and contents were destroyed. The family dog, in a shed adjoining the house was burned to death.

ELLIOTT HEADS 'PRIVATE BILLS'

Peterborough M.P.P. Takes Place of Private David Croll as Chairman

Toronto, Jan. 30 (CP). — A. E. Elliott (Lib. Peterborough) was elected chairman of the Ontario Legislature Private Bills Committee today. He succeeds Private David Croll (Lib. Windsor-Walkerville) now on active military service.

The committee held up a bill for an act incorporating the society of cost and industrial accountants of Ontario. Certain clauses are to be redrafted.

Hamilton Young Men's Christian Association will have confirmed fixed assessment of $1,000 for business tax and $25,000 for all other rates and taxation until 1950 when the fixed assessments may be varied by city council, under the terms of a private bill approved today.

A similar act confirming a fixed assessment of $25,000 on the Hamilton Young Men's Christian Association was passed.

Assessments of Industries.

Louis Hagey (Lib. Brantford) sponsored a bill which was passed to correct certain matters in Brantford with regard to assessments on 23 industries.

Mayor R. J. Waterous said these industries had agreements with the city for fixed assessments, extended for various periods. No two firms were being treated alike. The bill would provide that full taxes be payable by each of the industries affected in 1942.

Chairman Elliott said the present Brantford arrangements seemed to be in violation of the statutes governing fixed assessments.

"We're not trying to explain these matters," said Mr. Hagey. "We're trying to correct them."

There wasn't one legal fixed assessment in Brantford, said the mayor.

Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, said the mayor and council were to be congratulated on dealing with an irregular situation.

Air Officers Compose Song

Ottawa, Jan. 30 (CP)—Canada's army co-operation squadron, selected for Active Service overseas and the first Royal Canadian Air Force unit to be sent abroad, will leave the Dominion to the martial strains of its own song, composed by Flying Officer William Middlebro of Owen Sound, Ont.

Confidence and determination are reflected in the ditty, "We've Got a Lovely War to Win." Associated with Middlebro in writing it was Pilot Officer Harry Hornell of Montreal.

Here's the first verse:

Pompey, Darius and Cyrus
Were all defeated one by one;
Ghengis, Khan and Alexander
Really lost the wars then won.
There's a medieval tyrant
Living in the world today;
He will never last as long as they did
Now that we are on our way.

GERMAN SUB SUNK ATTACKING BRITISH CONVOY

Effective Gain in Encircling Move To Trap Russians

Observer Reports Two Russian Divisions in Sector Without Food for More Than Week—Still Have Ammunition

FINNS BIDE TIME

Evidence Found That Russian Dead Are Disposed of in Holes in Ice so as to Conceal Extent of Casualties

By WADE WERNER

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Helsingfors, Jan. 31 (AP). — The smashing of renewed Russian assaults at several points northeast of Lake Ladoga with the destruction of nine Russian tanks was reported today in the Finnish army communique.

Five Russian planes were said to have been downed in fighting yesterday.

About 50 Russians were killed at Taipale as Soviet thrusts along the Karelian Isthmus front were turned back.

The communique reported little action, but unofficial reports asserted the Finns had recaptured Pitkaranta, an important town north of Lake Ladoga about 30 miles from the Soviet frontier.

Air activity was confined largely to the battle zones, the communique said, remarking that Soviet aerial forays consisted of only a few raids against Finnish territory.

Recapture of Pitkaranta, occupied by the Red army early in the invasion of Finland, was described as an effective gain in the encircling move against Russian divisions trapped in the Kitela sector.

An observer from the Lake Ladoga front reported two of the Soviet divisions there had been without food more than a week, although they still had ammunition.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Frost and roads! Frost causes bumpy roads. Everyone has noticed in the spring that the pavement has heaved in places on some roads, while others are free of any displacement. It is the cold winter that causes it. The amount of heaving depends upon the degree of frost, the character of the soil and the amount of water available. A sudden drop in temperature after a thaw leaves an excess of water near the surface, which condition is favorable to excessive heaving. When water freezes it increases in volume as much as 10 per cent, which accounts for the bumps in the roads.

SIR H. MARLER SUCCUMBS TO LONG ILLNESS

Was Created Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George in 1935

CAREER OF SERVICE

Montreal, Jan. 31—(CP) — Sir Herbert Marler, former Canadian Minister to the United States and Japan, died today in Royal Victoria Hospital where he had been a patient since last June. He was 63.

Sir Herbert, who was Canada's first minister to Japan, enjoyed a long record of public service and was a former member of parliament. He served in Japan from 1929 to 1936 when he was appointed envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the United States. He resigned this post in Sept. 1939 because of ill-health.

His death closed a period of public service that began when he was appointed to the Quebec province educational council. In 1917-18 during the first Great War, he was fuel administrator for Quebec.

Elected to Commons in 1921

A former cabinet minister, he was elected to the House of Commons for Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George riding as a Liberal in 1921. 'WE ARE IN WAR TO THE END' SAYS GEN. McNAUGHTON

Anthony Eden Says Canada Has Earned Gratitude of France and the Empire

NAZIDOM IS SLAVERY

By SAM ROBERTSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Jan. 31 (CP-Cable). — Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, General Officer Commanding the Canadian Active Service Force, told a Canada Club luncheon meeting today there was no doubt that Canadians had decided "the menace which hangs over Europe and the world must be set at rest for ever", and heard two ministers of the British cabinet voice thanks for the Dominion's assistance and loyalty.

"We are in this war beside the peoples of these islands and France with grim determination to see it through to the end," the Canadian commander said before a brilliant gathering of British and French statesmen and soldiers and upwards of 300 of Canada's most prominent residents in the United Kingdom.

Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden said Canada once more had earned the unbounded gratitude of all

Hitler's Address Mostly Abuse And Lies Says British Press

London, Jan. 31 (CP)—Adolf Hitler's speech yesterday at the Berlin sportspalast contained little truth and much abuse of the allies and of democratic ideals, British newspapers said today.

"Hitler sneers at Chamberlain! the Daily Express exclaimed. "He calls him a 'Bible preacher!'

"Now that is a very fine description of a good man and a wise leader. Hitler is right. He has given a description of our prime minister which we might well adopt."

The Times said: "Hitler devoted his customary anniversary speech in Berlin yesterday mainly to sarcastic abuse of the democratic ideals of the British Empire, and in particular of Mr. Chamberlain.

"Last night's tirade of threats, whines and hatred is interesting only as an example of the systematic mendacity upon which German morale apparently is built.

"He declared that Mr. Churchill had said that Germany must be destroyed. What Mr. Churchill and other government speakers have said is that there can be no peace until the armed might of Germany is destroyed."

Referring to current reports that Hitler has royal and imperial ambitions, the Daily Herald said:

"Prepare for April 20th (Hitler's birthday)! Buy your swastikas and book your seats! For on that day, the Nazi papers tell us, Hitler is to make his triumphal entry into London.

"He will then be proclaimed king fo England, Emperor of Germany, Emperor of Austria, and King of Poland.

ONTARIO BUDGET MAY BE EXPECTED ABOUT FEBRUARY 8

Work of Treasury Department Speeded Up After Federal House Dissolved

GOV'T YIELDS POINT

Municipalities Can Vote Selves Out of Provisions for Two-Year Elected Terms

Toronto, Jan. 31 (CP).—Amending bill to the Succession Duty Act will be discussed in committee stage in the Ontario legislature today, Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced as the House adjourned yesterday.

The measure, designed to facilitate the collection of levies on estates, was scheduled for committee of the whole yesterday, but the premier said certain representations were being heard by the government in connection with it.

Reports current at Queen's Park indicated the budget might be brought down by Premier Hepburn on Thursday, Feb. 8.

The Treasury Department, of which the premier is minister, has speeded its work since dissolution of the federal parliament last week. Until that time, the provincial government had awaited announcement of the Dominion budget before settling its own taxes for the year. The premier decided to formulate the budget immediately when parliament was dissolved after a four-hour session.

Approves Lighted Highways.

Highways Minister McQuesten told the legislature yesterday that he was convinced of the usefulness of lighting highways, judging from the results of the lighting of stretches of the Queen Elizabeth super-highway between Toronto and Hamilton.

U. S. Justice Dep't Makes Explanation

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Justice Department said today that it had received "over a period of months many complaints" concerning Reverend Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, and that all were being investigated.

Each complaint, said a department statement, was acknowledged by a "form reply."

"It appears," the statement added, "that one of the organizations receiving such form of response has for reasons best known to itself made the reply public and given the erroneous impression that this department has taken action in special response to the complaint of this particular organization."

(The Jewish People's Committee announced in New York last week that it had complained of Coughlin's activities to the Justice Department.)

The department called attention to its announcement on Jan. 31 that a grand jury inquiry had been ordered with reference to "any individual or group, wherever located, who may have aided the seventeen men seized Jan. 15 on charges of plotting the overthrow of the government. The men were members of a small group formed within the Christian Front.

Father Coughlin's name repeatedly has been mentioned in connection with the Christian front, but he has denied any affiliation with the organization.

Peaceful and Friendly Relations With Neutrals Desire of Great Britain

London, Jan. 31 (CP). — Prime Minister Chamberlain, strongly defending Britain's attitude toward neutrals, today declared the allies do not question the right of other countries to "go into the conflict or stay out" and want only to live in "peaceful and friendly" relations with neutrals.

He reminded them, however, in a speech at the Dorchester Hotel to the Committee for National Defence and Public Interest, that it is becoming clearer every day that Britain is fighting "for every country that feels itself oppressed by the fear that some day they may find themselves in the position successively occupied by Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and now by Finland."

Sink No Neutral Ships.

The prime minister declared Britain had sunk no neutral ships and had never "wittingly sacrificed a neutral life." Emphasizing the safety of British convoys for friendly commerce, he announced that only yesterday the Germans had attempted their first submarine attack on a convoy in a long time and that the U-boat had been sunk.

In an outline of the progress made thus far in the Empire's war effort, Mr. Chamberlain enumerated the following points:

1. "At home, in France, in India and in other nations overseas along our vital lines of imperial communications we have upwards of 1,250,000 men under arms."

2. With the first contingent of the British Expeditionary Force, "already we have sent over to France for their sustenance many thousands of motor transport vehicles and nearly 500,000 tons of munitions and stores."

Navy First Line of Defence

3. The Royal Navy, "is today, as it always was in our history the first line of defence of these islands." The field of sea battle is "wherever British ships sail upon the seas that cover two thirds of the earth's surface."

4. The manpower employed in aviation construction is seven times what it was in 1935-36. Experience has proven that the quality of machines and personnel leaves nothing to be desired.

As regards the Empire Air Training Scheme, "there will be established in Canada not less than 67 training schools, amounting to no less than 40,000 of staff, and they will be provided with upwards of 80 new or enlarged airdromes."

1,000 Firms Manufacturing Khaki

5. Concerning equipment for the British forces: "In order to secure raw materials required we made arrangements by which we purchased the whole output of Empire wool for the duration of the war and a year after that. We purchased £85,00,000 worth of textiles.

As against nine firms manufacturing khaki cloth at the beginning of September there are now more than 1,000 in England.

Since the beginning of the war production of guns of all calibres has at least doubled. In some cases it increased eightfold. Production of shells also at least was doubled. In some cases it is now 10 times what it was after five months of the last war.

ANDREWS TRIO CUT TO SOLOIST

Father Objects to Romance of Two Girls and They Leave Act

New York, Jan. 31 —(AP)— The Andrews trio has been cut down to a solo—at least for the time being—because of lack of harmony in their home.

A representative of the radio singing sisters—Maxene, Patty and La Verne—said today that their father objected to romances between Maxene and Lou Levy, the trio's manager, and between Patty and Vic Schoen, their arranger. Maxene and Patty, being over 21, decided to leave home. La Verne decided to stay.

Somebody, said the representative, told police that the trio's father, Peter Andrews, had a gun in his apartment. As a result Andrews was arrested charged with possessing a pistol without a permit. He was released on $500 bail for hearing today

The trio's representative said the pistol had nothing to do with the case, that Andrew had long had a pistol to protect himself.

The trio was scheduled for a broadcast last night but La Verne didn't show up. The sponsor permitted Patty, the soloist, to sing alone.

PRIME MINISTER VISITS SQUADRON

110th Army Co-operation Squadron Soon to Leave for Overseas Duty

Ottawa, Jan. 31—(CP) — Prime Minister King Tuesday visited the Rockcliffe Air Station and inspected No. 110 army co-operation squadron which will be the first Royal Canadian Air Force Squadron to go overseas from Canada.

The Prime Minister walked along the lines of men, drawn up in the airdrome in full battle dress. They wore gas-masks, slung in front in the alert position.

Mr. King expressed hope they would be sustained in their task by a full appreciation of the cause for which the Allies were fighting.

"You will go overseas with the knowledge that you are ever in the hearts of those of us who remain here," said the Prime Minister. "May God bless you."

The Prime Minister was accompanied by Defence Minister Rogers who presented an ensign to Squadron Leader W. D. Van Vliet of Winnipeg.

The ensign is in standard Air Force colors, light blue and dark blue. Across the middle is a red band with a Maple Leaf next the staff and the squadron's number in the lower inside corner.

Berlin, Jan. 31 (AP). — A new phase of violence in the war was predicted by Nazi commentators today on the strength of Adolf Hitler's declaration that "England and France will get the fight they asked for".

Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, stressed this quotation in a page-one headline over its account of his address in the sports palast last night.

DYNAMITE CHARGE DAMAGES HOUSE

Cornice Ripped Off and Some Shingles Loosened by Heavy Blast

Foxboro, Jan. 31 (Special—Residents of the recently constructed Bata community, two miles south of Frankford, were given a first hand demonstration in what aerial bombing could very well be like when an overloaded charge of dynamite burst through the confining layer of heavy logs and caused damage of fifty dollars or more to one of the occupied houses.

Engaged in laying sewers for the new community, a contracting company were blasting rock in the ditch, where their pipes will be laid and had placed a heavy charge very close to the house occupied by Mr. A. Novotny and family. Despite the usual precautions to prevent the rocks flying when the charge detonated, the blast ripped the cornice off one side of the building and also carried away some shingles from the roof, but oddly enough caused no damage whatever to the glass.

White Paper Charges 18,000 Poles Executed Since Nazi Occupation

Paris, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Polish government in exile today announced in a white paper that the Germans have put to death 18,000 Poles of all classes since the Nazi occupation of that country.

The document charged the Germans with mass executions in the market places, destruction of Polish monuments and churches, and enforcing the migration of thousands of persons from western Poland to the interior in cattle cars during the sub-zero weather.

It said thirty children were frozen to death in a cattle car at Sandomierz.

The Polish white paper is one of several issued by the government in exile and which it intends soon to publish in book form.

"All these facts have been investigated and verified." the government stated.

John R. Heron Leaves Daily Star

Toronto, Jan. 31.—(CP)—John R. Heron, for eleven years associated with the Toronto Daily Star as Telegraph, City and News editor, and with the Toronto Star Weekly as associate editor, left today to take up Public Relations Duties with the Royal Bank of Canada at the Montreal head office.

Mr. Heron began his newspaper career as a correspondent of The Calgary Herald and before coming to Toronto was managing editor of The Peterborough Examiner.

Says Finns Need Assistance In Fight Against Russia

Paris, Jan. 31—(AP)—Dr. Harri Holma, Finland's Minister to France, told newspapermen today that Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim's Finnish army "is condemned to death" if it does not receive sufficient aid in its fight against Russia."

"An army can perform one miracle but never a series of miracles," the Minister told the Anglo-American Press Club luncheon.

Holma acknowledged effective aid was coming from countries all over the world, particularly France, Great Britain and the United States, but emphasized that if Finland is to hold out more help must come quickly.

Announcement Made by Prime Minister Chamberlain Addressing Luncheon of National Defence and Public Interest Committee

GIBES HITLER

Claims British War Effort Has Achieved 'Prodigious Results' With 'Upwards of One and One-Quarter Million Men Under Arms'

London, Jan. 31 (CP). — Prime Minister Chamberlain today announced a German submarine had been sunk yesterday when it attempted to attack a British convoy.

Mr. Chamberlain said this was the first attempt by a submarine in a long time, and that the attacker was destroyed by combined air and naval forces.

The prime minister made the announcement in an address before a luncheon of the National Defence and Public Interest Committee.

The prime minister opened the address with a gibe at Adolf Hitler's secret arrangements for his speech last night and expressed pleasure at attending a meeting "neither the time nor the place of which you have found it necessary to conceal from the public."

His audience recalled that Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, had stated at Manchester Saturday that the odds were 500 to 1 against the Germans successfully attacking a convoy.

War Effort Gaining Strength.

The prime minister said the British war effort already had achieved "prodigious results", with "upward of one and one-quarter million men under arms" and the navy protecting convoys "with such success that they were increasingly being made use of by neutrals."

The leader of the Liberal opposition, Sir Archibald Sinclair, addressing another meeting, said he shared Mr. Churchill's hope that the neutral nations would see the necessity of "uniting" for the defence of their liberties.

Mr. Chamberlain said most of the sunken U-boat's crew were saved.

GERMAN PRESSURE RESUMED AGAINST ALLIED LINES

Sector Bordered by Saar and Warndt Forest Suddenly Springs to Life

OVERLAND ATTACK

German Artillery Opens Fire With French Guns Instantly Replying

(By Axel de Holstein)

(Havas Staff Writer)

Paris, Jan. 31.— (CP-Havas)—German pressure was resume today against Allied lines to the west of the Saar river.

The sector, roughly bordered by the Saar and the Warndt Forest, sprang to life Tuesday following a six-weeks lull enforced by wintry weather. Supported by day-long artillery fire, the Germans attempted two raids against French outposts, the first with 60 men, the second with 30. Both were repulsed.

The miniature German offensive apparently waned with night, at least temporarily. This morning's official communique advised there was "nothing to report" from the front.

American Pilots To Serve With R.C.A.F.

Ottawa, Jan. 31—(CP)—A staff of 40,000 is being assembled under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan to man air schools across the Dominion and probably 10,000 will be flying instructors.

Already hundreds of competent fliers have been enlisted from flying schools and commercial companies to assist the regular Royal Canadian Air Force instructors in teaching young Canadians to handle a military plane but it has been anticipated that some American aviators also would be brought to Canada under the training plan.

Special provision has been made to allow Americans to serve with the R.C.A.F. and the necessary qualification of being a British subject to serve with the Canadian Active Service Force does not apply to the Air Force.

GERMANY ADMITS LOSS OF PLANE

Communique Also States U-Boat Defences Increased at Heligoland Bight

Berlin, Jan. 31 —(AP)— The German high command's communique today said:

"In the west, only minor fighting activity.

"The navy during the last few days increased its U-boat defences in the German (Heligoland) Bight by augmenting a number of U-boat chasers and other U-boat defence measures.

"German air force units were put into active service also during Jan. 30 for reconnaissance over the North Sea and along the English coast from the Orkneys to the mouth of the Thames.

"In this connection, as already announced by a special bulletin, seven armed commercial ships were sunk, one other damaged severely and several slightly. Besides that, two British patrol boats were sunk.

"Despite the heavy anti-aircraft defence by all ships that were attacked and although numerous pursuit ships were employed, only one of our planes is missing."

MRS. C. NEWMAN SERIOUSLY HURT

Car Driven by Husband Hits Icy Spot and Turns Over in Ditch

Picton, Jan. 31—The Picton Post of the Canadian Legion is making plans for the drive which begins here on February 15th to raise funds to further the war work of the Canadian Legion. An organization meeting was held Tuesday night at Shire Hall and presided over by John Guest, president of the local Post. A committee was chosen to take charge of the local canvass, members being Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon, I. F. Fraser, John Guest, Morley Ackerman, L. B. Colnan, W. Clow, W. D. Saunders, Major Colin Hepburn, Capt. W. G. Grothier, Rev. J. F. Reycraft, Wilfred Scott, William Henley, C. G. Rutter, Harold Knapman.

Mrs. Clare Newman suffered a gash on the head and bruises early yesterday when the car driven by Mr. Newman overturned on the icy road just outside the eastern limits of the town. They were returning to Picton from Kingston, when the car hit an icy spot on the ground and then turned over. Mr. Newman escaped injury. Mrs. Newman was taken to the hospital, where she is recovering from cuts, bruises and shock. The car was badly wrecked.

Sam Dodds of Woodrous, was elected president of Picton Fair at the annual meeting last week end. It is his fourth term in that capacity. A. E. Bowerman was re-elected first vice-president and Jack Welsh as second vice-president. Secretary-treasurer, John Dalrymple stated that $1200 was paid in prize money this year. The fair was very successful from all angles. There was a bank balance of nearly $500 at the present time with no outstanding accounts.

Wellington electors voted on the matter of granting a gas franchise to Picton Natural Gas Co. There were 252 votes cast and of these 242 were in favor of granting the franchise.

Recent cold weather has resulted in fine ice in Picton harbor and it is now being harvested by several local firms.

Members of the local branch of the Bank of Commerce presented a gladstone bag to Manager J. K. Patterson, who left this week for Toronto. Mr. Sharpe of the Brighton branch is the new manager here and assumed his new duties this week.

FROST WIPES OUT VEGETABLE CROP AT MIAMI, FLORIDA

Arthur Jones States Loss Will Amount to $8,000,000—Even the Fish Are Numbed by Cool Waters

THOUSANDS JOBLESS

Miami, Florida, Monday morning Jan. 29th—(Special via Airmail)—The worst is now over, the suspense is ended for early Sunday morning frost came down and wiped out the green vegetable crop of Dade County, entailing a loss of some $8,000,000 to the growers. Nothing but the stalks remain of the plants that the day before were a vivid green promising a golden return to the farmers of the 32,000 acres of muck lands south of Miami. It is a complete freeze-out of the last remaining assortment of growing vegetables in the nation's winter producing farm lands. The growers had high hopes of receiving high prices owing to heavy frosts having played havoc with producing areas further north. We drove through a portion of these frost-burned fields yesterday afternoon. The sight is almost unbelievable when you consider how far south this catastrophy has taken place.

There was no need to examine the plants closely. A sweep of the eye over the vast plantings was conclusive proof that the damage was complete. We did, however, examine beautiful stands of Poinsettia with their large crimson flowers almost a foot wide, withered and ruined. It would appear that scalding water had been poured upon them. Young tomato plants that had been carefully covered with paper bags fared just as bad as the uncovered one. We understand very little planting will be done over especially as a great deal of the crop had been rained out earlier. It is estimated several thousand persons have become jobless due to this abnormal killing frost. The fertilizer companies are heavily interested in this section as a great deal of this commodity is needful to assure a good yield. Washington, D.C., is expected to come to the aid of the distressed and down-and-out growers. Well, they need not hog all the grief as we Canadians also have some trouble of our own. At the same time, we feel deeply for the great loss of the green vegetable growers of Dade County, Florida.

Icicle a Curiosity

A young chap from Ohio, a visitor in this park found an icicle hanging to a faucet in the park. This icicle was some two inches at the top, tapering down a couple of feet to its point. He quickly broke it off and was almost mobbed by other young people born of the deep south who had never seen a ice formation of this kind before he could reach his trailer home and place this icicle in the refrigerator.

Easy Fishing

A party left the park to fish from the Cays, some 80 miles south of Miami, Sunday morning. From a bridge on Cay Largo they fished for a few hours with "no luck." Becoming tired of this kind of fishing they moved on several miles along the Ocean Highway leading to Key West. Noticing a number of people bending over and looking into the sea along the shore, they stopped to find out the cause. Numbers of fish apparently numbed by the cold were to be seen, Red Snappers, Grunts and other kinds. Taking off their shoes they waded in and actually caught these half frozen fish with their hands, fish weighing several pounds each. There was fish to be had for everyone for the mere exertion of lifting them out of the shallow water. This party of several people brought back to the park 150 fine specimens taken in this manner. This is not a fish story as we enjoyed some of this fish for breakfast. They reported it was colder down off the Cays than it was in Miami.

ONLY ONE BUILDING PERMIT ISSUED

The least amount of building during the month of January for over six years was seen in Belleville City Engineer Chas. A. Mott revealed today, when he issued the monthly building statement. The only building permit issued by the City Engineer's Department for the month of January this year was for the erection of a chimney in connection with the Trianon ballroom. The value of the chimney was $35.00. In January of 1939, three building permits were issued in Belleville with a value of $2,900, in 1938 one permit valued at $500.00; in January 1937 only one building permit was issued in Belleville as was the case in 1936 and '35. With the exception of 1939, when three permits were issued, January is generally conceded a poor building month here.

GLEN MILLER AND WOOLER GAME WINNERS

Aggressiveness and Determination to Win Two Outstanding Features of District Loop

BOTH WIN EASILY

Foxboro, Jan. 31 — (Special)—Sheer aggressiveness and a profound determination to win are the two outstanding features which mark the games in the Frankford and district hockey league. In a double header played between the four teams of this league at the Frankford Arena last night, the Glen Miller "papermakers" showed the class which is keeping them at the top of the ladder, when they rather outsmarted the Wallbridge sextette in sixty minutes of slap-bang hockey as they rang up a 6-3 victory while in the other half of the twin bill the Wooler lads applied the whitewash brush to the Frankford pucksters and trimmed them 6-0.

The Wallbridge "Townhallers" were minus the services of the regular goalie and a couple of their first string forwards in their tussle against the league leaders and were badly outclassed in the first period when three goals rattled into their net without a return. The Wallbridge management juggled their lineup for the balance of the game, however and the winners were afforded stiffer opposition for the balance of the route but three more counters of a rather soft variety slithered into their cage before the second canto ended, while the best the losers could do was to bang in one. Lorne Jarrell and the Woods boys carried the mail for the Wallbridge team with Jarrell accounting for all three of his team's counters as they blanked the "papermakers" in the last period.

Almost without exception the Glen Miller aggregation are former members of the Trenton "Courier" team of Trent Valley fame and presented a hustling band of pucksters whose superior experience proved too much for the Wallbridge lads. The teams:

Wallbridge—Goal, Kingston; defence, Vermilyea and G. Woods; centre, Jarrell; wings, C. Woods and Chisholm; subs, Yerwood, R. Woods and Gray.

Glen Miller — Goal, Lonas; defence, Lott and Lemoire; centre, Lamorre; wings, Johnston and Anderson; subs, Gates, Drake, Beale, Davis and Wickens.

Second Game

At the outset of the second game it appeared as though the fans were in for a treat as the Wooler lads and the Frankford sextette ranged up and down the ice in lightning surges of power, playing with neither team having any great advantage. At about the half-way mark in the first canto the Wooler lads went into the lead when Ruttan blazed one past Lawrence in the Frankford nets and from then on rather dominated the play with their well-knit defence of C. Ruttan and Dancey affording Bryant splendid protection in the nets. The period ended with the Wooler lads leading 1-0 with the play about even but as the second stanza started the aggressive Wooler lads carried the play to the opposition and Radcliffe, Morrow and Ruttan soon had given them a 4-0 lead. Apparently firm believers in the self-evident fact that a stout offensive is the strongest defence, the lads from Northumberland continued to force the issue in the final period and playing as though they were trailing instead of being ahead in the score managed to bang two more counters in while holding the Frankford lads scoreless.

The teams:

Frankford—Goal, Lawrence; defence, Stojan and Dafoe; centre, McLeod; wings, Foster and Somnes; subs, Lockwood, Hannah, Rogers and Loney.

Wooler — Goal, Bryant; defence, Claude Ruttan and Dancey; centre, McCaul; wings, Austin and Radcliffe; subs, Carman, Ruttan, Morrow, Lonne and Radcliffe.

Referee: Fred Munn, Frankford.

FOXBORO FOXES AND GLEN ROSS TIED FOR LEAD

'Foxes' Defeat Glen Ross 3-1 in Snappy, Fast Contest

IVANHOE OUT

Zion Hill Makes Sure of Playoff Spot by Defeating Ivanhoe 1-0

Stirling, Jan. 31—(Special)—Taking the temperature of rural hockey interest in Centre Hastings, with attendance as a gauge shows it definitely climbing back to the prosperity it once enjoyed. Last night the largest crowd of the season was on hand at the Stirling Arena to see the Foxboro "Foxes" draw up even with the league leaders by defeating Glen Ross 3-1 in a game packed to the ears with thrills. Also they saw a game sporting team from Ivanhoe striving for a win to keep them in the running. After barely missing a victory several times throughout the season the popular Ivanhoe squad apparently lost all hopes of a play-off position last night as the "Fighting Irish" from Zion nosed them out by a 1-0 score.

Gameness Win Popularity

Organized at the first of the season largely through the efforts of Rev. S. Delve who played goal for them throughout the season, Ivanhoe has undoubtedly enjoyed the greatest popularity with spectators and players than any team in the league by their courageous display of real pluck. All their games were lost by close margins and each night they returned with the determination to give their best. The loudest and heartiest cheers were for them as they were nosed out of game after game by only one goal margins. So popular with the other teams are these lads that a movement has been started whereby the entire league will visit the village of Ivanhoe in a body to attend a special church service as a tribute to their fine display of sportsmanship. Rev. S. Delve will minister to the group in the special service and league officials will be given a small part in the service.

Fight for Play-Off Positions Continues

Winning their first five games the husky "Riverside boys" from Glen Ross were away to a real start leaving their rivals at the post. But at the turn in the home stretch Foxboro "Foxes" have pulled up even with them and only two points behind, coming up fast, are the "Fighting Irish" from Zion Hill. Just who will cross the finish line first and earn that rest from the semi-final games is hard to say.

First Game

Meeting and beating the league leaders two games in a row was the thrill enjoyed by Jack Stewart's "Foxes" and the four points brought them right up by the waiting "Riversides." After a scoreless first period in which the Glen Ross crew seemed to have the edge in the play Noel Guay clicked for the first tally early in the second scoring from a scramble. Carl Thompson made it two for the "Foxes," Glen Ross pressed and only good goaltending by Norm Guay kept them off the score sheet. Armstrong got the only tally for the losers near the close of the middle period. The final counter of the game was also scored by Noel Guay late in the last period which ended with Glen Ross really bearing down but unable to beat "Normie." Quay brothers were the stars of the game with Spencer, Thompson, Gough and Walt looking good for the "Foxes." The two Pyears and Martin went well for the losers and had tough luck on several fine combination plays.

The teams: Glen Ross—Goal, Hagerman; defence, Brown and Fraser; centre, Martin; wings, G. Pyear and R. Pyear, subs, Brooks, Armstrong and Brown.

Foxboro—Goal, Norm Guay; defence, Noel Guay and G. Walt; centre, Elder; wings, Thompson and Spencer; subs, L. Gough, C. Dafoe, R. Halliwell.

Referee — Jim "Buck" Hulin, Stirling.

Zion Hill Downs Ivanhoe 1-0

The second game found the courageous Ivanhoe squad facing elimination against the Zion Hill "Irish.." A victory for them would have given them another chance to get in the playoffs and also a new experience. Throughout the season two tie games and several close losses have been the best they could do. With sheer hard luck robbing them of a win on many occasions. Working under the mental hazzard of "win or else" the boys played careful hockey throughout a scoreless first period. Midway through the second period the Irish began to gather speed and their second front line, Tummon, Simms and Clarke gave Delve plenty of worry. Billie Clarke doing wing duty on this line has real possibilities as a hockey player and his work became more effective each game. Brough got the only tally of the game when he received a pass directly in front of the net. Heavy bodying began to show up and at one point a couple of players began roughing it and were chased. Ray Dickey, Brough, Simms, Tummon and Clarke were best for the winners. The entire Ivanhoe squad turned in a fine effort. It is hard for many to understand what kept such a fast moving team out of the scoring all season. In Cook, Thompson, Wright, Kirby and Reid Ivanhoe have five of the fastest men on the circuit but were continually outscored by just one or two goals.

The teams:

Ivanhoe — Goal, Delve; defence, Tomlinson and Reid, centre, Dan Cooke; wings, Wright and Woods; subs, Murphy, Fleming, Downey and Bray.

Zion Hill—Goal, Gifford; defence R. Dickey and T. Bedford; centre, Brough; wings, Ketcheson and Faulkner; subs, Simms, Tummon and Clarke.

LATE MRS. ALGER POST

West Huntingdon, Jan. 31— The auditorium of White Lake United Church was filled to capacity (many not being able to gain admittance) on Sunday afternoon for the funeral of Mary Elizabeth Chambers, wife of Mr. Alger Post.

Rev. Kenneth Stewart minister in charge of the West Huntingdon United Church had charge of the service and was assisted by Rev. Samuel Delve of the Ivanhoe circuit.

Mrs. Reg. Haggerty presided over the music. The choir being composed of members of the Fuller and White Lake churches, assisted by Rev. Delve and Frank Palmer.

Mr. Stewart gave a most comforting and inspiring message from the text found in 127 Psalm, last clause of verse 2, "For So He Giveth His Beloved Sleep."

The late Mrs. Post was a faithful member of White Lake L.O.B.A. and a large number of the members were present and conducted the last rites of the beautiful ceremony at the graveside.

The pall bearers were: Messrs. Blake Sharpe, Ernest Moore, Richard Reid, Kenneth Holmes, Everett Carman and John Hanson.

North End Athletic Win 8-2 Over Flyers

Paced by their fleet-footed forward, Alf Rowbotham, the North End A.C. defeated the Air Force "juniors" 8-2 in an exhibition hockey game played at the Hume Arena last night.

The Air Force opened the scoring, but Rowbotham put the "Station St. gang" one up as he scored on a solo effort and later rammed home Amo's pass-out. Loveless, former Picton junior, scored late in the initial frame for the young Flyers as the initial period ended at two-all.

Muir, Galpin and Rowbotham scored for the North End A.C. in the middle frame, while Lye, Morris and Muir banged home the old boot-heel in the third frame, giving the North End a well-earned 8-2 win. Only two penalties were inflicted during the pastime.

MAN-POWER AND OTHER RESERVES

What impressed many with the recent speech of Mr. Churchill was the statement that Germany has been on a war basis practically for three years before the outbreak of hostilities and that as a result it was doubtful if Germany had great reserves of man-power.

If Germany should start an offensive she would need reserves if the offensive were made on the Maginot Line.

Now yesterday Nazis were cited as mentioning a terrific drive against Britain and France when the weather suited. Even that has to be taken with caution for it was mentioned just a few days ago by Mr. Churchill that the Allies would keep Hitler guessing. Perhaps that reference to offensive was taken up in the Nazi comment yesterday.

It is clear that Germany must have been using her man-power for all she has been worth during the years when Hitler was building up his Reich so that it might become the aggressor nation, as he thought, with safety to himself and to the Nazi state. At any rate Germans cannot come as fresh to the situation as the Allied armies which have reserves of men, munitions and other war requirements. The Allies must be the better for coming fresh to the scene and coming of free peoples which have not dominated the lives and souls of their citizens.

HITLER SAYS WHAT WORLD EXPECTED

According to the news stories of Hitler's speech at Berlin on the seventh anniversary of his coming to power, the German dictator did not say much that the world did not expect. In a wartime speech it was expected that he would paint a picture of the Allies which would satisfy the Germans as their enemies, while he would interpret or distort events and statements to please those whose only means of knowledge of what is going on is through the Nazi-controlled press which suppresses news and manufactures falsehoods for home consumption. A dictator's harangue is therefore not like the address of a British Prime Minister who can deal with criticism or the speech of a Churchill, who is not afraid to speak out because he does not fear to lay the facts before his people. Germany for instance has not reported a single loss of a submarine, though the Allies know that they have destroyed perhaps more than half of the submarines with which Germany entered the war.

Of course Hitler had to draw Britain and France in a dark shadow. He had to make them out villains, to blame them for causing Poland to fight and waiting for the opportunity which Poland would provide. Hitler of course disregarded the fact of the steady efforts of Britain towards disarmament and led the Germans to believe that Germany only started to rearm when she saw the other nations arming. History shows that such a statement of Hitler's is false.

The Fuehrer also made the claim of the invincibility of Germany against all her foes. That is no new claim. Tests in the air in the past five months have not proven German invincibility in her air fleets.

Hitler's bitterness broke out when he spoke of 'Old Mr. Chamberlain" whose true aim he declared was the complete destruction of the German Reich. There Hitler tried to be witty, referring to the age of the British Prime Minister and he gave no credit to him for his efforts to prevent German aggression and so prevent war. This sneer about "Old Mr. Chamberlain" was typically Nazi and a low type of humor His mention of "Chamberlain the pious, Chamberlain the righteous" was of like origin, calculated to please those who hate everything British.

Hitler went out of the way to hit at religion in his reference to Englishmen. He said "Even religion stepped into the background and no Englishmen in the fifteen years before I came to power had any recollection of religion." That charge hurts no one but the Germans Hitler is misguiding.

Adolf Hitler, whatever he said at Berlin, stands at the bar of the world's court. There he is being tried. That he is condemned in the nature of things seems clear enough for nations cannot allow this man to pollute and muddy the stream of international good relations.

How naively he referred to the seizures of other countries! Here is what he says, "In 1938 we took over Austria and in 1939 we protected ourselves against any dangers from the east." There is his brief reference to the theft of Austria, the brutal destruction of the Czecho - Slovakian republic and maltreatment of her citizens. That is his brief reference to the shedding of the innocent blood of many tens of thousands of Poles, and the causing of untold suffering to the population. There is a faint reference to his link with Russia. He speaks a little about Joseph Stalin but he does not refer to Bolshevism or Communism. Germans ought to try and see why he makes so little mention of the alliance with Russia. Hitler explains nothing of it.

When Hitler said that "If the other world had shown the slightest understanding for German problems, all questions could have been negotiated," the "other world" might ask what he meant—did he mean the German problem was to get the world to learn he desired to dominate the world. Did he mean readiness to shed the blood of nations for the sake of the aggrandizement of Hitler and his Nazi party? Of course Htler did not say that. He wanted to picture the Germans as victims seeking only justice.

There was nothing else Hitler could say. His way as a dictator prevented him laying facts and truths before the people.

ICE CROP A GOOD ONE

The ice crop in the winter 1940 should be a good one. Cold weather should produce compact ice of a required thickness. When the times comes to start consuming that harvest the trials and tribulations of firing up, keeping houses and flats warm will have passed and the sun will be much higher in the heavens.

The ice harvest in cities along such a stretch of clear water is a real industry. Thousands of tons are taken from the Bay of Quinte at Belleville, for instance, and packed away for the use of customers who still use ice-boxes and for other means of preserving cold. This ice-harvest therefore becomes an economic factor in the life of many scores of people and the industry not only continues during winter but stretches out into the summer.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Very Rapid Beating of the Heart

Naturally, if your heart, instead of beating 72 to 76 to the minute, begins to beat 172, you would be alarmed. There is more than a feeling of discomfort as you wonder if the heart will not shortly wear itself out beating at such a fast rate.

These attacks of very rapid beating of the heart, which come on suddenly and leave just as suddenly are called paroxysmal tacchycardia —'tacchy' meaning rapid and 'cardia', the heart.

As a matter of fact, paroxysmal tacchycardia is not a disease but just a symptom showing that something is interfering with the natural rhythm of the heart. Fortunately also, in most cases it is not a symptom of serious heart disease.

Drs. M. Campbell and G. A. Elliott, in British Heart Journal, London, report their study of 100 cases of paroxysmal tacchycardia which they saw from 1925 to 1932. There were forty-one cases of heart disease. There was no heart disease (except this rapid beating) in the other fifty-nine cases, though goitre was present in four of these.

The rate at which the heart was beating was between 140 and 240 in 90 per cent of the entire 100 cases. The attacks (paroxysms) generally lasted but a short time, lasting hours instead of days. In sixty-one the attacks usually lasted less than two hours and in another 28 the attack lasted twelve hours or less. There were four in which it lasted about 24 hours; in only seven was it longer than twenty-four hours.

The outcome as far as length of life was concerned in paroxysmal tacchycardia is excellent except in certain cases of heart disease where the attacks occur late in life.

"Three of the patients of Drs. Campbell and Elliott lived fifty years after the onset of their paroxysms, another 18 for more than twenty years, and another twenty-six for more than ten years, and most of them are still in good health."

There is no tendency for the attacks to become worse and p[illegible]ans now are able to reduce the number and severity of the attacks.

I believe the above information about the outcome of most cases of paroxysmal tacchycardia will be comforting to patients and to their families. Many such patients have lived in daily fear of collapse, and have made invalids of themselves because they thought they were afflicted with fatal heart disease.

Quinidine (not quinine) is the usual treatment for this ailment.

It must not be forgotten, however that some cases of true or organic heart disease have paroxysmal tacchycardia as a symptom. Therefore, everyone with this symptom should have the heart examined and not take unnecesary chances.

Growing of Strawberries A Big Industry in Florida

Ed. Note: George A. Johnston, writing to the Picton Times, writes an interesting letter on strawberry industry in Florida. The letter follows:

A tourist friend of mine and the writer paid a visit today to Plant City which is really only a town of 5,000 inhabitants, about eleven miles west of the city where I am located but has the distinction of being the centre of the strawberry industry for this state. Strawberries are not as yet at the height of their production but will be in a couple of months, yet, but it seemed to be a busy place. The growers were waiting in line (like our tomato growers at our factories) and I had plenty of time to gain an inquisitive chat and some information on the industry. First this market which is a new one (and am told there is another equally as large in the town) has three immense sheds, 800 feet long by 100 feet wide. The centre one is where the grower sells his product and the other two have railroad sidings where the fruit or vegetables are packed and shipped by rail or refrigerator trucks north. Several of these were loading during my visit. The variety of berry is called Missionary and the plants or sets come from the State of Maryland, the fruit being pointed and slightly flattened in shape with which doubtless many readers who care to pay the price for the luxury during the Winter months are familiar. The new plants are set out in mid-September and not allowed to vine but stools about 8 inches in staggered rows on ridges four feet apart using approximately 22,600 plants to the acre.

Strawberries for Christmas

It has always been a slogan in Plant City "fresh strawberries for Christmas" and they have made good that boast since I have been down here the past six winters. As the nature of the soil around here is sandy a few growers use pine needles or marsh grass to keep the berries off the ground but as the fruit all has to be washed and sorted the majority do not bother.

A grower pays at this time in the season, (January 8th.) when berries are few and far between 2¼ cents a pint box for picking, 20c for a crate containing 36 pint boxes and 27 cents a crate for packing and receiving at this date, 17 cents a pint box. When I saw in the press there were shipped or at least loaded for shipment the phenominal amount of 43 carloads of berries in one day in other years I thought surely it must be an exaggeration or a misprint. At this visit the warehouse superintendent told me in the month of March when berries are at the highest of production this market had packed and loaded in box cars fifty-three carloads of berries of four hundred and eighty crates to the car load in 24 hours. This, you will agree is some "berries." Growers told me that production at this date is away behind other years due to the fact of cool weather and an extraordinary amount of rain the past two weeks.

Three Months' Picking

Berries are picked for three months, starting a few days previous to Christmas and continuing to April. After March, berries grown in Louisiana are said to be of a superior quality, appear on the market, causing the Florida berries to go flat. I asked a grower if it were not possible to get a second crop from the old plants and he smiled and said it might be possible if he could keep them alive, but the usual thing that happened was in summer the plants dried up and blew away. I was trying to find out what the grower would average per acre for his fruit when this superintendent related to me the following story. A farmer came into a store to make some purchases and was asked how his strawberry crop was.

He replied, "No good this year."

"Why, how was that," was the question, "not sufficient fertilizer?"

"Yes, but somehow I only got $600 off an acre and last year I got off a patch the same size $1100.00," believe it or not.

There is a new idea they have in the strawberry section around here and I am told it for a fact, that country schools close about the first of January and stay closed till berry season is over. How would some of you rising young statesmen and movie stars in Prince Edward like to pick berries all through your holidays and not be able to play ball or go fishing? Maybe you are living in God's own country after all.

A Horse With the Heaves and Some Remedies That Are Used

Farmers have always been faced with what to do for a horse with the heaves. A reporter of the Stratford Beacon-Herald asked some farmers this question:

Can you cure a horse of the heaves? Have you ever doped one up to make him appear as if he didn't have the heaves while you sold him or dealt him on something new?

R. G. Thompson, Goderich Township: "The only cure for the heaves is known as the gypsy's cure, which means a cure long enough to make a buyer think the horse hasn't anything wrong with him. I remember years ago being around a gypsy camp and I heard some of them talking by the fire about how to dope a horse with the heaves. The simplest way was to use a pound of lard. You can also use two or three drops of carbolic acid in the water and it, too, will have the effect of removing the heaves, but only for a period about as long as you could sell him and deliver him and make your return safely."

Ezra Schellenberger, Fullarton Township: "I wouldn't like to say that a horse can be cured of the heaves, but at the same time I couldn't go so far as to say a horse cannot be cured, because years ago I had a cure that worked. A man from the bush gave me the recipe. You had to get a lot of different things from the drug store and mix them up. I loaned it to another fellow and never got it back again. I never cured a horse of the heaves for a short time, long enough to sell him, but I guess lots of men who have bought and sold horses have done that very thing."

Conrad Shearer, Sebringville: "I don't know whether or not there is a cure for the heaves, but I know I had an experience with a little mare I had. When she was about thirteen years old she started heaving like everything. I happened to be talking to Dr. Steele, who used to live in Stratford and Shakespeare. He told me to use some kind of a weed from the bush. The treatment lasted for two weeks and the mare was cured. We had her until she was about twenty-one years old. I knew of one man who doped up a horse with the heaves and sold him for $200."

E. Merner, Sebringville: "There is some kind of remedy to use to ease the heaves but I don't think you can term it a cure. There are different kinds of heaves. Years ago we were told to take wild leakes from the bush and use them in the food. If I remember correctly it helped the heaves considerably."

Fred Thompson, Goderich Township: "No, I don't think there is a cure for a horse with the heaves. There is a remedy which will help them for a while and it is simple enough to fix a horse up so the buyer won't know he has the heaves. About the easiest way is to put some lamp soot in his oats. I don't think there are many horse dealers who haven't sold a 'heavey' horse in their day, knowing it had the heaves, but all doctored up for a few days."

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

If past performances mean anything new British air attacks on German coasts may be expected within the next few days. Every German air venture against Great Britain so far has been followed by a return attack and Monday the Nazi air force sent 20 or more aircraft against British coastal shipping. Further raids followed yesterday.

The destruction unloosed on Finland by the Russian air force on Monday is an example of what the British people might have to endure were it not for their air defences.

The Finns estimated 200 Russian planes dropped 1,000 bombs on Finnish towns and cities, killing more than 30 people and wounding a greater number.

The Finnish claim that 21 attacking Russian planes were shot down indicates the vulnerability of bombers to effective fighter squadrons.

If Germany sent 200 bombers to raid Great Britain their losses probably would be considerably greater because of the opposition they would meet. That is undoubtedly the reason German air attacks so far have been confined to the coasts and have tended to concentrate on undefended shipping.

The fact that the Germans are fully aware of the price they must pay for an effective air attack on Great Britain will not mitigate the severity of the attack, when and if they decide to launch it. Rather it will result on the employment of the largest number of planes practicable in order to achieve the most substantial results possible while the attackers enjoy the advantage of surprise.

War Wife Tells Story in Letters

Efim Pavlovitch marched with the other Russian soldiers into Finland a few months ago. He left behind in Moscow his wife, Marusya, and his little boy, Lyonya. Every week Marusya wrote to her soldier, but somehow she never got an answer. She was still writing to Efim, begging for letters, when he was lying frozen in the snow of Finland.

Pitiful Documents

In the pocket of Efim the Finns found a package of Marusya's letters and they handed them over to Edmund Stevens, correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor in Helsingfors who translated them. They form one of the most pitiful human documents of the war, showing again an old, old fact, that under the speeches of the dictators, under the banners and ideologies and uniforms, people everywhere are still just people, interested mostly in their own families, praying that their husbands and fathers will come home safely from the war.

These are Marusya's letters to her dead and frozen soldier in Finland, whom she addresses by the family nickname of Sima:

Begs For Letters

October 15

Dear Sima:

Best wishes from your devoted wife Marusya and son Lyonya. Please write me whether they have listed you for long-term service. I felt from the start that it was a serious matter, but you insisted you would be back soon. Write me whether they issued your winter clothing. I wonder how matters will end and whether we will ever see each other again, Sima.

Some people say you will all be home soon. Others say not until peace is made. Try to get off just one day to come home. I have lost track of many letters I wrote you. I don't understand why you don't get my letters. I wanted to try to come to see you the twelfth, but Peter told me I wouldn't find you at the postal address, and your whereabouts is kept secret. So I stayed home.

If only you could write me and tell me when to come and if you could see me. I bought you some slippers for 20 rubles and some shirts. I hope they will fit. Only come home.

Lyonya keeps saying, "If my daddy, Sima, comes home when I am asleep please wake me." Peter was home from Poland for three days. If others can get off you should be able to.

Marusya.

"Get Yourself a Job"

October 21.

Dear Sima:

Greetings from your loving Marusya and your son Lyonya. First of all let me tell you that I got your letter for which I thank you. Sima, you tell me to get work and earn something. Even before your letter came I had signed up as charwoman in a workers' barracks. I worked one day and never went back. Aunt Vera was most angry with me for quitting. But I could hardly stand the work among those men for one day, and now I shall look for other work the first of the month, but I don't know where.

You tell me in your letter, "Get yourself a job. I will be home soon." But I just know you are deceiving me. If you were really coming home you wouldn't tell me to get a job. Why have you got a new address?—although you don't mention the transfer to another town. Sima, I feel they are taking you farther and farther away from us.

Marusya.

Back at Factory

November 2.

Dear Sima:

Greetings from your wife and little son Lyonya. Why don't you write? I am terribly worried about you. Mother writes she is leaving on the fifth and that I should meet her on the sixth, but I think we shall eat up our last kopeks if she comes and then what on earth will Lyonya and I do?

Write before the holiday (November 7, anniversary of revolution). I won't have a very gay holiday this year without you Sima. I am back at the factory now. The only trouble is we have no electric current half the time, so working is very irregular and I don't know how much I will earn. Please write.

Lyonya and I feel like two poor little orphans. We cry and cry.

Sima, I inquired about the 20 rubles I sent you. They told me I must wait 42 days and then file a written request for tracing them. But maybe you received the money after all.

Marusya.

Took Out Rubles

November 24

Dear Sima:

I sent my last letter by registered mail. If it isn't returned that means you received it. If it is returned that means I shall have no idea where you are—I cry and cry because I have got no more word from you. Yesterday I went and inquired about you and was curtly told you were not permitted to write, as you were on secret duty but I just cannot believe they should be so heartless and cruel. The registered letter I sent you to Ostrow enclosing Lyonya's picture and 10 rubles has just been returned, but they took out the 10 rubles.

I am so lonely and unhappy. A letter would cheer me, for if anything happened I should have your letter as a keepsake.

I got my first month's wage yesterday: 101 rubles was all I earned on account of lack of electric current. I don't know when I will get your allowance money, but I wouldn't care about your money if only you yourself would come home. I cannot get over the feeling I had when I saw you off at the Moscow station that I would never see you again.

Marusya.

Marusya was right. She will never see her Sima gain. And there will be a lot of other Marusyas in Russia.—Windsor Star.

Mothers-in-Law Worried Ancients

Evidence that a mother-in-law was as much a problem of ancient man as she often is reputed to be today was disclosed recently at New York University when Professor Casper J. Kraemer Jr., chairman of the Classics Department of the university's Washington Square College, reported the discovery of one of the oldest divorce contracts ever unearthed.

The document, executed 1,356 years ago in Southern Palestine, was translated by Professor Kraemer in collaboration with Dr. Naphtali Lewis of the Classics Department, after four years of study of papyri dug up by the Colt archaeological expedition. Professor Kraemer declared that the legal instrument was drawn in 584 A.D. and was found by the Colt expedition in 1936 in what is now Nessana, north of the present Egyptian frontier.

Written In Greek.

Executed in Greek handwriting, the contract is an agreement signed by seven men called by the principals in the action as witnesses to the testimony. According to Professor Kraemer, three of the witnesses were representatives of the local church and the others were citizens of the community.

The translation of the contract follows:

"We, Sergius, son of George, humble presbyter of God; George, son of Victor, humble archdeacon of God; Sergius, son of Palladios, deacon; John, son of Stephen, son of Azaeliath; Zacharias, son of George; Stephen, son of Ubaid; George, son of Elias, bear witness to the following facts:

"John, son of Wael, presbyter, and his wife Nonna, daughter of John, son of Kotemos, and with her mother Thekemis brought us together. Between them many griefs were stirred and arguments presented concerning points at issue. We, the aforenamed men, all remained in order that they might have witnesses and we argued with them at length to be reconciled with each other, but they were not deterred.

"Then the said presbyter, John, said to his wife: 'I am giving you your choice. If you want a judge—whether you want some one from our village, or any one anywhere—I will take one with you.'

"Then the said Nonna and her mother replied, saying: 'We want nothing from you. We are not taking any one (as judge) with you. We have not taken from you any other thing whatsoever, movable or self-moving. Only release me.'

Husband Gives Release.

"Then the said John replied in the presence of us the aforenamed men: 'You are released. We have no claim against each other.'

"To these facts we, the aforenamed men, bear witness before God.

"Neither I, Nonna, nor my heirs, nor asigns have any claim against you, John, or your heirs or assigns, eithed in the matter of dowry or in any other matter whatsoever, great or small, written or unwritten, come to mind or not come to mind.

"Written in the month of Gorpiaios, third indiction, year 584 according to the era of Elusa, by the hand of me, Sergius son of George, and I bear witness:

"Sergius, son of George, humble presbyter of God, was present and bear witness to the above;

"I, George, son of Victor, humble archdeacon of God, was present and bear witness."

Professor Kraemer said the document had no exact parallel as a contract or agreement on divorce. He asserted that both in its adherence to and its divagations from Roman practice and in its suggestion of fundamental Semitic usage it could provoke discussion. — New York Times.

Rumanian Oil

The Nazis are demanding, as a "life or death" matter, that Rumania provide Germany with more oil than is forthcoming at present.

On the other hand, France and Britain have warned Rumania against forcing British and French companies operating in that country to produce oil for shipment to Germany. Eighty per cent of Rumania's oil industry is foreign-owned, chiefly by Britain, France and the United States, and Rumanians declare that Nazi demands for more oil could only be met by levying quotas for Germany on the French and British producers.

Rumania, it will be seen, is decidedly in the middle. She enjoys protective guarantees from Britain and France. Were she to accede to German oil demands it is only natural that these guarantees would be withdrawn. Rumania, of course, doesn't want them withdrawn, for, looking around Europe, she has an excellent idea of what her fate would be were the country brought under the German sphere of influence.

Meanwhile, it is interesting to note the bold words of a leading Turkish newspaper, The Republic which predicts that the nations of the Danube and Balkan areas would go to war against Germany or Russia at the least sign of aggression by either in Southeastern Europe.—Windsor Star.

LOTHIAN MEETS CORDELL HULL FOR DISCUSSION

Talks on Possibility of Relaxing of Restrictions on U.S. Shipping—Possibility of Control Port in Canada is Discussed

Washington, Jan. 31—(AP)—The Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, discussed with State Secretary Cordell Hull today the possibility of relaxing British restrictions on American shipping, which had led to diplomatic exchanges.

After his conference, the ambassador told reporters he had discussed the possibility of guaranteeing not to take American ships into British control ports within the combat area forbidden to American ships by the Neutrality Act.

"This matter is still under discussion," he said, "and no decisions have yet been reached."

The ambassador said he also discussed with Hull the prospect of establishing a British control port in Canada. Saint John, N.B., has been mentioned as the most likely port, because American ships are permitted to go there with passengers and cargo under the Neutrality Act, whereas they are not permitted to go to Canadian ports to the east of 66 degrees west longitude, such as Halifax.

Lord Lothian, who was with Hull for 35 minutes, said "We had a very friendly discussion of various points."

HITLER'S SPEECH

German observers, after studying the text of the address, concluded that the fuehrer intended to make a finish fight of the war that will be five months old on Saturday.

They detected a note of reliance on Soviet Russia and Italy, when he said the Russian ties made Germany's position safe "from the rear" and that the Reich was buttressed by unchanged, "close friendship" with Italy.

Still Very Egotistic.

"In our battle for national existence, we have grown so strong that nothing will be able to defeat us," Hitler boasted.

His closest approach to definition of Germany's war aims was the general remark that the Reich was not fighting for anything lost in the past but was fighting "for all the future".

While he spoke with his usual bitterness of allied leaders, hearers held the opinion that he added no concrete factor to the world-war which has been conducted simultaneously with the physical conflict at sea and in the air. The talk apparently was a "pep talk" for domestic consumption.

Arranged Nazi Rally.

Hitler spoke at an arranged Nazi rally of 25,000 picked demonstrators to mark the anniversary of his accession to the German chancellorship Jan. 30, 1933.

Until Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels made the introduction the uninitiated and radio listeners in Germany did not know even where the meeting was being held. The British radio, however, announced the locale in advance.

The cold, snowy streets of blacked out Berlin were devoid of demonstrations.

(Noises frequently interrupted reception of the speech in the United States, and some radio engineers attributed this to "jamming" from some unidentified source.)

Shortly after Hitler's address, it was claimed semi-officially that German fliers had destroyed seven more British merchant ships and damaged three other vessels.

(One German plane was destroyed and another damaged in the attack on merchant shipping. One British merchantman was known to have been sunk.)

In Hitler's first formal address since he narrowly escaped death in the Munich beer cellar explosion of Nov. 8, he described Germany's relations as follows:

Great Britain and France:

"In 1939, the western powers dropped the mask and sent Germany a declaration of war, despite all our attempts at an understanding.

"Today they admit an understanding with Poland might have been possible, but they did not want it. They wanted war. I can only tell England and France, they will get the fight they asked for."

Hitler mimicked "Old Mr. Chamberlain"; Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty; and Premier Edouard Daladier and "French Generals".

Soviet Russia:

"Through centuries Germany and Russia were friends—why not now? As a result of my efforts, we now have our back clear. We have nothing to worry about any longer from the rear on account of our alliance with Russia."

Italy:

"For years Germany has pursued a common policy with Italy. This policy has not changed. Both states are intimate friends. Their common interests can be reduced to a common denominator."

REPORTERS SEE START OF CONVOY TO GREAT BRITAIN

Enemy Action on This Side of Atlantic Not Expected Till Spring

NAVY STANDS BY

By CHARLES LYNCH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

At an east coast Canadian port, Jan. 31 (CP).—"Now there's a fat prize," said the destroyer skipper.

He pointed ahead at a sight that would have gladdened the heart of any U-boat commander. It was a sizable British tanker, carrying the oil so vital to the allied war machine.

The captain of the Royal Canadian Navy was speaking to newspapermen, permitted aboard his ship so the Canadian public might be given a picture of Canada's destroyer-navy operations.

The captain looked at his watch. "Time to turn back," he announced. Then, aside to the first lieutenant: "Give 'em a bit of helm on this one." The first lieutenant smiled, and barked a command to the helmsman.

They "gave her a bit of helm" all right. For a few seconds, nothing happened. Then, the rudder bit into the churning sea. The stern whipped around and the starboard rail went awash. On the bridge, it was every man for himself.

Saw Convoy Dispatched.

The ship was in the dead centre of the channel as she passed through the gate in the submarine net at the harbormouth. There was lots of other traffic through the gate. A tanker was directly ahead, and several other ships were coming up at the rear.

The press party completed its day with the navy when the destroyer's gangplank was put ashore.

During the day, they had seen a convoy made up and dispatched; had inspected a minesweeper, and seen the men of Canada's navy in training ashore. The destroyer trip was the climax.

Until they reach the open sea, the convoys are controlled from a vantage point ashore known as "the eyrie".

There, a group of naval officers supervise the work of getting the convoy under way. The newspapermen were permitted to see this being done.

Signals Put Up.

The telephone rang soon after the press party entered the room.

"Signal's up, sir," a voice said. "Right," said the officer in charge. "See if you can speed them up a little, will you?" "Them" being any number of freighters and tankers in whose hands was the life's blood of the allied war effort.

The officer explained that some time before a convoy is slated to move, all incoming shipping is stopped outside the anti-submarine net. All ships within the harbor, with the exception of tugs and ferries, are ordered to remain where they are. The navy is taking no risks of collisions within the harbor having vivid memories of what happened in Halifax in 1917.

The convoy was taking shape. The ships fell into line like so many toys. Finally, they stretched away to the horizon in a great, slow-moving chain.

Show Is Over.

When the last ship passed through the gate, this show, for the men in the "eyrie", was over.

Later, on the destroyer, the captain said that the safeguarding of convoys is a job for the air force and the navy in co-operation.

"We know now," he said, "that one branch of the service can't do a thorough job. We have to have the thorough co-operation of the air force, and we're getting it."

He said that enemy action on this side of the Atlantic isn't really expected until the spring. Present winter conditions make it extremely difficult for a submarine or small surface craft to make an Atlantic crossing and return to its base.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair, saying to ma, How is it you haven't got yourself one of those screwy looking hats with the tail feathers and what not hanging down the back?

O, you mean a snood ,ma said, and pop said, I bet I do at that.

Well, to tell the truth I've been snood minded ever since they came out, but I had an idea you might consider them too radical, ma said. Why, do you approve of them? She said, and pop said, Well, they seem more or less fitting and apropriate, I must admit. I mean womens clothes always have been simbolical of the times they lived in, and what is more simbolical of the present cock eyed times than a woman's vale hanging down the back instead of the front? he said.

Well just how do you mean, Willyum? ma said, and pop said, I'll tell you just how I mean. I mean Japan is going bankrupt trying to cement a lasting frendship with China, but the cement wont hold right because it's full of pieces of flying steel wich keep it from sticking, and I mean Russia is trying to deliver a message of pure reason to Finland, but the message is printed on machine gun bullets and unfortunately the Finns can read that fast, and I mean that's only examples but it's enough to give the generel idea, so why shouldn't the women wear vales over the back of their heads instead of the front of their eyes to keep in step with the times? he said.

Another reason I haven't bought a snood so far is because the poor ones look so cheep and the good ones are so expensive for what they're worth, ma said, and pop said, Then for Peet sake get a good one, make the story complete by buying one that's only worth a fraxion of what it costs.

Now Willyum that's very broad minded of you, ma said.

Meaning she proberly will.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, February 1

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN ACTIVE and interesting day, with personal engagements dominating the activities, is read from the predominant planetary configurations. The accent seems to be on social, domestic and affectional affairs of those business interests involved in catering to such happy functions. All artistic pursuits are under good auspices, and the mystical or psychological expressions of creative talents find splendid stimulus under this rule. However, in connection with all such idealistic experiences, there may be sudden and surprising disruptions.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of extremely lively experiences in social, domestic, artistic or emotional activities. A mystical or intuitional element may be involved. There may be a unique original or modernistic expression in poetry, music or art. Romance may be absorbing and cause sudden or entangling upheavals or changes.

A child born on this day may be splendidly endowed with all the social, emotional, artistic and romantic graces and talents, and have a gentle, genial and sympathetic nature. It may also have strong intuitions or some form of mystical or subtle creative depths, perhaps in poetry or music.

SPANISH RICE — Ingredients: one-half cup rice, two cups boiling water, one-half teaspoon salt, two green peppers, one tablespoon butter, one onion, chopped; one pint tomatoes, pepper to taste, one-half teaspoon salt. Boil washed rice in the boiling water which is seasoned with salt. Scald peppers and dice, then fry in butter with onion, which is sliced or diced. Add tomatoes, salt and pepper, and heat to boiling point. Mix with boiled, drained rice in greased baking dish or casserole, and top with pork chops which have been seasoned. Bake for 45 minutes.

Snow Pudding—To one box lemon gelatin add one cup boiling water. When it begins to get stiff, beat to a froth, add stiffly-beaten whites of two eggs and set aside to chill.

Soft Custard — Ingredients: one cup hot milk, two egg yolks, three tablespoons sugar, one-fourth teaspoon lemon extract, one-eighth teaspoon salt. Cream eggs, sugar and salt, add hot milk slowly. The Winter Chores

When at four the school is over and the books are put away,
We must rush and hurry homeward for the chores at close of day;
There are horses to be watered, then the sheep are to be fed,
And the little calves are waiting for their supper in the shed.

And the cows in anxious murmur clank their chains and softly "moo",
And we hear the horses neighing while the pigeons strut and coo;
And the playful dog is barking, Oh! what music fills the air,
When it's choretime in the country, naught can with its joy compare.

But the best of all the choretime is the brushing of the Bay—
He's the colt—a perfect beauty—which I hope to drive some day;
Oh! he's glad to hear me coming, how he whinners for his feed!
And to make him sleek and shining is a happiness indeed.

Soon I'll put him in the harness and I'll drive him near and far
Though he may not go so quickly as a speeding motor car;
Yet, for such I would not trade him, that is only a machine,
But my Bay means love and living and a trusty friend I ween.

Lift for Wardrobe

By ALICE ALDES

DID YOU ever buy something new for the sheer joy of it? Lots of women do, dropping into a shop on their noon hour or making a special trip into town just to catch up with some bright lift for their wardrobes. Probably nine times out of ten it's a new hat which catches the eye from a window and which promises to go nicely with several dresses. Such straws as the one shown also do well with winter furs and take the place of a white hat at mid-season, if this seems an extravagance. It's an extremely soft straw, toasty in color and tied around with Roman stripes in blue and rose. No need to worry about your head getting cold..the crown curves out and over in back, protecting that spot most likely to feel the chill.

Palship is the Family Tie that Binds

By Garry Clyeveland Myers, Ph.D.

AN UNUSUALLY discerning mother of six children told me of the following conversation she overheard. It so impressed me that I asked this mother to write it for me to pass on to you. It is a conversation between a son, aged 10, and a daughter, aged 11.

Brother: "I wish I could go to another school."

Sister: "Why?"

Brother: "Cause here in this school all the kids know how dumb I am. If I could start all over in a new school, I could be the brightest boy in the class. None of the kids would know I am dumb, and the teacher wouldn't know, so I could do all my work every day and do it quickly; then they would never know."

Sister: "Why don't you do that in this school? You could start tomorrow just doing your arithmetic hard when it's arithmetic time. Don't pay any attention to the others—just think about your arithmetic. And when it's spelling time, do it hard; don't pay any attention to the others. If you would do this, you could be bright. Start tomorrow."

In Citizenship, Too

Brother: "But I am so dumb in my citizenship, too. I get C every time. What could I do about that?"

Sister: "That's easy. I can tell you an awfully easy way you can get better in citizenship."

Brother: "How?"

Sister: "Just keep busy. Let's have a signal so we can help each other. Let's clear our throats when either of us sees the other looking around when we are supposed to be working"

Brother: "That would be swell."

Sister: "Let's start tomorrow. We may not be perfect all at once, but I'll write down on a piece of paper and put it on the wall, like mother does when she wants to remember, that this date you decided to work hard, and to pay attention to nothing but your work when you are supposed to be working. You can look at that paper every morning, and I know that you will be pleased at how much better you get all the time."

Brother: "Gee! Nancy, it'll be swell of you to do that. You won't forget with you? The signal will be to clear our throats."

"Sweeter Than Sheep"

This conversation took place after the two had gone to bed. The mother overheard it when she went to see whether they were settling down. When she overheard what was being said, she withdrew, "realizing such conversation was sweeter than sleep."

The mother reports that the results have been remarkable. The teacher has expressed astonishment at the lad's improved deportment, and he has on several days brought home perfect papers in arithmetic and spelling.

"The boy is radiantly proud of his achievement," the mother says. And the mother ought to be of hers.

It's a fine example of how brothers and sisters can be real pals.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Should the radio be on at meal times where there are growing children?

A. As a rule, no. If at all, it should be for very quiet, unexciting music. The usual radio program which the family is exposed to at meal time is likely to excite or irritate some or all the members of the family. If they try to talk at all, each will talk louder and louder to rise above the din. So also will each tend to talk louder because another member has. Vexed as a result, each is inclined also to speak in a voice more high-pitched. These loud shrill voices in turn charge the family atmosphere with more tension and vexation; and in such an atmosphere all are prone to eat faster than if they felt serene. Furthermore the dinner hour should afford the best possible educational period of the day for the growing child through participation in the family conversation — impossible with the radio competing. The child and radio are yours, of course.

Q. What of the advice, "Never say don't, say do"; or, "Never say you mustn't, say you must?"

A. About the best way to make a child stubborn.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"To Love and Respect a Drunken Father Impossible"

Dear Miss Fairfax

Any help you can give me in solving the terrible problem in my home will be gratefully received. I'm a high school graduate and would have given anything to continue my education. That was impossible because my father was jobless and a confirmed drunkard. Mother and I both work in a factory, and we can barely keep the home, such as it is, going.

I can have no friends because my father is drunk and boisterous about the house, and insults anyone who comes to see us. Still he demands respect and blind obedience from mother and me. I would have left home two years ago but I cannot bear to desert mother whom I love devotedly.

In the meantime, life is passing me by. Girls I went to school with are married and have homes of their own. And here mother and I sit, evening after evening waiting for that brawling drunkard to come home, smash furniture, or beat us up babbling of respect and love we should show him. Short of suicide, what's to be done?

Despairing

There is a point in human relations where patience ceases to be a virtue and becomes weak, foolish, almost criminal. And constantly giving in to a man such as you describe your father to be only drags him down lower.

The court deals with the husband and father who smashes the furniture in drunken fury and demands respect.

There is no reason why a girl, earning her own livelihood should sit at home and see life pass her by. Make new contacts with your church, through political clubs, in organizations. Get some other girls together and start a Dutch-Treat Club.

In a future letter I'll have something to say about these clubs, where girls whose home conditions are not of the happiest may meet one evening a week in a recreation room connected with their churches.

Shall She Take Advantage of Leap Year

Dear Miss Fairfax

He is the type of person I've always wanted, and I know I could help him and not be a clod in his life. I'm talented in several ways, and I wish to make plans to marry within the next two years—I am 18.

Seeing this is Leap Year, is it proper or possible for a girl to propose marriage? In this modern day and age, do you still think that men want this privilege? The young man of whom I speak has no "steady" girl, nor does he appear serious about anyone.

Perplexed

Unless a man is the shyest of violets, it seems to me it would be folly for a girl to up and at him with "will you marry me"?

Millions of women have actually proposed to men and not waited for Leap Year either, but the actual asking has been so subtle so camouflaged by feminine arts and graces, that the great big he-man never realized the little lady had actually done the proposing.

All men like to reserve this prerogative for themselves, and a bald proposal of marriage would send most of them flying to the tall timber.

Smart New Five-to-Seven Party Idea

A few smart New York hostesses have a clever answer about what to serve to guests invited to come in "between five and seven".

Enter their living rooms at these hours, when vitality is at a low ebb, and you see on the tea-table a soup tureen (of silver or china) filled with steaming hot borscht, the famous Russian beet soup.

A grand idea, this. In the first place, it's a very easy soup to make, easy to add to your list of specialties—you can find the recipe in any good cook book or you can buy excellent canned varieties. A light soup that won't do dire things to your dinner appetite, its deep red color is gala, party-looking. Sour cream is the perfect accompaniment, and with it you can have the simplest of food-accessories: buttered, toasted crackers (crisped saltines are good), tiny hot biscuits or rolls, or any of your specialties in canapes. The borscht, remember, must be served piping hot, for lukewarm borscht is a desecration.

Serving borscht in the late afternoon is an excellent idea for the country—to serve when skaters or skiiers or walkers come in needing a reviving hot drink—and it's delicious when served as a cold soup in your summer buffet menus.

Although a silver or china or pottery soup tureen is the perfect container for the serving of this soup, don't be stopped by the fact that you haven't one. It either can be appropriately served in an electric buffet warmer or the soup can be kept hot on the kitchen stove. As the guests arrive you can bring it in in bouillon cups or tea cups on a tray (a very few cups at a time, to preserve the precious heat).

This hot borscht is a festive-looking, comforting, cheering drink. Has a style air, too—very important to the modern hostess.

Typed Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Will you kindly inform me if it is a breach of etiquette for a member of the family to typewrite the name and address on the envelope of a Christmas card to another member of the immediate family?

B.

A Christmas card envelope is such a personal item that it is should be addressed in hand-writing. A typewritten Christmas card envelope is impersonal, a bit frigid.

Note of Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I would like to have some advice as to what to do after receiving some "get well" cards while in the hospital? Should I thank the friends personally, or send notes of thanks?

S.

If, fairly soon after you have received these cards, these well-wishing friends come to see you or you meet them, you will have the proper opportunity of thanking them personally. But if this opportunity does not occur within a short time, you should write little notes of thanks for this kind attention. But if you are well enough, it's of course better to write these appreciative notes as soon as you can.

Wringer Hands: A Modern Injury

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What is the meaning of the surgical phrase "wringer hands"?

This is a new form of injury which has been observed by traumatic surgeons. A woman using her washing machine has her hand drawn between the moving rubber rolls of the electric clothes wringer. Often it is drawn in above the wrist. When the hand is released, it is pale and only moderately sore and, on the contrary, sometimes numb. X-ray shows no fracture.

It is important that treatment should be applied immediately. The hand should be elevated, and an absorbent cotton compression dressing should be applied. This must be held firmly in place with an elastic bandage and the hand maintained in the elevated position. If this is done, swelling can be prevented and tissue death (necrosis) prevented. The dressing must be removed and pressure reapplied every four hours during the next two or three days. If the compression bandage is not applied, great swelling will occur and large areas of skin slough off.

Sometimes the injury seems so unimportant that a physician is not consulted until several days later, when severe damage is seen to have occurred.

Children may suffer from the same accident and the arm may be drawn in to the shoulder. The same measures should be used in treatment for the child as for the grown-up.

Mango Mouth

What is mango mouth?

Cases have been reported of inflammation and swelling of the mouth from eating mango fruit. The condition is attributed to a substance contained in the peel of the fruit which protects it from insects. It may cause severe inflammation of the face.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Our Fighting Navy"

Here it is at last! A great and thrilling story of the sea, produced with the assistance of the Navy league, and with the co-operation of the British admiralty, Our Fighting Navy, which starts next at the Capitol, is a stirring picture, full of action and love-interest — and thoroughly free from propaganda. Naturally, a picture must of necessity be man-sized to support a cast which includes Robert Douglas, Richard Cromwell, H. B. Warner and Noah Beery, but there is something about Our Fighting Navy that seems to bring out the best in even these great actors. You will find some striking scenes of the British fleet at sea; see a well-photographed torpedo attack; see a battleship shattered by a magazine explosion, and see big guns in action as the British navy swings into defence of age-old tradition. In short, one has a better conception of how and why "Britain rules the waves," after having seen Our Fighting Navy.

The added feature attraction is the new western "Days of Jesse James" starring Roy Rogers, Geo. "Gabby" Hayes, Donald Barry and lovely Pauline Moore.

AT THE BELLE

"EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT"

Highly important to the screen career of Sonja Henie was the assignment of Irving Cummings to direct her newest 20th Century-Fox picture, "Everything Happens at Night", which is now at the Belle Theatre. Significant to all moviegoers is Cummings' promise that he is going to deliver "a new Sonja Henie" to the screen.

Known to filmdom as an "actor's director". Cummings has a great knack of drawing out of his performers the full amount of their talent. Having been a stage star and screen player for many years himself, he knows by intimate first-hand experience just what makes an actor tick and how to keep him ticking with the greatest efficiency.

When Sonja Henie was first signed up by 20th Century-Fox, not much was expected her in acting ability; all that was wanted was her genius for skating. But she soon surprised everyone by developing a screen talent and personality that clicked with the fans and from picture to picture she has had to depend less upon the supporting cast to carry the story while she concentrated on skating.

Now that she can be counted upon as an acting star in her own right, with her artistry on the ice as an added attraction, Cummings decided to cultivate that ability to its greatest degree.

"I learned that the principal thing Sonja Henie enjoys in pictures is the fantasy of being someone else. She likes to play and her boundless energy helps her to accomplish anything she wants, but she doesn't like being driven.

"Consequently I try to keep the atmosphere on the set free of heaviness or the feeling of a job that must be done. We work as though it all were fun and Sonja responds to it."

Featured in support of Sonja in "Everything Happens at Night" are Ray Milland and Robert Cummings.

Blackout in Paris!

The dread darkening of the French capital as the air raid sirens shriek is the signal that plunges Charlie Chan into a suspenseful mystery in his latest film, "Charlie Chan in City in Darkness." There is no blackout of crime despite the fear of bombs, the famed sleuth discovers in the 20th Century-Fox film announced as the added feature attraction with Sidney Toler portraying Chan.

Ken Soble's True-False

Ken Soble's new True-False game will be introduced to Belle Theatre patrons on the Belle Theatre stage, this week.

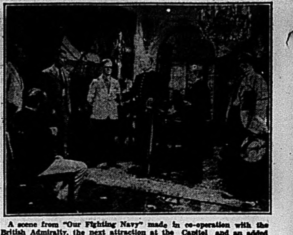
True-False affords lots of fun, is easy to play, and you'll enjoy it. Splendid cash prizes are awarded to the winners.

AT THE McCARTHY

"A GIRL MUST LIVE"

The funniest British hit since "Pygmalion"....and leading candidate for the funniest picture of 1940...... "A Girl Must Live" starring Margaret Lockwood, Naunton Wayne, Mary Clare and George Robey, the famous stage star of "The Bing Boys Are Here" now being presented at the McCarthy Theatre. The program in addition includes a beautiful all-technicolor cartoon and an exceptional screen vaudeville featurette entitled "Rolling In Rhythm."

Starring Tony Martin, famous radio singer, and beautiful Rita Hayworth, accompanied by Andre Kostelanetz and his famous orchestra, the musical comedy hit "Music In My Heart" opens next at the McCarthy Theatre. Six new song hits are introduced in this picture by Tony Martin, all certain to be hit tunes of the year. Others in the cast of "Music In My Heart", are little Miss Edith Fellows, Alan Mowbray, Eric Blore and George Tobias, who highlight the production with delightful comedy. A dramatic second feature is also presented in addition to the above entitled "A Woman Is The Judge" a powerful screen story of Mother and Daughter love with Frieda Inescort, Rochelle Hudson and Otto Kruger, featured in the top roles of this new Hollywood production which is certain to be one of the biggest of the year.



A scene from "Our Fighting Navy" made in co-operation with the British Admiralty, the next attraction at the Capitol and an added feature "Days of Jesse James" completes the bill.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infected Tonsils

As I pointed out here a few days ago, a series of head colds in a child is often a warning of infected tonsils. If these warnings are not heeded, if the diseased organ is allowed to remain in the throat, what happens?

Well, the effect of a chronically diseased tonsil on the body is fairly obvious when you consider that situated in the throat as the tonsils are, every breath of air, every bite of food passes over them, permitting them to distribute their poisons all through the body. Naturally such a focus of infection can do a great deal of harm in any person, young or old. In a child it can be more dangerous than in an adult, particularly to the heart.

A great many cases of rheumatic fever with associated heart disease are brought on by repeated infections in the upper respiratory passages. These infections will almost certainly be cut down if the tonsils are removed, but for the measure to be as effective as necessary, the diseased tonsils must be removed before the signs of the rheumatic fever appear. If removed after the heart has been damaged, you may prevent further damage, but you cannot repair that injury the heart has already suffered.

The kidneys are also prone to be affected by diseased tonsils and repeated head colds. Nephritis is nearly always preceded by an acute infection of the throat or ears. Removal of the tonsils often is all that is needed to put a stop to these attacks.

When any child has an acute infection of the throat, then he is menaced by a pneumonia. Constant colds induced by diseased tonsils can likewise affect the lungs with other serious complications.

I think it is unnecessary to cite other dangers. Most people know now the menaces that lurk in infected tonsils. They realize that they should come out. What they need to know is that they must watch for and detect the first warning that the tonsils are chronically diseased.

I hope parents won't get the impression that I am advocating the wholesale removal of tonsils from children. Nothing could be further from the fact. I don't believe single tonsil should come out until it is undoubtedly infected. A few years ago it became fashionable to have your child's tonsils out whether they were bad or not. But today not many medical men will advise their removal unless they are satisfied there is no alternative.

If the doctor decides to take them out, it is because he knows that not only are they useless to your child, but they are actually a threat to his health.

I'll never forget the day Emilie, Yvonne, Marie, Annette and Cecile went under the knife and had their tonsils out. Of course, I didn't try it. I had the best doctors from the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children come up and do the job. I have taken out tonsils, but only when I had to do it. I know it is looked on as a minor operation today, but still it is work for a surgeon to do, not a country doctor like myself. I hope my days of cutting out tonsils on the kitchen table with an oil lamp for illumination are over. I didn't enjoy the operations any more than the patients did.

The fox family has some interesting additions. Now it is a color called Magenta Fox, a lovely gray with a red overtone. We saw it made into a full-length, collarless coat and it was something!

$655,000,000 Naval Program Approved by U.S. House Naval Committee

Two-Year Fleet Building Program Passes Committee

Would Authorize Construction of 21 Additional Warships and 22 Auxiliary Ships

RAISE AIR STRENGTH

U. S. Army Reported to be Concentrating on Complete Seacoast Defences and Country-Wide Air Raid Warning System

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP). — The House of Representatives Naval Committee tentatively approved today a two-year building program for the United States fleet to cost approximately $655,000,000.

The revamped program, described by Chairman Carl Vinson as "all the navy can build in two years", would authorize construction of 21 additional warships, 22 auxiliary vessels and the boost of the navy's minimum air strength to 4,500 planes.

The program first called for eventual appropriation of $1,300,000,000 to provide for 77 warships and the same number of aircraft and auxiliaries.

On the other side of the country's defence program, the army was reported to be concentrating on completing sea-coast defences, establishing a country-wide air raid warning system, and getting additional modern equipment for its troops.

Hundreds watched as firemen fought for more than four hours against the flames in the Metropolitan store on Wellington street—Sherbrooke's main thoroughfare. The flames spread to the adjoining Woolworth store before they were brought under control.

Families Flee Homes in Block

The second fire broke out soon after 11 p.m. while the first still was smouldering. Weary from their four-hour battle, firemen fought for another two hours against the blaze. Four families were forced to flee their homes in the block before firemen extinguished the fire.

In both cases, damage was covered partially by insurance.

BLIZZARD DEATHS IN JAPAN TOTAL 78

Tokyo, Jan. 31.— (AP) — The number of deaths from blizzards in North Central Japan totalled 78 today, with 29 persons reported missing.

SAFE IS LOOTED, 2 CARS STOLEN

Police Suspect Remnants of Robber Gang at Work Near London

London, Ont., Jan. 31—(CP)—A looted safe and two auto thefts over night sent Provincial Police on the trail today of what they believe may be the remnants of a robber gang which operated in western Ontario late in 1939.

Pond's store, at Lucan, north of London, was entered, the safe smashed and $20 taken from the box. The raiders are also blamed for the theft of a car owned by Dr. W. T. Banting, of Lucan.

Another auto was stolen from Hogg's garage at Thamesford, on No. 2 highway east of London. Police say the robbers may have switched machines, or split up into two cars.

It is the first district safe robbery since the arrest in December of Jack Henson, 25, alleged gang leader and two accomplices. Henson is now awaiting trial on about 18 charges of breaking and entering, possession of stolen goods and illegal possession of firearms.

At present, police do not link last night's crimes with the bank bandit who is still hunted after a $1,900 haul in east London Monday afternoon.

BABY IS VICTIM OF ODD ACCIDENT

Strikes Head on Bedside After Falling Over Side, Superintendent Says

Edmonton, Jan. 31.—(CP)— Dr. A. F. Anderson, superintendent of Royal Alexandra hospital, said here today a post mortem showed the death of 14-months-old Kenneth Squire Ourtiss was caused by the infant striking his head on the bed after falling over the side.

Dr. Anderson added the post mortem gave no evidence of strangulation.

The hospital superintendent said the child was suffering from an enlarged thymus gland and bronchial tracheitis and under those conditions a slight blow was sufficient to cause death.

A police report last night said the child managed to get over the edge of the bed at the hospital Saturday despite the harness used for all infant patients. It expressed the opinion the harness had then caused "sufficient pressure to constrict his breathing."

Police reported a full investigation was under way. An inquest will be held Friday.

DIPLOMATIC DEADLOCK EXISTS AT TOKYO OVER INCIDENT

Tokyo, Jan. 31—(AP)—Attempting to break the diplomatic deadlock over the Asama Maru incident, Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita conferred for an hour today with the British ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie.

The foreign minister notified the British ambassador yesterday that Japan considered as "essential the return of 21 German seamen seized Jan. 20 from the Japanese liner Asama Maru 35 miles off Yokohama.

A Foreign Office statement said the diplomats today discussed "practical and political angles" of the incident. This presumably meant that Arita insisted that Great Britain take measures to assuage Japanese feelings.

Sir Robert and Arita arranged another conference for tomorrow. It was disclosed that Japan's reply to the British answer to the original Japanese protest would be transmitted to Britain in "a day or two" after which contents of the previous notes would be published.

203 Telephones Added in 1939 In Belleville

A net increase of 203 was recorded in the number of telephones in Belleville during 1939, according to the current issue of "Telephone News". On December 31 last, there were 3,690 telephones in service here as compared with 3,487 on December 31, 1938.

At the end of last year, there were 1,222 business telephones in the Belleville exchange area, a gain of 24. Residence telephones totalled 2,468, a gain of 179.

If, as some authorities contend the number of telephones in a community is an excellent barometer of general business, it would seem that Belleville is continuing to progress economically.

REPRESENTATIVES OF BOTH PARTIES TO BE INCLUDED

Conservative Leader Manion Gives Another Statement in Answer to Questions Asked

PUT COUNTRY FIRST

Ottawa, Jan. 31 (CP).—Conservative leader Manion announced today that if he is called upon to form the next Dominion government he intends to take in representatives of "both the old parties, and, if practicable, all important parties in the House of Commons."

This was his answer, Dr. Manion said, to a "flood" of approving messages he had received as a result of his national government proposal of last Friday, many of them asking for more details.

Dr. Manion suggested that in those constituencies where nominations have not yet been made, the National Conservative party get together with other political groups in open conventions to select candidates who will put service above party and who will command the support of all groups.

"My idea is that at this time of world crisis and national danger our people do not want petty bickerings of party continuously sounding in their ears," Dr. Manion said.

"My own feeling is that we must all put country above party or personal preferment." Dr. Manion said no outstandingly able man would be kept out of his proposed National Government because of his political affiliations.

The statement follows:

Regarding my proposal published last Friday—the day after Mr. Mackenzie King impulsively and unfairly dissolved parliament — that if elected I would form a National Government, I am being flooded with letters, telegrams, and telephone messages of approval. But accompanying some of these messages, and also in some of the press, is the suggestion that I elaborate my plan. Therefore I gladly do so in this brief press release.

My idea is that at this time of world crisis and national danger our people do not want petty bickerings of party continuously sounding in their ears. They do want, when this election is over, a government of the best men available, irrespective of politics, to handle our war effort so that such evils as patronage, favoritism, and extravagance will be wholly eliminated.

Now that we are in the war beside Great Britain and France, they want real leadership instead of the half-hearted and dilatory methods of Mr. King and his government. I am convinced that this is the desire of the vast majority of the Canadian people. Only a few hide-bound politicians differ. My own feeling is that we must all put country above either party or personal preferment.

Leaders Included

When I form this government, I intend, so far as possible, that both hide-bound politicians differ. My all important parties in the House of Commons, shall be represented in it—at any rate, no outstandingly able man would be kept out of such government because of his political affiliations.

Leaders in business and industry would necessarily be included. Incidentally, it is time that the Labor department, for example, should have at its head some outstanding Labor man who understands the problems of this large body of our citizens, just as the great industry of agriculture is usually, and should always be, represented by a practical agriculturist. These departments are merely mentioned as illustrations, for the purpose of clarifying my intention.

With a whole-hearted desire to serve our country, our Empire, indeed, to serve all the principles of liberty for which we are fighting, I suggest most respectfully that in those constituencies throughout Canada where nominations have not been made for the coming election, the National Conservative Party make a patriotic endeavour to get together the people of all groups at open conventions with the object of exploring the possibility of naming some loyal, able, high type of citizen, of whatever party, as candidate—one whose character would make him capable of fulfilling the requirements implied in these sentences, and who would be above merely using the National Government proposal as a means of entering the House of Commons.

QUESTION RAISED OF SALE VALUE

Toronto Real Estate as Bail Refused at Assessed Value at Whitby

Whitby, Ont., Jan. 31. —(CP)—Toronto real estate was refused as bail at its assessed value in police court here yesterday when Crown Attorney Allin F. Annis stated "my experience with Toronto property is that it is over-assessed as far as its sale value is concerned".

The question arose when five Toronto youths appeared on various charges of breaking, entering and theft. Defence counsel was prepared to furnish bail in Toronto property.

Mr. Annis, in objecting to that form of bail, insisted that by personal experience he knew that Toronto property is usually assessed at 25 per cent above its actual sale value, and that a house brought before the court by accuseds' lawyer as assessed at $2,300 would be worth only $1,500 as bail.

Bail Set at $5,000

Magistrate Ebbs declared he felt $5,000 bail was not out of place, and five went back to jail while counsel went to attempt to arrange it. They gave their names as Bruce Rodden, 20; James Tomlinson, 20; Leonard Eloner, 18; Robert Weir, 23, and Irwin Green, 18. A sixth accused, wounded by an intended victim's shot, is in Toronto General hospital. He is Dayton Platten age 19.

Toronto, Jan. 31.— (CP)—"First time I ever heard of anything like that," said Assessment Commissioner Farley, commenting on the action of Crown Attorney Annis, Whitby, in refusing to accept Toronto real estate, at its assessed value, as bail.

"I'd like to know what he knows about city of Toronto property", the Commissioner added.

PAPER IGNITES ABOUT BULB STARTS SMALL FIRE

Quincy, Mass., Jan. 31—(AP)—A spokesman for the Fore River shipyard of the Bethlehem Steel Company said today that a small fire aboard the navy's new $30,000,000 airplane carrier Wasp yesterday was caused by ignition of a piece of paper wrapped around an electric light bulb to protect it from sprayed paint. Damage, he said, did not exceed $50. He scouted the possibility of sabotage.

Rogers Denies Soldiers Ill for Lack of Proper Clothing

'Totally Untrue,' Says Defence Minister Respecting Charges Made by Hon. Dr. Manion

CHARGES PROBED

Ottawa, Jan. 31—(CP)—Defence Minister Rogers, in a Press statement today described as "totally untrue" the charge of Conservative Leader Manion that many of those who enlisted in the Canadian Active Service Force became ill because of lack of proper clothing and blankets.

(Dr. Manion made the charge in a Press statement issued yesterday. He also made a similar charge in the House of Commons last Thursday).

"I felt it my immediate duty to make an immediate investigation of this serious charge," said Mr. Rogers. "On the evidence of responsible military authorities both in British Columbia and at eastern ports of embarkation the statement made by Dr. Manion was found to be totally untrue."

The Defence Minister said that "out of some 30 trainloads of men of all units arriving at the port of embarkation from various points in Canada only 30 all told were required to go to hospital instead of proceeding overseas, and all types of illness were represented in this hospital list."

Mr. Rogers' Statement

Mr. Rogers' statement follows:

"My reply to the statement issued yesterday by Dr. Manion does not require many words. In his speech in the House of Commons last Thursday Dr. Manion made the definite charge that 'I know of one battalion from British Columbia which was dressed in cotton underwear and cotton clothing. These men crossed this north country in the middle of December and continued across the north Atlantic in the same kind of weather.' I say, again without fear of contradiction —this information comes to me from doctors in charge of these militia regiments — that many of these men are sick and large numbers have been sent to the hospital because of lack of preparation and because of lack of vision on the part of this government." (This is the actual quotation from Hansard).

"I felt it my duty to make an immediate investigation of this serious charge. On the evidence of responsible military officers both in British Columbia and at eastern ports of embarkation the statement made by Dr. Manion was found to be totally untrue. The only battalion to which his charge could have referred was the Seaforth Highlanders for this is the only battalion which has yet left British Columbia for overseas.

The district ordnance officer for British Columbia reported that every man was issued with woollen underwear, battle dress and greatcoat before the units left British Columbia for the port of embarkation. I may add that every unit of the first division went overseas with similar equipment.

Figures Quoted

The embarkation officers at eastern ports reported that the men who were ill were not allowed to proceed overseas but were removed to a military hospital. Only two men of the Seaforth Highlanders were taken off the trains and put in hospital. Neither of these men suffered from any illness attributable to cold or lack of clothing. Out of some 30 train loads of men of all units arriving at the port of embarkation from various points in Canada only 30 all told were required to go to hospital instead of proceeding overseas, and all types of illness were represented in this hospital list.

Instead of admitting his error and expressing regret for it Dr. Manion has seen fit to indulge in personal abuse and then to submit to me a list of general questions bearing on the conduct of the war during the past four months.

Says His Office is Target

I doubt if any useful purpose would be served by prolonging a newspaper controversy at this time. The statement made by Dr. Manion and reports from responsible military officers speak for themselves. It has been quite evident that the Minister of National Defence would be one of the chief targets for attack by Dr. Manion.

For my own part I am prepared to regard these attacks as one of the minor hardships of war. So far as general questions on the record of the Canadian war effort are concerned, I intend to deal with them fully from time to time in the course of the election campaign. In due course a fair-minded electorate will decide the issues on their merits.

N. SEA CASTS UP CASUALTIES OF QUICKENING WAR

Sixteen Survivors of Steamer Giralda Reported Drowned Within Sight of Land

SHIPS ATTACKED

LONDON, Jan. 31 — (CP) — The North Sea continued to cast up new casualties of the quickening war in the air and on the waves.

Sixteen survivors from the sunken British steamship Giralda, 2,178 tons, were reported today to have drowned within a quarter-mile of land when their lifeboat capsized. The bodies were washed ashore on one of the Orkney Islands.

Two lifeboats of the 1,487-ton British steamship Eston were washed ashore near a northeast port. The Eston and her crew of 18 were believed lost.

Other ships reported attacked included the 2,881-ton freighter Stanburn, which was sunk; the 8,501-ton tanker British Triumph, which later reached port; the 4,553-ton Collier Coryton, and the trawler Algoma, concerning whose fate no further word has been received. Twenty-six of the Stanburn's crew of 28 were lost.

A statement issued in London said "no less than 20" German bombers took part in yesterday's attacks. The raids were aimed at the east coast, destination of more than half of Britain's normal inbound shipping.

HIT BY TROLLEY, AGED MAN DIES

Richard Gilpin of Toronto Often Mistaken for Judge Landis

Toronto, Jan. 31. (CP)—Richard Gilpin, 82, Toronto baseball enthusiast and often mistaken for Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, professional baseball commissioner in the United States, died in the hospital today of injuries suffered Monday when stuck by a trolley. The death was the second traffic fatality of the year in Toronto.

During a baseball game here a few years ago, a group of spectators disputing a point in the play, proceeded to his seat to obtain a ruling in the belief he was Judge Landis.

"My friends", he said. "I may look like Judge Landis, but I certainly haven't his knowledge of baseball."

EXPERTS SPLIT OVER BOUNDARY

Russian - Japanese Commission Disbands Without Agreement

Tokyo, Jan. 31—(AP)—A communique was awaited today to provide details of the split between Japanese and Russian experts seeking to mark permanently the battle-scarred boundary between Manchoukuo and Outer Mongolia.

Announcement that the commission had disbanded without reaching agreement was made last night by the foreign office spokesman, Yakichiro Suma.

A telegram, arriving at the foreign office during Suma's Press conference, merely said that both sides had signed a declaration of their intention to abandon the talks.

Boundary difficulties have been at the seat of serious military clashes between Japanese-Manchoukuoan forces and Russian or Mongolian troops in 1938 and 1939.

Meanwhile, Japan's self-imposed power "famine" reached a critical stage. Manufacturers stood to lose millions of dollars and workers expressed bewilderment over enforced idleness.

The partial shutdown began yesterday for a proposed 14-hour period and was expected to continue in the industrialized areas of Kobe, Kyoto and Osaka and newspapers reported the order would be applied in Tokyo and Yokohama.

SLIGHT DAMAGE BY FIRE, WATER

Overheated Pipes Given as Cause of Blaze on Cannifton Road

Igniting from a stove pipe thimble in the flooring, fire broke out in the four apartment terrace at the intersection of Cannifton Road and College Street last evening. Considerable damage resulted to the flooring of a bed room and the ceiling of a downstairs room before the fire department arrived upon the scene. The blaze was soon extinguished with some little fire and water damage resulting, however. The apartment is occupied by a family by the name of Titterson. A faulty ceiling thimble is believed to have been responsible for the blaze, as the thimble might have permitted the over-heated stove pipes to contact the wooden partition between the floors. Only two rooms were damaged, however.

SIR H. MARLER

Sir Herbert was created a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in 1935. In 1934, he was awarded the Cross of Merit and the Red Cross Society of Japan.

Sir Herbert was the son of W. de M. Marler of Montreal who founded the firm of W. de M. and H. M. Marler in which both father and son were associated more than 30 years. A Notary by profession, Sir Herbert was educated at McGill University here and at the University of British Columbia.

The year after his election to parliament he was named chairman of the Parliamentary Committee on soldiers' pensions and civil re-establishment. He served as chairman of the committee on transportation in the negotiations which resulted in the trade agreement between Canada and the British West Indies in 1925.

Sir Herbert served briefly as minister without portfolio in the King cabinet before his defeat in 1925 when he returned to private practice in Montreal.

He found time, however, to participate in matters of public interest and in 1927 was honorary treasurer of the National Diamond Jubilee Committee. His appointment to Tokyo followed two years later.

Gifted in Diplomacy

Sir Herbert's diplomatic ability was recognized by the government of former Prime Minister R. B. Bennett as well as by the King administration. The former minister's services were retained by Mr. Bennett when he succeeded Mr. King as head of the government in 1930.

Sir Herbert, whose last public functions were in connection with the royal visit to the United States last June, is survived by Lady Marler, the former Margaret Beatrice Allan, two sons, Leonard and Howard Marler and a daughter, Mrs. Cecil North of Hawlett, Long Island, N.Y.

TORONTO STOCKS

Food stocks showed more gains than losses and the Steels and miscellaneous issues were lower. Steep rock maintained its recent gains and prices were off slightly for Nickel and Sherritt. In the Golds Coniaurum, East Malartic and Kerr-Addison were a bit heavy while Powell Rouyn and Pickle Crow were stronger.

IN NELSON'S SHOES

A new portrait of Sir Dudley Pound, admiral of the fleet and chief of the naval staff at the British admiralty. A hard-bitten sailor who learned his trade the hard way, Admiral Pound is, in the opinion of many Britishers, the ideal man for the job once held by Britain's greatest sea hero, Lord Horatio Nelson.

PEACE TO POLAND IS ANNIHILATION

German Atrocities Said to be of 'Semi-Asiatic Barbarism of Bygone Ages'

New York, Jan. 31 (CP)—The record of German atrocities in conquered Poland as detailed in Cardinal Hlond's report to the Vatican "is a story not only of brutality and inhumanity, but of semi-Asiatic barbarism of bygone ages," the Herald Tribune said today.

"It shows that the German 'peace' which has been brought to Poland is a peace of annihilation," said the newspaper editorially. "The same German leaders who have so long been calling on the world to witness the 'iniquity' and 'cruelty' and the 'injustice' of the treaty of Versailles are acting in Poland in such a manner as to make the Versailles peace seem an extravagantly humane and just settlement."

The indictment "cannot be brushed aside as mere propaganda," it added. The head of the Catholic Church in Poland reporting to the Pope in Rome "does not fill his pages with lies, with trivialities or with misrepresentations."

Lesson to World is Clear

"The lesson to the rest of the world is clear," the Herald Tribune concluded. "The success of the German arms is a menace to the very safety of mankind."

Adolf Hitler's constantly reiterated theory that all of Germany's troubles since the first Great War have been due to the Versailles treaty "does not stand examination" the New York Times said.

"Versailles is Hitler's stock in trade," said the newspaper in discussing Hitler's speech in Berlin yesterday. "If it did not exist he would have to invent it. For Versailles is the only argument with which he can attempt to justify the utter recklessness of a policy that has once more led the German people into war.

93,000 KILLED IN U.S. ACCIDENTS

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP)—Accidents killed 93,000 persons in the United States in 1939, injured 8,800,000 and cost an estimated $3,300,000,000, the National Safety Council reported today.

These figures represented a saving of about 800 lives and a one per cent reduction from the 1938 toll. The 1939 accident rate of 71 deaths per 100,000 population was the lowest since 1900 with two exceptions —1921 and 1922.

Leading the list were motor vehicle accidents, which accounted for 32,600 deaths, 18 more than in 1938, and caused approximately 1,150,000 non-fatal injuries. Economic losses were estimated at $1,500,000,000.

Ranking second were accidents in the home. They killed 32,000 persons in 1939, two per cent more than in 1938, injured 4,700,000 and cost an estimated $600,000,000. Falls were blamed for 17,000 of the home deaths.

Csaky met the committee last night at a private session, with the members pledged to secrecy.

Some schools in Berlin are closed, some are operating part-time, and others full-time. Schools in the Rhineland are mostly open.

18 Days Below Zero in January

January of this year has been one of the coldest months experienced in Belleville in some years past, when city officials today revealed there had been 18 days of the present month during which the mercury had dipped below the zero mark on the official thermometer. During the month of January 1939 there were only eight days during which the mercury fell below the zero mark, however.

There was more rain, but less snow, fell in the Belleville area in January of 1940, than was the case in 1939. The local weather statistics bureau announced today there had been .89 inches of rainfall and 25½ inches of snow during the past month, as compared with .38 inches of rainfall and 26 4-5 inches of snow during January of 1939.

The total precipitation for the present month was 3.44 inches, as against 3.06 inches for that of January 1939.

Shore Features in 4 to 1 Win By Amerks Over Canadiens; Bruins Beat the Hawks 5-0

Veteran Defenceman Driving Force of Whole Team in Game at New York

BLAKE NOT FOR SALE

Bill Summerhill Carried From Ice After Sustaining Injured Leg

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Down, down, down into the National Hockey League depths the once-proud Montreal Canadiens have slipped until there doesn't seem to be a ray of cheer to light the way to a possible playoff position.

Ernest Savard, President of the once-Flying Frenchmen, issued a statement last night to "end a lot of rumors that are driving me crazy," he said he wouldn't consider trading his scoring star and most consistent player, Hector (Toe) Blake, "unless it will mean strengthening the club as a whole, and I don't mean financially."

Then the Americans, bolstered by aging Eddie Shore, kicked the Canadiens around to a 4-1 defeat at New York and left them three points down in the cellar of the league standings. But rumors are driving Savard crazy.

Blake Only Trading Material

It is rumored—and the statistics exist to confirm it—that of their last 18 games the Habitants have won two and lost the rest. It is also rumored that the only sound piece of trading material on the club is Blake, who led the league in scoring last season, and the fans would be on Savard's neck if he let Toe get away for anything less than a flock of high-class reinforcements.

The Canadiens, potential victims for anything resembling a scoring machine, presented Shore with a capital chance to make good in any uniform other than Boston's. Old Eddie, driving up from the defence and throwing his weight around as he did in his hey-day with the Bruins, revelled in the going before 9,000 customers.

He started the play that brought the Americans their first goal through Johnny Sorrell in four minutes. He was still the roaring ice general when Murray Armstrong completed the scoring 40 seconds from the game's end.

Summerhill Injured

In the meantime Buzz Boll and Harvey Jackson scored for the Americans and Bill Summerhill poked in the Canadien goal. Ironically enough, Summerhill was carried from the ice with a leg injury in the late stages.

It can go on indefinitely. Unable so far to entice promising amateur stars to their fold, the Canadiens have rejected blocks of players in exchange for Blake. When next year comes they won't have any means of strengthening, either, unless they build a farm system in an attempt to catch up with the other clubs in the matter of developing men.

Last Sunday in Chicago the Black Hawks gave the Canadiens an 8-1 drubbing, the worst defeat any team has taken all season.

Bruins Wallop Hawks

And last night in Boston the Bruins walloped the Black Hawks 5-0. Everything that happens makes the Canadiens look worse.

As for the Bruins, the were seething from a tie with the Hawks in the teams' last previous meeting. That draw marked the only time in 14 games that Chicago had earned a point against Boston.

So the Bruins, after being held scoreless for one period, rapped in three goals in the second period from the sticks of Mel Hill, Woody Dumart and Bill Cowley. In the third period Roy Conacher and Milt Schmidt completed the scoring and put a dent in the string of high-class goaltending performances Paul Goodman has given the Hawks.

TONY HEMMERLING LEADING SCORER

New Haven Player Closely Followed by Ron Hudson of Indianapolis

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 31 (AP)—Tony Hemmerling of New Haven better look out or Ronald Hudson of Indianapolis will catch him. While Hemmerling tallied only once to hold the lead among International American League hockey scorers, Hudson rang the gong three times in the past week and his 38 points total is only two behind the pacesetter.

The official statistics released yesterday showed Norm Schultz of Springfield with 33 points as the only serious threat to the Hemmerling-Hudson race. Bill Summerhill, listed third, was drafted several weeks ago by Montreal Canadiens.

TENO'S GOALING GIVEN SETBACK

Springfield Indians Shove Seven Behind Him in Winning 7-4 from Hornets

(By the Canadian Press)

Harvey Teno's goal tending record which has been just about the best there is in the International-American Hockey League doesn't look quite so good today.

Teno, who minds the nets for Pittsburgh Hornets, had the misfortune to step up against Springfield Indians while they were hot last night and ended with seven goals inside his cage. The score was 7-1.

Before last night, Teno shared the best goals against record in the league with Moe Roberts of Cleveland, 81 apiece. Roberts' team was beaten too, losing 2-1 to New Haven Eagles, but the Cleveland goaler now has the best record in the circuit.

Alf Thurrier and Tommy Filmore counted five goals between them for the Indians, Thurrier scoring three and Filmore two. Egan and Corrigan scored the other Springfield goals. Hank Goldup saved the Hornets from a shutout.

Don Willson scored the winning goal for the Eagles in the third period. In the second period Willson had had a hand in the opening goal, scored by Tony Hemmerling. Earl Bartholome scored the equalizer in the last period.

EDDIE WISEMAN

N.Y. Americans.

Eddie Wiseman

"One of the high scorers over the past few seasons for New York Americans was Eddie Wiseman, playing his fifth season with the team until the recent deal that sent him to Boston Bruins along with $5,000 for Eddie Shore. He averaged 14 goals a season with Americans, after coming to the team from Detroit, with whom he spent the first three years of his major league puck-chasing career. Two years ago he bagged 18 goals, best to date in his career. Complete totals until the beginning of the present season; 80 goals, 100 assists for 180 points, with 110 minutes served in penalties. Eddie is generally regarded as a westerner, but he was born at Newcastle, New Brunswick. His family left there long before Eddie could shimmy with a hockey stick in his hand and he learned the game on the prairies—Regina to be exact. Eddie skipped senior hockey in his climb moving from the junior Regina Pats of 1929-30 to Chicago Shamrocks in the American Association. He played two seasons there, in his second, leading the team to the championship and being top scorer in the league with 17 goals and the same number of assists. He jumped to the Red Wings the following season. Celebrated his 27th birthday last Dec. 28.

DIAMOND METEORS

"BIG TRAIN" JOHNSON SPEED KING OF YORE

In early youth
Manager of Cleveland
Ace of Washington staff

Washington Visitor—1907

In late years

(By Central Press Canadian)

Out in Humboldt, Kan., (pop. 2,558), they grow tall corn and tall boys. "Barney" Johnson was just shooting up to his six-footer build when he began to work in the corn fields. His hands grew lean and long shucking the big, yellow ears and his arm became wiry and powerful hurling the corn against the "bang-board". He bounded the corn ears off the big board on the wagon until he could hit any spot he shot at, from any angle.

"Barney's" parents were hard-working farm folk who expected their tall son to carry on with the plowing and harvesting in the years to come. But circumstances picked up the whole family and set them down again in Fullerton, Cal. This was a major milestone in young Johnson's career.

Speed On Mound.

There was a baseball team at Fullerton high school and Johnson joined it. He had blinding speed on the mound but not too much control. Johnson's speed and his curve were enough, however, to fan most of his high school opposition. A scout for the Tacoma, Wash., ball club showed up one day with a contract. "Barney" signed it.

Walter was just 18 years old when he signed the Tacoma contract. Tacoma kept him on the bench all season long. Johnson moved on to Weiser, Idaho, the next year. With the Weiser club the young pitcher found himself and pitched sensational baseball. An eastern scout appeared, looked him over and signed him for Washington.

Record Amazing.

Johnson's record with Washington is a monument to baseball. Total strikeouts, 3,497—an all-time record. Twenty-one years pitching for one team (Washington), in one league. Shutout games, 113. "Barney" Johnson's other records are just as remarkable. They include:

Leading the league three years and winning the amazing total of 36 games in 1913; pitching in 802 games winning 402 of them and pitching 16 straight wins in 1912.

A freakish accident spelled finis to Johnson's great pitching career. One day at training camp a bat slipped out of the hands of a player and struck Johnson on the left leg. It was fractured and healed improperly. Later he tried his hand at managing teams but soon the former Kansas farm boy retired from baseball a wealthy, propertied man, voted by many the greatest pitcher ever.

MACK SURE McCOY WILL PROVIDE SPARK NEEDED

Veteran Manager Believes A's Will Have to be Considered in Race

TO PLAY SECOND

Mack Predicts Yankees Will Finish No Better Than Third This Year

Philadelphia, Jan. 31 — (AP)—The acquisition of Benny McCoy seems to have given 77-year-old Manager Connie Mack of the Athletics a new lease on life.

Imbued with the notion that a championship team will once again hold forth in Shibe Park to the tune of his inimitable score card signals, Connie is sure McCoy will provide the rejuvenating spark.

McCoy, a $45,000 investment at 22, is going to play second base and occupy a "key position in the batting order," Mack said.

And Benny, cut adrift from Detroit Tigers by edict of Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Landis, is "glad to be settled again."

"Maybe I got a better break than I deserved," observed the young infielder. He added that he intended to salt away a good part of the $45,000 bonds and two-year $10,000 annual salary involved in the deal.

Mackian optimism imparted zest to a dinner of Philadelphia sportswriters last night.

"I'll go out on a limb and predict that the Yanks will finish third in the American league this year," he said with eyes twinkling.

He declined to venture what teams would beat out the champions, but asserted his 1941 Athletics would be a pennant contender.

NO SOLOISTS ON ST. LOUIS CLUB

Players Enjoy Game and Perfect Harmony Reigns on Squad

St. Louis, Jan. 31—(AP)—Singing the safe, sound melodies in harmony has enabled St. Louis Flyers to keep their American Hockey Association opponents at a safe distance from first place.

There are no soloists on the "little Yankees," now on their way to their fourth straight A.H.A. championship, no galaxy of stars to outshine the opposition by individual prowess.

Neither does Manager Johnny MacKinnon claim a hocus-pocus wand that taps out victories. He says it's much simpler than that:—

"We play a safe and sound game of hockey. There isn't a clique on the club. The boys have a lot of fun playing and they get along well together. That's the best answer of all—harmony."

The Flyers have won 28 league games while losing only six. They have lost only one association game on home ice in a year. They won 12 games in succession during January. In one of the dozen they scored 16 goals—an all-time association record.

However, the Flyers hit a sour nite with the best of prima donnas. They're in a slump now—lost two games out of three. The Flyers are optimistic with an eight-game advantage and only 14 contests before the playoffs.

Roy Conacher, Mel Hill and Bill Cowley, Boston, displayed the form that made them one of the most feared lines in the N.H.L. last season, picking up eight scoring points in a 5-0 victory over Chicago.

Two new sporting or recreation clubs are in the making in Belleville; one for the revival of trap or skeet shooting and the other for persons interested in archery. Years ago trap shooting was one of the chief sports enjoyed in Belleville and some outstanding marksmen plied their trade over on the Coleman Flats, where the ranges were at that time situated. Persons interested in taking up trap or skeet shooting should contact either Lionel (Guy) Harris or R. B. (Rube) Cooper; while persons interested in archery can contact Inspector Frank Gardner of the Ontario Provincial Police. Archery is a new sport insofar as Belleville is concerned, but an increasingly popular recreation in other centres. Already plans to erect ranges have been completed at the old Arnott Arena on Turnbull St., being the most logical building for inside archery at the present. Only preliminary plans for these two sports have been attempted in hopes that others will join the throng and assure the success of the enterprises.

Trap shooting is an ancient and honored sport and pastime in Canada, but skeets shooting is the newest shooting pastime to sweep the nation. It was not so many years ago that golf was a curiosity, a fad for which a short life was predicted. The same applied to skeet shooting when it was first introduced, as veteran trap shooters believed it to be a newfangled idea that might prove hazardous to the ancient and honored sport of clay pigeon shooting. However, time proved otherwise and today we find trap and skeet shooting clubs combined. In the years prior to the last war Belleville boasted of a fine trap shooting club with ranges on the Coleman Flats. Those behind the revival of trap shooting already have procured the use of traps from Mark Sprague, who in days gone by was one of Canada's foremost trap shooters. Both archery and trap shooting can be enjoyed by the young as well as the old and by the ladies as well as gentlemen.

Continuing his side of the 19-5 win of the Petes over the Redmen, the Peterboro scribe further adds: "So maybe Greater Belleville will have to foster more minor hockey or else fold up in the puck game same as in baseball, lacrosse, football, etc. As for the Petes rubbing it in here, well they certainly scored plenty against weak opposition. But then what could they do? It wasn't their fault that the Redmen brought down half a squad, and the locals couldn't go laying down and stalling—what would the home fans have thought (and said) about such tactics? Nope, it's always too bad to see a very one-sided struggle, but it's utterly wrong to try to ease up to give the other guy a chance, especially in a speedy game like hockey. You've got to consider the fans first. Maybe we're calloused, but we never noticed any squad pulling punches against the local Orfuns in senior O.R.F.U. competition!"

Do you remember when Great Britain fell 11-0 before the United States in the Olympic hockey championships at Chamonix in the days before hockey was an established sport in Britain, 16 years ago today? The victors met Toronto Granites, Canada's entry, in the final, and lost 6-1.

Maybe they are superstitious, but at any rate the local soft-'ballers deemed it inadvisable to elect their officers last night and we wonder if the fact that 13 were present had anything to do with the adjournment of their annual meeting. President Clem Bowler and his henchmen viewed the situation and promptly postponed the night's work until Feb. 7th, which looked like good business on their part. Judging from the round-table talk last night at least two new teams are being contemplated upon for the 1940 softball semester. Rumours have Homer (Red) Townsend heading an intermediate team this season, while the Montrose Dairy and North End Club will be invited to sit in on the annual conclave next week. One thing certain the local association is going to continue their drive to try and have cities below 15,000 of a population relegated to an intermediate "B" classification another year, as they feel towns the size of Belleville should not be called upon to cope with cities like Hamilton, Windsor, etc. The officers for the incoming year will be elected one week from tonight.

The Liftlock City scribe gets a great kick out of sitting in the press box at the Hume arena, where he commands a first view of his pet Petes under ideal hockey conditions. Here's his impressions of Monday night's 5-0 game with the Flyers—"It was all there again last night in Belleville's big Hume arena, all the ingredients of a first-class Petes-Fliers' whizzer. Both clubs right on the bit in the scramble for first place in their group, a good-sized crowd of rabid rooters, a glare sheet of ice an easy-going ref, and a torrid tussle with no holds barred. The Petes won 5-0 and did it in convincing manner—but 'twas no cake walk, mes amis. A contest that fairly sizzled and crackled as play spun from end to end and side to side in breath-taking jerks. Speed galore, smart hockey, and several bags of assorted digs and dirty tricks! Thrown in for good measure—to give the hoarse customers an extra run for their oughday—were a disputed goal, a bit of mayhem by the Gibson citadel, and a fist fight that brought the law on the scene to stop a threatening free-for-all."

Sport Spice — Making what may prove his last stand in base ball, Connie Mack has expended $200,000 in the past year to try and win "one more" world series ....Shades of 1910-14 and 1929-31....Sparked by the appearance of Eddie Shore, the luckless Americans beat Les Canadiens 4-1 last night....It marked the first time Shore ever wore any other N.H.L. uniform, aside from a Bruin jersey....The O.H.A. would be well advised to investigate the Point Edward intermediate "B" squad, that beat Alvinston 16-0 last night....Les Canadiens blame the inefficient N.H.L. refereeing for their poor showing claiming they are "getting the business" from the whistle-tooters.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Jan. 31—(AP)—When Leo Durocher signs his new Dodger contract this week-end it will be for one year. Leo will yell, but Larry MacPhail will yell him down ...Shipwreck Kelly, the old Kentucky grid great and Brenda Frazier, 1939's top-ranking glammer girl, have paid 23 consecutive visits to the Stork Club together...Both Pat Comiskey's hands are out of the casts and he'll be ready for another shot at Steve Dudas in less than two months.

The U.S.G.A. has chilled Walter Hagen's suggestion for the Walker and Ryder Cup teams to play a charity match here next summer... Joe Jacobs had to borrow two yards and a half off Tony Galento to help pay for the contract of Frankie Zamaris, sharp-punching Newark lightweight.

Bill Approved to Cancel Plan to Fix Taxes at Brantford

Toronto Jan. 31—Private Bill's Committee of the Ontario Legislature yesterday advanced legislation for Brantford which will have the effect of cancelling arrangements which were made between the city's Council and a number of industrial firms which were credited with full payments of taxes when, in fact, the payments were less than the amounts due reports the Globe and Mail.

"The Mayor and the Council are to be congratulated in attempting to correct a very difficult situation," commented Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs. "They come here and admit frankly that something was done which should not have been done, and do not condone it in any way."

The Council's plea was presented by Mayor R. J. Waterous, who said some of these tax concessions were granted back before he was born. The arrangements, he admitted, were not on an equal basis and it appeared that some were granted when firms threatened to close up or move out of the city.

"I did not feel it was right to give these factories a receipt in full for taxes when in fact their taxes are not fully paid," said the Mayor.

Through a series of conferences, he explained, a plan was drafted whereby the Council might determine the percentage of the whole amount due for taxes in the years 1939, 1940 and 1941. Under it, it was suggested that factories should pay the full amount of their taxes on the full assessed values of their properties, during those three years. He estimated the city's tax revenue would be increased by $20,524 by the payments.

"We take the stand," he said, "that it wasn't right and we want it corrected. I may say I have had to tread on the toes of a lot of my personal friends in this."

Mayor Waterous admitted that some firms had threatened to move out if the Council's policy was rectified. The bill was sponsored by Louis Hagey, Liberal member for Brantford.

A. L. Elliott, Peterborough, newly elected chairman of the committee, opposed reporting of the bill. He argued that legislation of 1936 made unlawful the granting of fixed assessments by municipalities competing for industries. Any action that had been taken by Brantford since passing that legislation, toward extending fixed assessment terms, was therefore unlawful, he held, and he opposed the principle of returning the factories to their full taxation status over the three-year period.

Howard F. Greenwood Went to Lethbridge by Ox-Cart in Year 1883

Edmonton, Jan. 31—(CP)—Howard F. Greenwood, 92, first white settler in what is now Lethbridge in Southern Alberta, died in hospital here yesterday.

Born in Halifax of a pioneer family whose predecessors were among the first settlers in North America, Mr. Greenwood, former accountant for the Hudson's Bay Company at Montreal and Winnipeg, came to Southern Alberta in 1883 by ox-cart.

Fraser Stewart, one of the first chief factors of the Fur Company's Winnipeg Post and her husband lived in the first home built in Lethbridge which was known then as Coalbanks. They were parents of the first white child in Alberta, Peter, who was born at Macleod.

They were hosts to Lord Lansdowne, former Governor General of Canada and Lady Lansdowne, during a visit of their Excellencies to Lethbridge late in the 1800's.

GIRL AT THE FRONT
by ROB EDEN

CHAPTER EIGHT

Another "Z Y " Surprise

After Danny had left Claire at her hotel and she was in her room, she took from her compact the card "Z.Y." had placed there, lighted a match and burned it in a metal ash tray. It was conceivable that such a card might get her into trouble if it were found in her purse—it might lead to awkward questions which she would be unable to answer.

When she had seen Noel Yorke at Maria's, she was certain he was the man who had shared her taxi, and yet all the time he was there, he gave not the slightest hint that he was other than he pretended to be—a dilettante who dabbled with painting.

He certainly didn't seem to the girl to be a person who would be in the espionage service—counter-espionage, she supposed it was—and yet she reminded herself she could not judge always from appearances Bill Cameron, for instance, was not suspected even by his associates in Washington of being other than what he pretended to be—a sort of a glorified messenger boy. Yet she knew how important he was in the government service—how much he was relied upon.

These thoughts kept her awake until nearly daylight, and it was nearly noon before she awakened. She phoned the desk, but there were no messages for her and there had been no telephone calls. During the afternoon, she got Sanford on the wire but aside from learning that he was making every effort to find some trace of Cameron, nothing had happened. He had no news to give her. He hadn't heard from Bornet.

Danny had no news about Cameron either, and after a lonely dinner in her room, she decided to call at the Surete offices herself. Anything was better than this eternal waiting. She might be lucky enough to find Bornet in his office, and learn something from him.

She glanced about as she stepped from the hotel doorway into the cab at the curb, half expecting "Z.Y." to pop out of the shadows again and join her, but no one was there and she was alone in the cab.

The ancient vehicle, creaking in every joint, moved slowly along in the darkness and Claire was deep in her own thoughts when the cab stopped so suddenly she was thrown forward from her seat. The driver had the door open in a moment, and was shouting at her.

"Air raid, Mademoiselle Air raid! The alarm is sounding! Come quickly!"

Claire heard the unearthly wail of the sirens, then, and tumbled out onto the sidewalk. The sound, she knew, was coming from clusters of loud speaker horns placed at every street intersection all over Paris. The driver grasped her hand and started to run, the girl stumbling after him.

A dim blue light gleamed ahead, and the driver plunged down the steps of a subway station, Claire following as fast as she could in her high-heeled slippers.

The white tiles of the Metro station walls gleamed eerily in the soft blue light, and as they ran down the platform the girl was aware of hundreds of others who had preceded them to this point of refuge. They were huddled at the far end of the station, as far away as possible from the steps which led to the street, and Claire thought it might have been much more sensible if they were separated instead of in one compact mass. If a falling bomb should happen to hit above them and pierce the ground and the concrete over their heads, every one probably would be killed instantly.

She heard a voice shouting, and in the dim light made out a gendarme, his bright steel helmet glistening, trying to spread out the milling crowd.

"Monsieurs! Madames!" he shouted. "Please do not gather in one crowd. Spread out! It is safer that way if a bomb should fall!"

Gradually he was able to bring some order from the chaos and before long Claire could feel the tension of the crowd relax. People began chatting with their neighbors. Short staccato sentences at first, then as time went on and nothing happened, an even hum of conversation filled the station.

An hour later when the officer shouted that the "all clear" signal had been given, the crowd moved quietly out of the station up to the street and went about its business.

Her driver had stayed close at hand, and she soon was in the cab again, headed for the Surete Generale. Bornet was not there, and no information could be given about his whereabouts, she was told, so she returned to her taxi and gave the driver Maria's address. Perhaps "Z.Y." might be there. Even talking with Maria would be better than being so alone. But again she was destined to disappointment Her ring was unanswered.

Back at her hotel, there were notations that both Danny and Rene Martin had phoned, but neither had left a message. She spent a fruitless half hour trying to get them on the phone, and then went to bed utterly discouraged with her efforts to find any trace of Bill Cameron two days after he had dropped so suddenly from sight. To cling to she had only the assurance "Z.Y." had given her that Cameron was still alive and well. That was all that kept her from hysterics, she was certain.

Maria phoned her the next afternoon and asked if she had made a decision yet about moving into her flat with her. Claire said she had been too busy to think about it, but when the Russian girl urged her, she promised to drop by that night.

Claire spent the afternoon walking about the downtown streets, and wound up at the embassy. Welles Sanford still was without information, he said, but added that the Ministry of War was alarmed now about Cameron's whereabouts and had sent word through all their agents to be on the lookout for the American. They should turn up something soon, now. He had heard nothing more from Bornet, either.

As she was leaving, she ran into Danny who had been closeted with the ambassador, and eagerly accepted his invitation to dinner.

"I've been alone too much the last few days", she told him. "You have saved the life of a lonely woman, Danny".

"Sorry I can't take you some place latter," he said, "but I've got to go back to the office after dinner and work until daylight. I've found a way to get some yarns past the censor through a man who's leaving in the morning, and I'll be busy at the typewriter all night."

"I've a date, anyway," Claire told him, and explained about her promise to call on Maria.

Danny dropped her there after dinner, and she found Maria sketching and refused to let her interrupt her work.

"I'll just sit here and watch", Claire said, "until you get through"

"It's a rush order. I must have the drawings ready the first thing in the morning. Have you thought any more about my proposition—moving in with me? You'll find it a lot cheaper than the hotel, and I hope much more congenial. Your share of the rent will be only about $30 which includes the light and gas, too. Five more will pay for the woman I have come in to do the cleaning and cooking. What do you?"

Claire answered that it surely sounded like a bargain, but was spared making a definite commitment by the arrival at that moment of Noel Yorke with a friend of his from England. He introduced the stranger as Wyndham Trevor, and explained that he was in Paris on business.

Maria put aside her work, and the four of them talked on general subjects for about half an hour. Noel suddenly glanced at his wrist watch and announced that he had to leave.

"I'll run along with you then", Trevor said and arose.

"I'm still trying to persuade Claire to move in with me", Maria told Noel, laughingly. "She hasn't answered yet whether she'll come or not." She turned to Claire. "Why not stay here tonight instead of going all the way back to that stuffy hotel? I can lend you some things for tonight, and if you like your room, you can move in tomorrow. What do you say?"

"I think it's a fine idea", Noel spoke up before Claire could answer. She glanced at him and saw his eyes looking intently into hers. She was certain she read a warning in them, and when she turned back to Maria a ready excuse came to her lips.

"I'm expecting an important message sometime during the night —a message which will determine whether I stay in Paris or go home", she said glibly. "I'll let you know tomorrow morning, Maria, what I'm going to do. Please don't think me ungrateful, but I really must be at the hotel tonight."

At the curb, Noel asked Trevor if he would mind seeing Claire home— his errand took him in the opposite direction; scarcely waiting for an answer, he vanished in the darkness.

In the cab going toward the hotel, Claire thrust her hands in the side pockets of her coat, and almost exclaimed aloud. Her right hand had come in contact with a card which she knew hadn't been there when she went to Maria's flat. Then in a moment she understood. It was a message to her from Noel. "Z.Y." had acted again.

CHAPTER NINE

Rendezvous at 2 a m

Wyndham Trevor would have liked to sample what was left of Paris night life with Claire as his companion, and suggested that they might find a place to dance, but she put him off.

"I'm really quite tired, Mr. Trevor", she told Yorke's friend. "If I can take a rain check, we'll go dancing some other time, eh?"

By the time she had explained to the Englishman what she meant by "rain check" and he had laughed in appreciation of her "jolly American slang", the taxicab drew up at her hotel entrance and she stepped out.

"Good-bye, Miss Dutton" Trevor said at the door. "Don't forget about the —er—the rain check".

She noted by the clock that it was nearly midnight as he walked across the lobby to the elevator. In peacetimes there was an attendant to operate the lift day and night, but now, with the hotel reduced to depending upon what help it could get from men over military age, guests operated it themselves after the dinner hour.

Claire didn't trust herself to even glance at the card she had found in her pocket until she reached her floor, unlocked her door and switched on the lights of her room. Then she drew it from her coat with shaking fingers, and read:

"Tonight at 2 a.m., room 567. The door will be unlocked".

Just that, scrawled on a plain card. Nothing more, not even the "Z.Y." Noel had written on the other card he had inserted in her vanity case.

Claire was frightened for a minute, and then her courage returned. After all, she finally was going to get somewhere—learn something about Bill Cameron. Perhap discover where he was, so she could make an effort to reach him. It might be risky, but she knew when she left the St. Croix and came back to Paris she might be in for trouble.

She hung up her coat and put her hat away, and then called downstairs to check the time with her wrist watch. She didn't want to be late for her appointment. The watch was right on the dot with the hotel clock.

Claire tried to sit down, but soon found herself walking across the floor of her large room. Back and forth, back and forth. At least this was better than trying to sit still; it gave her something to do.

After what seemed ages, the hand of her watch crept around to the one o'clock mark, and a moment later she was startled by the sound of the phone bell by her bed. It was Welles Sanford. He was downstairs, and wanted to see her. From the tone of his voice, she knew something had happened, and she was trembling so when she went to the elevator that she had a hard time getting the door open.

Sanford led her to a secluded corner and made her sit down before he told her his news.

"A body has been found, Claire," he said, slowly. "It was found floating in the Seine tonight".

The girl felt a sudden contraction in her chest. It was as though for a moment her lungs had ceased to function.

"You think —you think it may be Bill?" She spoke with an effort and the words seemed to rasp her throat.

"Yes", the attache answered. "It was impossible to make a positive identification because of the condition of the body. It was mutilated —the head, I mean".

Hope surged within her.

"Then how—how do you know it is he?" she demanded.

"Cameron's clothes were on the body. His papers in the pockets."

"Was—was there anything else?"

Sanford reached in his pocket, produced a heavy envelope and took a ring and watch from it.

$100,000,000 GIFTS MADE BY BENEFACTOR

E. S. Harkness Who Never Gave Public Speech or Interview, Dies at Age 66

CLEVELAND NATIVE

New York, Jan. 31—(CP)—Edward S. Harkness, 66, who once donated $10,000,000 to found a trust for "promoting the future well-being of Britain by helping the country's present needs," died Monday night.

Harkness never made a public speech or gave an interview although he gave a total of $100,000,000 to various institutions. The $10,000,000 donation was for the founding of the Pilgrim Trust, devoted to the furthering of Anglo-American understanding and friendship.

He donated $200,000 to the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon.

The fortune of Harkness, a native of Cleveland, O., stemmed from that of his father, Stephen V., whose early partnership with John D. Rockefeller, Sr., in founding Standard Oil brought millions to the family.

Inherently Shy

He was inherently shy, and many of his philanthropies were kept in deepest secrecy.

He died of a pancreas infection. At his bedside was his widow, only close survivor. Spokesmen for Mrs. Harkness, the former Mary Stillman, said the funeral would be private.

Harkness made almost a business—but an extremely quiet one—of philanthropy, keeping a staff of secretaries to hunt out new and deserving outlets for his wealth.

Received by King George V.

He travelled frequently in Great Britain. On June 10, 1931 he was received by King George V and Queen Mary in private audience. On that occasion The Times said the reception "may be accepted as a royal expression of the gratitude felt by the British people for his benefactions, distinguished no less by the grace with which they were given than by their generous extent."

St. Andrews University, Scotland, awarded him an honorary LL. D.

SAYS RUMANIA STRICTLY NEUTRAL

Minister of National Economy Says Government Acts in Own Interest Alone

Bucharest, Jan. 31—(CP-Havas)—Constantin Angelescu, Minister of National Economy, Tuesday said that in its oil policy the Rumanian government was acting in its own interest and not on behalf of one side or the other in the war.

Angelescu addressed the first meeting of the newly-created oil commission, which is taking over for the government complete control of the production and disposition of Rumanian Oil. Creation of this commission was the subject of diplomatic discussion last week.

"We are strictly neutral", Angelescu said, "and to defend this neutrality we must have full authority. Was it possible not to take steps to protect oil exports which represent 62 per cent of our exports when the higher interests of the nation are at stake?

"When a country is neutral, difficulties surround it. The belligerent states are unwilling to understand that a neutral country takes steps in its own interest and not in the interest of other countries. We were surprised at the injustice with which this problem of importance was discussed outside."

EDISON FAVORS FLEET EXPANSION

Declares Program Would Provide Only 'Fair Degree of Security'

Washington, Jan. 31—(AP)—Charles Edison, secretary of the United States Navy, advocating approval of the navy's proposed $1,300,000,000 fleet expansion program, told Congress Tuesday that in view of dangerous conditions abroad he believed in providing "crushing weapons with our wealth to protect our wealth."

Testifying before a congressional naval committee, Edison declared that even the expansion which the navy recommends would provide only "a fair degree of security".

"War is not a sporting event between evenly matched opponents", the secretary said. "Its aim is to crush the enemy quickly and with minimum loss to ourselves. So I believe in providing crushing weapons with our wealth to protect our wealth.

"But even predatory nations will think twice before risking conflict with a strong and prepared United States", he said. "The program I recommend, if authorized, will serve forceful notice on all possible aggressor nations that the United States intends to protect itself and its interests powerfully and effectively".

The $1,300,000,000 Expansion Bill recommended by the Navy would authorize construction of 77 new warships as well as additional airplanes and auxiliary vessels.

LIVED IN CAVE BY LAKE, HE SAYS

Bearded Hermit Says He Hollowed Out Retreat and Likes to Live in It

St. Joseph, Mich., Jan. 31— (AP)—A bearded man in ragged clothes who said he had lived for five months in a crude hillside cave near Lake Michigan, despite recent sub-zero temperatures and blizzards, provided a puzzle Tuesday for sheriff's officers here.

The hermit, brought here by deputies last night, said he hollowed out the cave near a beach resort north of Benton Harbor, and lived there alone because he liked it.

"Last winter I slept mostly in police stations in Chicago, Gary and Michigan City", he said. "But I'd rather be alone, so I fixed up my cave in the woods. The snow is deep and clean out there. There aren't any crowds of people. I got along, and it wasn't bad in the coldest weather. I had a fire and three coats".

The hermit gave his name as P.A. Devo. He was detained on a vagrancy charge.

Seeks Trace of Arthur W. Rowan

Superintendent T. D. Ruston has been asked to trace a boy named Arthur William Rowan, age 16, formerly of Belleville.

Father, presumably a British war veteran, was thought to have died in Belleville in 1930 or 1932.

It is believed the mother was previously employed as a domestic in Belleville and supposedly drowned on the Athenia.

Persons, knowing the whereabouts or possessing any information, kindly communicate with Mr. Ruston, 250 1-2 Front St., Belleville, Ont. (Phone 836).

PEACEFUL

Of trade relations with the United States he said:

"We have been in the past the largest customer of the United States for their agricultural produce. As soon as the war began we were compelled to curtail our imports of things which were not essential to us that we may concentrate our dollar resources upon the purchase from the United States of those enormous masses of munitions and equipment which it is necessary for us to have in order to carry on the struggle.

"But let no one suppose that we want to use the measures we have taken for any purpose other than the prosecution of the war; nor that we are indifferent to the losses which neutrals may thereby sustain."

Mr. Chamberlain praised Britain's reciprocal trade treaty with the United States, which he said "pointed the way to better things in international trade".

He said that the "policy we have in mind when the time comes to turn once more from war to peace" will be restoration of international trade.

Dionne Quintuplets In Perfect Health

North Bay, Ont., Jan. 31—(CP)—The Dionne Quintuplets, eating heartily and sleeping soundly, added to their weight and height during January, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, their personal physician, said today. They are in perfect physical shape.

Sub-zero weather has failed to chase the famous five indoors, Dr. Dafoe added, and equipped with suitable toggery the girls do their daily exercises in the snow of their play-yard at Callander, as well as going through setting-up exercises with Dr. Dafoe in the nursery.

All the girls but Emilie gained substantially. Marie, Cecile, Yvonne and Annette each gained one-half a pound and added a quarter-inch to their heights.

Emilie did not gain in height but she and Cecile are the tallest of the sisters, each measuring 44 1-2 inches. Annette is 44 1-4 inches tall, with Yvonne a quarter-inch less and Marie at 43 3-4 inches.

Heavyweight of the five is Cecile who tips the beam at 54 3-4 pounds. Annette weighs an even 54 pounds. Emilie 53 3-4. Marie 53 1-2 and Yvonne 52 1-2.

Graded Egg Prices Slightly Firmer

Toronto, Jan. 31 — Graded egg prices firmed slightly as demand showed signs of improvement yesterday on the Toronto open produce market. Butter remained quietly steady.

There was a noticeable increase in out-of-town inquiries for eggs, although some country dealers in anticipation of price advances, appeared unwilling to buy at present levels. The market developed a somewhat firmer tone, with receipts still ample for local requirements. "A" large eggs sold at 21c a dozen in the graded section and at 23c to 24c to retailers.

Sales of butter were limited, although some brokers reported better inquiry. Trading was quiet and draggy and first-grade Ontario creamery solids remained unchanged at 27 1-2c.

ONTARIO BUDGET

Buses Extended Two Feet

Discussion came during a general bill amending the Highways Traffic Act. Included was a clause to extend the maximum permitted over-all length of passenger buses to 35 feet. Present permitted maximum is 33 feet. Mr. McQuesten said many 35-feet buses now bring tourists from the United States.

The government yielded another point as its bill to provide a two-year term for municipally-elected bodies came out of committee stage. The bill which is to be effective Feb. 1, 1941, provides any municipality may vote itself out of its provisions. The original measure provided that a vote be taken on direction of the council or on a petition of 10 per cent of the electorate.

Toronto members argued that the 10 per cent was too high. When the bill was last up, Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, consented to this being dropped to five per cent. Yesterday he agreed to another amendment that the five per cent need not exceed 5,000 names. The bill now stands for third reading.

Quick Vote Taken

The House had a division yesterday—an oral one that happened so quickly the Clerk of the House, Major Alex Lewis, missed it as he chatted with the Premier. The division was on whether members are to be required to explain the purpose of bills when they introduce them or whether explanation could wait for second reading.

Speaker James Clark said the practice had been to require no explanation on first reading. Premier Hepburn said the members were entitled to know and cited an Ottawa precendent. The speaker after a moment or so called for the yeas and nays as to whether the practice should be changed. The yeas had it.

School Act Introduced

The School Law Amendment Act, 1940, was introduced by Education Minister Simpson and given first reading. One clause sets up a difference in continuation school grants between schools with a large attendance paid for by a county and schools with fewer such pupils.

The amendment would base the township grants to such schools on the net cost to the continuation school section concerned of running the school. Another amendment provides machinery for setting up township school boards in unorganized districts.

Attorney - General Conant brought in a bill amending the Ontario Income Tax Act to bring it into conformity with changes made in the Federal Legislation in the past two years. One amendment makes it mandatory to include in the total of income assessable for taxation, annuities or other annual payments received under the provisions of any will or trust irrespective of the time at which the trust became effective and notwithstanding that the income so received may be from capital funds.

No New Principles

Mr. Conant said this and other amendments established no new principles nor did they impose new taxation.

Introduced by the Attorney-General also was a measure to extend the authority of the Law Society of Upper Canada. Provision is to be made by the Law Society for suspension of any barrister or solicitor found to be mentally ill or incompetent, or who has failed to pay his Law Society fee.

Increased penalties under the Trade Schools Regulation Act and proposed in a bill introduced by Dr. Simpson. It would provide penalties for persons who sell or offer for sale trade school courses which have not been approved by the Department of Education. Penalties would be from a maximum of $1,000 for the first offense to a maximum of $2,000 for subsequent offenses. In the case of a company, a magistrate would be empowered to increase the fine to $25,000.

Police Blotter

Wanted in Peterborough on a charge of theft, a man, who gave his name as Jack Webster, was arrested by Belleville police as he stepped from a Canadian National Railway train in this city last evening. When first approached by Constables Taylor and Arnott, the man denied his name was Webster, but subsequent questioning resulted in the man being held for the Peterborough authorities.

Chief Newhall, of Peterborough, telephoned to Sergeant Arthur Harman stating that a man had entered a Peterborough service station during the absence of the attendant and ten dollars was said to have been found missing later. Peterborough police were of the opinion that the man procured railway passage to Belleville. A description of the man was afforded local authorities by Chief Newhall, with the result that Webster was arrested last night and today given into the custody of the Peterborough authorities.

Trenton Car Stolen

Trenton police announced the theft of a 1929 model Chevrolet coupe, stolen from that community last evening. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates number 6-N-862 when taken.

EFFECTIVE

According to this source, the Finnish strategy now is one of waiting until the Russians run out of bullets, at the same time keeping up thrusts against the Russian positions.

He said the Soviet offensive northeast of the lake had been technically broken for some time, but that the Finns, because of numerically inferior forces, must bide their time before taking full advantage of the victory.

The same informant said evidence had been found by the Finns that Russian dead were being disposed of through holes in the ice so as to conceal the extent of casualties.

Aerial Activity Decreases

Official sources said Soviet aerial activity Tuesday was considerably less than on Monday and was aimed chiefly at Northern Finland, "where a few peaceful rural communities were bombed with slight material damage and three persons were reported wounded."

Meanwhile fresh troops from Russia were reported pouring into the Salla front, above the Arctic Circle, in an effort to turn the tide against the Finns in the north.

With the Red Army's positions virtually unchanged after 10 days of fighting, the Finnish Arctic army faced what military sources believed was its hardest test on a forested ridge above Markajaervi.

Still Hope for Victory

The Finns said they believed the reinforcements, possibly totalling a full division, indicated the Russians still hope to cut Finland in two this winter.

A new display of Finland's own aerial power was seen in official reports that a Russian harbor had been bombed and enemy ships struck.

(Estonian authorities were investigating the nationality of eight planes which were reported to have dropped 34 bombs on Estonian soil near the Russian air base on Dagoe Island. Windows in some buildings were shattered but no serious damage resulted, it was reported).

In a survey of bombings since the war began Nov. 30, Lieut. General Salvo, Chief of the Finnish Civil Air Defences, said that 300 Russian planes had been shot down and at least 800 Soviet airmen killed.

20,000 Bombs Dropped

Salvo reported the Russians had killed 400 civilians and wounded 930 in 642 raids in which 20,340 bombs were dropped on 207 localities outside war zones. The officer said in 24 instances hospitals and churches were bombed.

(Indications that the Finnish air force soon would be further strengthened were seen in an announcement by the Moore-McCormack Steamship Line in New York that 11 American pursuit planes had arrived at Bergen, Norway, en route to Finland.

The steamship line said the freighter Normactide had arrived with a cargo of planes, ammunition and guns. Other military equipment is en route).

At barracks in the snow-swept northwest, Finnish-Canadians and Americans were outfitted in native uniforms for training before going to the front as volunteers.

The volunteers may yet see action in the Salla sector, where military observers believed the stage was being set for a decisive battle. The Finns said 45,000 Soviet soldiers already were in the area but that fighting had been confined to patrol clashes.

COMBINED

quadrupled and that shells were being made faster than in 1914.

Aircraft Construction Up.

Furthermore, he said, aircraft construction now is "seven times what it was in 1935-36". He added that 67 flying schools were being established in Canada and that fire-fighting services of ten times the peacetime strength had been established in vulnerable areas.

Scoffing at German flights over coastal areas, Mr. Chamberlain said confidently: "We have not had any air raids yet, but we are prepared for them if they should come."

Mr. Chamberlain disclosed that Britain has arranged to purchase all of the empire's wool for the duration of the war and for a year thereafter.

He concluded his summary of Britain's war effort with the statement that "there is not a single non-belligerent country that feels itself threatened by this enormous accumulation of powers."

Do Not Question Neutrals

"We do not for one moment question the right of neutrals to decide whether they shall go into the conflict or stay out of it and in what fashion they shall use that neutrality they have chosen."

Mr. Chamberlain asked neutrals to consider that, though the exercise of belligerent rights causes them inconvenience and loss, "we have never sunk a neutral ship and we have never wittingly sacrificed a single neutral life."

Anxiety to Avoid Friction

Mr. Chamberlain assured the United States and Japan that Britain is anxious to avoid friction or disturbance in her trade and other relations with them and with other neutrals.

The Prime Minister expressed regret that the concentration of dollar resources in America for munitions and other war supplies had forced curtailment of purchases of other products there. One of Britain's foremost aims of the war, he said, is to return to normal trade among nations.

Of the Anglo-Japanese dispute

The prime minister said that since the war began Britain had placed orders for supplies costing nearly $890,000,000, that the output in guns had doubled and in some cases had over the seisure by a British warship of 21 Germans from the Japanese steamship Asama Maru on Jan. 20, Mr. Chamberlain said:

No Want of Courtesy to Japan

"Nothing could more distress us that that the Japanese government or the people should feel that we have exercised our belligerent rights with any want of courtesy or respect for them."

Japan has protested to Britain over the incident and the subject now is under diplomatic discussion in Tokyo.

Of neutral counrites generally, Mr. Chamberlain said Britain had no desire "to affront a neutral country with which we want to live in peaceful and friendly relations."

"It is becoming clearer every day from the actions of the Germans themselves," said Mr. Chamberlain, "that we are fighting not only for ourselves but for every country that feels itself oppressed by the fear that some day they may find themselves in a position successively occupied by Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and now by Finland."

HITLER'S ADDRESS

"In recent times two other gentlemen harbored similar imperial designs. One finished, not in London, but in St. Helena. The other still wiles away his time, by the gracious consent of the Dutch people, at Doorn."

Paris Indifferent.

Paris, Jan. 31 (AP).—Semi-official circles today said France received Adolf Hitler's speech with "calm indifference".

The Paris newspaper Le Journal declared the speech was that "of a man made helpless by the appearance of the police he had not expected . . . the speech of a man who . . . in order to justify his own crimes accuses his adversaries."

Le Matin characterized the address as "a repetition of old propaganda themes already developed in previous harangues," while Excelsior, commenting on the threat of intensified war, said:

"Thus Hitler will not shrink from any massacre. He forgets that on their side the allies are no longer asleep."

Rome Thinks Real War Coming.

Rome, Jan. 31 (CP-Havas).—Summaries of Adolf Hitler's speech were published without comment today in the Italian press. Space was equally given to the reception it was given in Great Britain and France.

Fascist political circles were said to be convinced that Germany's threatened "total war" against the allies would soon be started.

Hitler's failure to mention the future status of Polish territory now occupied by German troops was interpreted by Italian observers as indication the Reich intends simply to annex all conquered territory.

Dissatisfaction was expressed here over Hitler's attempt to justify his co-operation with the Soviet Union, but this was counterbalanced for Italians by the emphasis he placed on the community of interests still existing between Germany and Italy.

Hitler's denunciation of the Versailles Treaty and the League of Nations and his theories on "have" and "have not" struck a responsive chord in Rome.

GERMAN PRESSURE

Germans Atop Hills

In that particular sector the Germans hold positions atop hills to the north and west of an exceptionally wide "no man's land" studded by French and German outposts well in advance of their respective main lines. In between the lines are a number of "ghost cities" which before the general evacuation, housed up to 16,000 people. The abandoned houses constitute an ever-present threat to patrols checking up on enemy operations.

Until operations were paralyzed by bitter cold, the Germans had constantly attempted to override the small French outposts, hoping thereby to eliminate the danger of sudden attack.

Heavy Shellfire

Yesterday's operations were started at 10 a.m., with an overland attack against French positions brought under heavy shellfire by German guns. French artillery immediately went into action to help repulse the raiders.

Heavy German guns, continuing their barrage long after the German troops had withdrawn, pounded the French outposts steadily until dark. French batteries maintained return fire.

Air operation scontinued on a minimum scale. A long German plane carried out a reconnaissance flight over eastern and northern France, returning to Germany by way of Belgium.

'WE ARE IN WAR

France and the Empire, and had "given inspiring example to freedom loving people everywhere."

Briton's Heritage At Stake.

Not kinship or sentiment alone made the dominion answer the call, he added. Rather it was realization that "everything that is a Briton's heritage is at stake."

The soul of Nazidom was servitude. It was not civilization but a beast of prey, and the Dominions Secretary said he wanted to apologize to the beasts for mentioning them in the same breath as Hitlerism.

Oliver Stanley, making one of his first speeches as war secretary, told General McNaughton and fifty other officers of the first division present that their presence and record in the last war made the allies confident that "we shall fight with the same courage, the same loyalty, and, in the end, the same result."

Unity of Canada Praised.

The determination and unity of the dominion—as shown by the presence of large numbers of French-Canadians in the C.A.S.F. — had greatly impressed the British people, Mr. Stanley said. Because it was realized that Canadians 3,000 miles away were less immediately threatened than people in the old country, their decision as a free people to stand shoulder to shoulder against the enemy and for fundamental truth was all the more welcome.

"We not only welcome Canadian words of support," he added, "but their army of support."

Chairman at the luncheon was Lord Mottistone, who served almost four years with the Canadians in the first great war and commanded the Canadian Cavalry Brigade with distinction. He related that only this week he visited the charger he used in France on its 31st birthday.

Message From The King.

Lord Mottistone read a message from the King thanking the club and its guests for their "loyal message of good wishes on the occasion of the luncheon to the distinguished commander of the Canadian forces."

The Earl of Bessborough, former Governor-General of Canada, sat at the head table, as did Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Hon. Vincent Massey, Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, and the Duke of Devonshire.

The Duke of Connaught, Governor General of Canada during part of the last war, sent a message expressing confidence that "we have with us a division that will be worthy successors of those who distinguished themselves for all time" at Ypres, Vimy, Passchendaele and elsewhere.

There was a tone of paternal pride in General McNaughton's voice as he told the gathering of the composition of the First Division, that every officer was qualified for the rank he holds by reason of his attendance at Canadian military schools. Staff officers were products of Camberley, Quetta or other post-graduate military colleges.

Patronage Does Not Exist.

"Political or private patronage does not exist," General McNaughton declared. "It has been stamped out by our minister (Hon. Norman Rogers) and merit is the sole criterion for selection and promotion."

He closed expressing hope that after the trials and tribulations of war were past, something would remain of "enduring benefit to the unity of the empire and to close association with our great ally."

Speaking in French, Lieut.-Col. P. Flynn of the Royal 22nd Regiment brought greetings from French Canada. The gathering paid tribute to famous French-Canadian fighters by repeatedly shouting "Vingt Deuxieme!"

Mr. Massey, the Canadian High Commissioner in London, expressed Canada's appreciation for the reception the United Kingdom gave the Canadian troops and for the many things done to make them feel at home.

Capital Turned Into Carnival Town For F. D. R's Birthday

Washington, Jan. 31 —(AP)— Hollywood movie stars turned the United States capital into a carnival town for a few hours last night as 15,000 persons set a gay pace in celebrating President Roosevelt's 58th birthday anniversary.

For five minutes before midnight, the tumult was stilled while Mr. Roosevelt gave his "heartfelt thanks" to millions who contributed dimes and dollars to the cause to which the celebration was dedicated —the fight on infantile paralysis.

His voice linking together for a moment all the estimated 25,000 parties in the country, Mr. Roosevelt suggested that in future years the annual campaign might be extended "to the care of all crippled children."

While he spoke from the White House, Mr. Roosevelt left a dinner party of family and intimate friends to venture into the city streets for a merry-go-round tour of six balls in the district and two in the suburbs.

Cheers welcomed the smiling Mrs. Roosevelt at every stop. Men and women stood on chairs and tables for a glimpse of her and the 19 stage, screen and radio celebrities who also made the rounds.

BRIDES-TO-B- BUY LICENCES

San Francisco, Jan. 31—(AP) — It's leap year.

Cashier Stephen Hughes of the County Clerk's Officer reported:

"Three couples in a row came up to the cashier's window to pay the $2 for the marriage license—and in each case it was the bride-to-be who paid the fee."

KIWANIS DANCE MOST ENJOYABLE

One of the Features of the Evening's Entertainment Was the Playing of Monte Carlo With Prizes to Those Who Accumulated the Most 'Money'

The annual Kiwanis Dance held last evening at the Trianon Ballroom was one of the most enjoyable dances of the season, the committee in charge having introduced many unusual features for the entertainment of the guests. An innovation in the evening's program was the Monte Carlo, where games of that famous casino were played by the visitors with hundreds of thousands of dollars (thoughtfully provided by the hosts). Bud Haines and the Commodores provided a dance program that was fully satisfying.

The committee in charge of the dance included Jack Trudeau, chairman, Jim Barclay, Clifford Baragar, Ab Boynton, Frank Domenico, Carman Guest, Wilf Laporte and Jack McVeigh.

The patrons were:

W. H. Anderson, Dr. R. A. Flynn, W. B. Lattimer, H. R. Muir, I. E. Scott, G. H. Griffin, R. R. Stiver, and the patronesses: Mrs. W. H. Anderson, Mrs. R. A. Flynn, Mrs. G. H. Griffin, Mrs. H. R. Muir, Mrs. J. E. McVeigh, Mrs. I. E. Scott, Mrs. C. A. Guest, Mrs. J. J. Trudeau, Mrs. R. R. Stiver, Mrs. J. A. Barclay, Mrs. W. Laporte, Mrs. G. C. Baragar, Mrs. A. J. Boynton, Mrs. F. Domenico.

Adding interest to the evening was the presentation of a number of handsome prizes The door prize was won by Mrs. Orland Pinkston. The winners of the spot dance were Miss Alice Potter and Mr. Joe Goutrea. Mr. Kiwanis and a Kiwanis Queen were mysterious characters at the dance and for one number prizes were awarded to their partners. The lucky winners were Miss M. Moffat of Tweed whose partner, Mr. Bruce Bottum, proved to be Mr. Kiwanis, and Mr. Taylor who was dancing with Kiwanis Queen, Mrs. J. E. Logan. Prizes were given to those who had accumulated the most Monte Carlo money at the end of the evening's play. These were Mrs. Duffield with four hundred thousand dollars and Mr. Jack Kincaid with nine hundred thousand dollars. A delicious supper was served at midnight after which dancing continued.

CAR DAMAGED BY FIRE

Stirling, (Special)—On Tuesday afternoon the car of Charlie Burkitt of Springbrook was badly damaged by fire, which is believed to have started in the ignition. Before it was brought under control the engine was a mass of flames and the extent of the damage has not yet been ascertained. Mr. Burkitt says the loss was not covered by insurance. He first noticed the flames, when he slowed down to pass a truck in front of the Stirling post office. Several citizens assisted in trying to put the fire out but much damage was done before it was discovered.
